MISCELLANY.

HOW TO CURE A TOPER.

I have a story laid up in my knowledge box, that seems too good to sleep there quietly any longer—so I will tell it, and I rather think it will make some of the folks laugh. I have laughed over it myself, a hundred times.

I was enjoying my glass of flip, one night, at the little old "Black Horse" that used to stand a mile out of S—, (I hadn't joined the great army of teetotallers then) when a neighboring farmer came in, whose moderation, at least in whiskey toddies, was not known unto all men. His name was W—. He was a quiet sort of man when sober; lively and chatty under the effects of a single glass; argumentative and offensively dogmatic after the second toddy, and downright insulting and quarrelsome after getting beyond that number of drinks. We liked him and disliked him on these accounts.

On the occasion referred to, he passed through all these changes, and finally sunk off to sleep by the warm stove. Being in the way, and also in danger of tumbling upon the floor, some of us removed him to an old settee, where he slept soundly, entertaining us with rather an unmusical serenade. There were two or three mischievous fellows about the place, and one of them suggested that it would be capital fun to black W—'s face, and "make a dorkie of him." No sooner said than done. Some lamp-black and oil were mixed together in an old tin cup, and a coat of this paint laid over the face of W—, who, all unconscious of what had been done, slept on as soundly and snored as loudly as ever.

Full two hours passed away before he awoke. Staggering up to the bar, he called for another glass of whiskey toddy, while he made the old bar-room ring again with our peals of laughter.

"What are you all laughing at?" he said, as he became aware that he was the subject of merriment, turning his black face around upon the company.

"Give us Zip Coon, old fellow!" called out one of the 'b'hoys' who had helped him to his beautiful mask.

"No—no—Lucy Long! Give us Lucy Long!" cried another.

"Can't you dance Jim Crow?" Try it. I'll sing the 'wheel about and turn about, and do just so.' Now begin."

And the last speaker commenced singing Jim Crow.

W— neither understood nor relished all this. But the more angry and mystified he became, the louder laughed the company, and the freer became their jests. At last, in a passion, he swore at us lustily, and leaving the bar-room, in high dudgeon, took his horse from the stable and rode off.

It was past eleven o'clock. The night was cold, and a ride of two miles made W— sober enough to understand that he had been rather drunk, and was still a good deal "in for it," and that it wouldn't exactly do for his wife to see him just as he was. So he rode a mile past his house, and then back again, at a slow trot, concluding that by this time the good woman was fast asleep. And so he was. He entered the house, crept silently up stairs, and got quietly into bed, without his better half being the wiser therefor.

On the next morning, Mrs. W. awoke first. But what was her surprise and horror, upon rising up, to see, instead of her lawful husband, what she thought a strapping negro, as black as charcoal, lying at her side. Her first impulse was to scream; but her presence of mind, in this trying position, enabled her to keep silence. But you may be sure that she didn't remain long in such close contact with Sir Darkey. Not she! For slipping out of bed quickly, but noiselessly, she glided from the room, and was soon down stairs in the kitchen, where a stout, two-fisted Irish girl was at work preparing breakfast.

"Oh, dear, Kitty!" she exclaimed, panting for breath, and looking as pale as a ghost, "have you seen anything of Mr. W— this morning?"

"Oh! no, and dear ma'am. But what ails ye? Y'r as white as a sheet."

"Oh, mercy! Kitty. You wouldn't believe it, but there's a monstrous negro in my room."

"Gracious me, Mrs. W., a nager?"

"Yes, indeed, Kitty," returned Mrs. W— trembling in every limb. "And worse and worse, he's in my bed! I just woke, and thought it was Mr. W. by my side. But when I looked over, I saw, instead of his face, one as black as the stove. Mercy on me! I was frightened almost to death."

"Is he asleep?" asked Kitty.

"Yes, sound asleep and snoring. Oh, dear! What shall be done? Where in the world is Mr. W.? I'm afraid this negro has murdered him."

And Kitty, thinking of no danger to herself, nor making any calculation of consequences, seized a stout hickory clothes pole that stood in one corner of the kitchen, and went up stairs like a whirlwind, banging the pole against doors, balusters or whatever came in its way. The noise she made aroused W— from his sleep, and he raised up in bed just as Kitty entered the room.

"Oh, you murderin thafe of a villain!" shouted Kitty, as she caught sight of his black face, pitching into him with her pole, and sweeping off his night-cap, at the imminent risk of taking his head with it.

"Hallo!" he cried, not at all liking this strange proceeding, "are you mad?"

"Mad is it, ye thafe," retorted Kitty, who did not recognize the voice, and taking a surer aim this time with her pole, brought him a tremendous blow along side of the head, which knocked him senseless.

Mrs. W., who was at the bottom of the stairs, heard her husband's exclamation, and knowing his voice, came rushing up, and entered the room in time to see Kitty's formidable weapon come with terrible force against his head. Before the blow could be repeated, for Kitty ejaculated her "Murderin thafe of a villain!" had lifted the pole again, Mrs. W. threw her arms around her, and cried, "Don't, don't, Kitty, for mercy's sake! It's Mr. W., and you've killed him!"

"Mr. W. indeed?" retorted Kitty, indignantly, struggling to free herself. "Is Mr. W. a thafe of a nager, ma'am?"

But even Kitty's eyes, as soon as they took the pains to look more closely, saw that it was indeed all as the mistress had said. W— had fallen over on his face, and his head and white neck were not to be mistaken.

The pole dropped from Kitty's hands, and with the exclamation, "Och murder!" she turned and shot from the room with as good a will as she had entered it.

The blow which W— had received was a severe one, breaking through the flesh, and bruising and lacerating his ear badly. He recovered very soon, however, and as he rose up, caught sight of himself, in a looking-glass that hung opposite. We may be sure that it took all parties in this exciting and almost tragical affair, sometime to understand exactly what was the matter. W—'s recollection of the loud merriment that had driven him from the "Black Horse" on the previous night, when it revived, as it did pretty soon, explained all to him, and set him to swearing in a most unchristian manner.

Poor Kitty was so frightened at what she had done that she gathered up her 'duds' and fled instantly, and was never again seen in that neighborhood.

As for W—, he was cured of his nocturnal visits to the "Black Horse," and love of whiskey toddy. Some months afterwards he espoused the temperance cause, and I've heard him tell the tale himself, many a time, and laugh heartily at the figure he must have cut when Kitty commenced beating him for a "thafe of a nager."

ENGLISH AND AMERICAN GIRLS. The English girl spends more than one half of her waking hours in physical amusements which tend to invigorate and ripen the bodily powers. She rides, walks, drives, rows upon the water, runs, dances, plays, sings, jumps the rope, throws the ball, hurls the quoit, draws the bow, keeps up the shuttlecock, and all this without having it forever pressed on her mind that she is thereby wasting her time. She does this every day, until it becomes a habit which she will follow up through life. Her frame, as a necessary consequence, is larger, her muscular system better developed, her nervous system in better subordination, her strength more enduring, and the whole tone of her mind healthier. She may not know as much at the age of seventeen as does the American girl; as a general thing, she does not; but the growth of her intellect has been stimulated by no hot-house culture, and though maturity comes later, it will last proportionably longer. Eight hours each day of mental application, for girls between ten and nineteen years, or ten hours each day, as is sometimes required at school, with two hours at meals, one for religious duties, the remainder for physical exercises, are enough to break down the strongest constitutions.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

The 17th of March is celebrated in modern history as the anniversary of the death of the Patron Saint of Ireland, and is a day religiously observed by all good Irishmen. This apostle of Ireland, according to tradition, was born towards the end of the 4th century, in Killpatrick, (Scotland) between Duinbarton and Glasgow. At the age of sixteen he was carried off with his father's vassals and sold as a slave to some herdsmen on the mountains of Ireland. A few years afterwards he escaped, travelled in Gaul and Italy, and received from Pope Celestine the apostolic mission to convert the Irish. Wales also claims the honor of having been the country of his birth. One of her historians affirming that Aberllychur, in Pembrokeshire, South Wales, was the place of his nativity, and that he was called Padrigson of Maennyn, of the Laird of Glasgow.

The uncertainty as to the place of his birth is alluded to in the following stanza, which commences a festal song always sung on this anniversary in Dublin, where the scene is one of unequalled mirth, all being inspired by the saint's beneficence. At day break, flags fly on all the steeples, and the bells ring out with peals till midnight—the rich bestow their beneficence upon the poor and the poor their blessings upon the rich and upon each other, and the green, immortal Shamrock, is in every hat, the stanza is as follows:

"St. Patrick, the holy and reverend man,
His beard, down his bosom like Aaron's ran;
Some from Scotland, from Wales, will deduce that he came,
But I care not from whom, now he's risen to fame;
The pride of the world, and his enemies scorn,
I will drink to St. Patrick to-day in the morn'g."

The Shamrock, or trefoil, was used by the Druids to cure disease. When St. Patrick returned with his commission from the Pope, and landed near Wickham, about the year 433, the pagans were about to stone him; but requesting that he might be heard, he made use of the trefoil to illustrate a Trinity in Unity, and this simple means led to the conversion of the whole country. Hence it is that this day, the anniversary of this Saint's death, is commemorated as a high festival in the Catholic Church, and especially in Ireland, with every demonstration of affection.

A BEAUTIFUL ALLEGORY.

When God created man he commanded his angels to visit him on earth, and guide him in his way, so that he might foretaste the bliss of the life to come. But lustful man sought after sensual joys in preference to those of heaven, and growing greedy of worldly fruits, began to quarrel with his brethren for the possession of them; and the guardian angels wept among themselves. But when the strong oppressed the weak, and took from them by force their soil, justice rose up sorrowing, and leaving earth flew back to heaven. And when the weak overcame the strong with falsehood and deceit, and got from them by cunning what they feared to take by force, truth rose up sorrowing, and leaving earth flew back to heaven. And when the injured went forth to slay their injurers, and crimsoned the plain with their brother's blood, peace rose up sorrowing, and leaving earth flew back to heaven. Thus each bad act scared some good angel from the world, until forgiveness—the most beautiful of all—alone remained behind.

And when she heard anger and revenge whisper dark deeds in man's ears, and council them to repeat the wrong that has been done to them, she rose up sorrowing and said, "I will not leave the earth. While any sister angels were here, I might have rested in my father's bosom, for man needed me not. But now that they have fled, I will seek to make him listen to my voice, telling him that, as he cherishes forgiveness there, so will forgiveness cherish him hereafter." So the loveliest child of heaven remained on earth; and peace and love, repenting flew back and followed her train.

THIN SHOES. Perhaps nothing has a greater tendency to produce consumption and death, than the wearing of thin shoes in the wet and sloshy season of the year. Because small feet are fashionable, many a foolish female has caused her death by wearing wafer shoes. It is abominable. We would rather see a friend of ours with feet as large as a salt fish, with a pair of stout and healthy lungs, than with feet as small as a baby's, and lungs as attenuated as a spider's web. We shall never have a race of healthy females, so long as they pay so little regard to health and sacrifice so much to fashion. We know not why a small foot should be more fashionable than a large one. Our way of thinking it is not. Nature can seldom be improved. We verily believe that tight shoes to compress the feet are an invention of the evil one to fill the caves of Pandemonium with young women.

We trust that all young ladies will take this subject into serious consideration, and though they should be ridiculed and laughed at, to persist in wearing stout and strong shoes, even though they be made of cow hide. We are confident we should hear of fewer deaths from consumption, and read fewer lies upon the tombstones.

A NEW RAT TRAP. Take a tub or kettle, fill it to within six inches of the top with water, cover the surface with chaff or bran, and place it at night where the rats resort. By this method thirty-six rats have been taken in one night.

A DROLL DEFINITION OF A YANKEE. A real genuine Yankee is full of animation, checked by moderation, guided by determination, and supported by education. He has veneration corrected by toleration, with a love of self-approbation and emulation; and when reduced to a state of aggravation can assume the most profound dissimulation for the purpose of retaliation, always combined, if possible, with speculation. A real live Yankee, just caught, will be found not deficient in the following qualities: He is self-denying, self-relying, always trying, and into everything trying. He is a lover of piety, propriety, notoriety, and the temperance society. He is a dragging, gagging, bragging, striving, thriving, swapping, justling, bustling, wrestling, musical, quizzical, astronomical, poetical, philosophical and comical sort of a character, whose manifest destiny is to spread civilization to the remotest corners of the earth, with an eye always on the look out for the main chance.

TO CUT GLASS WITH A PIECE OF IRON. Draw with a pencil on paper any pattern to which you would have the glass conform; place the pattern under the glass, holding both together in the left hand, (for the glass must not rest on any plain surface,) then take a common spike or similar piece of iron, heat the point of it to a redness, and apply it to the edge of the glass draw the iron slowly forward, and the edge of the glass will immediately crack; continue moving the iron slowly over the glass and, tracing the pattern, and the chink in the glass will follow at the distance of about half an inch, in every direction according to the motion of the iron. It may sometimes be found requisite, however, especially in forming corners, to apply a wet finger to the opposite side of the glass. Tumblers and other glasses may be cut or divided very fancifully by similar means. The iron must be reheated as often as the crevice in the glass ceases to follow.—Scientific American.

SWEET ARE THE USES OF TEARS. A German chemist has discovered this year that there is sugar in tears. We have been told by poets that there is "sweetness in all things," but we little thought that it lurked in the corner of every squint. We always thought that crying was a sign rather of sour disposition, but according to this new discovery, it would seem that the more a lady cries the more her temper is sweetened by it. By the bye, hysterics must be invaluable to a cook on board-wages, who has to find her own sugar. What a lump of sweetness too, Niobe must have been—for she was all tears! To a grocer of the present day, she would have been invaluable, for she would have supplied him all the year round with the very best moist.

A TRUE GENTLEMAN. No well bred person will be insolent to his inferiors. On the other hand, he will observe a scrupulous tenderness of manner towards them—a care of word and action that shall lighten their burden as much as possible. This refinement of heart is the most prominent characteristic of a high and noble spirit. It is the only mark of a lady or gentleman that is wholly unequivocal. When we see a person very choice of his words, and very dainty at the table, yet capable of insulting the unfortunate, of ridiculing distress, we always think of the ass in the lion's skin.

READING. Three very excellent things, and of great utility, are reading, conversation, and reflection. By reading, we treat with the dead; by conversation, with the living, and by reflection, with ourselves. Reading enriches the memory, conversation polishes the mind, and reflection forms the judgment. But of these noble employments of the soul, were we to say which we think the most important, we must confess that reading seems to be the groundwork of the other two; since without reading, contemplation is fruitless, and conversation dull and insipid.

TRAVELLER'S DOOR FASTENER. Among the inventions which have lately been patented is one termed a traveller's door fastener, which is composed of two small metal plates formed into a wedge by the insertion of a piece of wood between them, while the under plate is fitted with two small spikes that catch the floor. The sharp end of the fastener is thrust under the door, and is more firmly fixed at every attempt to enter the room, while a cord carried to the bedside enables a person lying in bed to withdraw the wedge, and thus admit a visitor.

THINGS LOST FOREVER. Lost wealth may be restored by industry, the wreck of health regained by temperance, forgotten knowledge restored by study, alienated friendship smoothed into forgetfulness, even forfeited reputation won by penitence and virtue. But who ever again looked upon his vanished hours, recalled his slighted years, stamped them with wisdom, or effaced from the record of eternity, the fearful blot of wasted time?

SMOKING. "Methinks," said Miss Smix, "I should not much fancy to marry a man who smoked cigars. Still, I look with leniency upon single men who indulge thus; because, poor fellows, they think that's comfort. If I were in a marrying mood (and I hope I never shall be) I should ask my admirer, would he smoke against my wishes after marriage? Of course he would say, 'I will not!' If I were younger than I am now, I expect I would annex—with the Will-not Proviso!"

CHEMICAL HISTORY OF ALCOHOL.

What is the etymology of the word Alcohol? This word has been variously written—alcohol, alchahol, alchahol, alchool, alcol, alkol. The prefix al is the Arabic equivalent to the English definite article the; thus al-koran denotes the Koran. The word kohol signifies antimony, which was made into a fine powder, with which the Eastern women penciled the margin of their eyebrows; whence, say some, alcohol came to be applied to any very subtle powder, and to other things reduced to a great degree of fineness or purity, especially spirit of wine.

Dr. E. Johnson, the author of Noces Philosophice, and a most able philologist, has more recently offered a curious conjecture on the etymology of alcohol—one that has the merit of uniting both sense and sound, and which singularly coincides with the name suggested to Shakespeare, by a contemplation of its effects:—"O thou invisible spirit of wine, if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee Devil!"

It was an Eastern superstition that the earth was invested with evil spirits called ghouls—this word was spelled several different ways, as goul, ghoul, ghole. They were supposed to frequent burying grounds, and to prey upon dead bodies. They were also supposed to assume different shapes, and sometimes to enter the body, and to possess it, as it were, with a devil. When any thing fearful was heard or seen, it was a common expression to exclaim, "The ghoul! the ghoul!" And when the Arabian chemists first discovered alcohol, and observed the effects (intoxication) which it produced on the first person who took it, it seems very natural that they should suppose him to be possessed of an evil spirit, and that alcohol was in fact only one of the forms which the ghoul had assumed in order to enter and torture the human body. And frightened at what they beheld it is very natural that they should exclaim al-ghole!—and it seems very probable that a fluid capable of producing such extraordinary effect should continue for some time to be supposed to be an evil spirit in disguise, as it were; and when this notion was laid aside, the great evil which this liquid devil was observed to work amongst men would still be likely to cause it to retain its name of Al-Ghole or the evil spirit. Our manner of spelling it is no objection to this etymology; for alghole might easily be corrupted alcohol—thus, alghole, alcohol, alcohol. In this word, as in almost every other, the name defines the nature of the thing.

In a work entitled Letters Written by a Turkish Spy, published in London, 1633, we find a curious confirmation of the grounds of this etymology.

"'Tis a groundless superstition to refuse the Gift of Divine Liberality, and deny ourselves the use of that plant which was made to cheer the hearts of mortals. Nay, our Holy Traditions themselves, and all our Doctors, tacitly own, that the Vine is allowable, and that it was saved among the rest of the vegetables by Noah in the Ark. And that Holy Prophet cursed the Devil for stealing it away. Perhaps the story will not be unpleasant to thee."

When God commanded Noah to descend out of the Ark in peace, they built them houses and began to exercise Husbandry. They sowed corn and the seed of other vegetables. They planted also all sorts of trees, but when they came to look for the vine, it could not be found.

"Then it was told Noah by the Angel, that the devil had stolen it away, as having some right to it. Wherefore, Noah cited the devil to appear before the Angel, in the name of God, to answer this theft. The Angel gave judgment that the vine should be divided between 'em into three parts, whereof the devil should have two, and Noah one, to which both parties consented. Whereby it is evident that man has some share in the juice of the grape. For this was the decision of Gabriel: that when the third of the liquor of this fruit should be evaporated away in boiling over the fire, the remainder should be lawful for Noah and his posterity to drink. And thou knowest we Mussulmans generally obey this law in preparing our wine."

"Let the devil, therefore, in the name of God, have his share in the tempting fruit, and then there can be no injustice in enjoying our own part. For when that which inebriates is separated (or prevented by fire from the rest, this liquor becomes pure, holy and blessed. 'This is the sentence of the ancients, the immediate auditors of the messenger of God, as is to be seen in the manuscripts they left behind them, which, though rare and difficult to be met with, yet such as diligently seek wisdom shall not lose their labor. Abu Beene El'n Mahummet has taken great pains to collect the memoirs of antiquity. He was a learned doctor among my countrymen, of the house of Sulphur. (May he rest under the umbrellas of Paradise.) From him I had this revelation."

In the Italian treatise on the art of making wine, by Adam Fabroni, published in the last century, under the sanction of the Royal Academy of Florence, the same fable is quoted from Mutardi-ben Gaoif, an Arab author. It is evident from this Saracenic fable that they did, as Dr. E. Johnson conjectures, actually consider alcohol an evil spirit lurking in the vine, and belonging of right to the father of evil, and that they adopted boiling as a means of exercising the demon—in their language Al-Ghole or Alcohol.

A similar notion is embodied in a Turkish proverb: "There lurks a devil in every berry of the vine," and in the line of an English poem:

"The berries of the grape with furies swell."
The ascription of evil, however, the fruit of the vines, is erroneous. The evil spirit is only the result of the fermentation of that fruit which then becomes in truth mater malorum, the mother of evil. Alcohol, says Dr. E. Turner, is the intoxicating ingredient of all spirituous and vinous liquors. It does not exist ready made in plants, but is a product of the vinous fermentation.

Nature, says Count Chaptal, never forms spirituous liquors; she sets the grape upon the branch, but it is art which converts the juice into (alcoholic) wine.

ASPARAGUS. The London Gardner's Chronicle mentions the following method of growing asparagus. Perhaps it does not partake of the character of the marvellous, and it may be very easily tried. "Take a quart wine bottle, invert it over an asparagus root, just from the ground, and secure it to its place by two sticks. The asparagus will grow up into the centre of the bottle, and, being stimulated by the unusual heat and moisture, will speedily fill it. As soon as this has taken place, the bottle must be broken, when the asparagus will be found to have formed a thick head of tender, delicate sheets, all eatable, and as compact as cauliflower."

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, APRIL 1, 1848.

John A. Green, Editor.

Truth. Milton says, 'Let Truth and Error encounter.' It seems, however, to be the practice to regard Truth as a delicate and sickly child, who must be kept in the house, lest he should be demolished by the first blast of wind that he encounters in the open air.

Lovers' Vows. 'Don't put too much confidence in a lover's vows and sighs,' said Mrs. Partington to her niece, 'let him tell you that you have lips like a tartan, and an eye like an asterisk, but such things often come from a tender head than a tender heart.'

MEETING OF GRANITE DEALERS.

At a meeting of the principal Quarrymen and dealers in Granite, of the towns of Quincy and Milton, held at Quincy, March 28th, 1848, Mr. Octavius T. Rogers was called to the chair, and Geo. Pennington was appointed Secretary. The following Preamble and Resolutions were unanimously adopted:—

Whereas, The conveniences for the transportation of Granite from the Quarries of Quincy and Milton to Boston, are very limited and the expense so great as to exclude from the market nearly three-fourths of the Granite quarried, which would be useful in building, and whereas the best facilities that can be given by the Old Colony Railroad Corporation, under present circumstances, are very inadequate, and whereas we consider that better accommodations for freight at the Old Colony Depot would be a public benefit, especially to those who have an interest in building, therefore,

Resolved, first, That it is highly important to the interests of the towns of Quincy and Milton that a communication by railroad should be had, connecting the Quarries in these towns with Boston, thereby placing them equal with other towns which now have a communication by water or railroad much superior to that of Quincy or Milton.

Resolved, second, That such communication would be productive not merely of private advantage, but highly important to the public, as it will very much reduce the price of rough stone, such as Cellar Stone, Foundation Stones, Sea walls, Ballast, etc., (such stone being now of little use to any one, on account of the present high cost of transportation), provided that suitable Depot and Wharf room can be had for depositing the same in Boston ready to deliver when it is wanted.

Resolved, third, That whereas the Depot and Wharf accommodations, which the Old Colony Railroad Company are now able to offer, are entirely too limited and unsuitable for the purpose wanted; we, therefore, agree to use all fair and honorable means in our power to procure the passage through the Legislature of the act, prayed for in the Petition of John M. Forbes and others now before said body.

Resolved, fourth, That the Senators and Representatives of Northampton County be requested to advocate and support this measure in the Legislature during its present session.

Resolved, fifth, That in order that the Legislative Committee may have an opportunity duly to appreciate the importance to the public of granting suitable accommodations for the disposal of Granite, a Committee of five be appointed, respectively to invite them to visit the Granite Quarries and establishments in Quincy, where from actual observation they may be able better to form just views of the wants and accommodations required.

Resolved, sixth, That Messrs. Lysander Richards, Octavius T. Rogers, and Henry Barker be a Committee to invite the Legislative Committee to visit Quincy; also, to take any other honorable means they may think will best promote the objects of this meeting.

Resolved, seventh, That the proceedings of this meeting be published in the Quincy Patriot and Roxbury Gazette.

For the purposes of the act, the Company are "authorized to increase their capital stock in the sum of one hundred thousand dollars."

A petition has been presented for the revision of the license laws, signed by Seth Adams, of Quincy, and one hundred and two others.

The new license bill, amended in some unimportant particulars, has been reported back to the House. Some of the penalties are modified, but the sale of intoxicating drinks, to be used as a beverage, is absolutely prohibited. The "sacramental" clause is retained.

Hon. George Tyler Bigelow has sent in his resignation as a Senator, he having been appointed a Judge of the Court of Common Pleas.

The bill authorizing the New Bedford and Taunton and Fall River Railroads to establish a connection in Taunton has been passed to be enacted.

PRINTERS AND PRESSMEN OF PARIS. The working-composers and pressmen of Paris are a very formidable body, amounting to upwards of sixteen thousand men. They are almost all communists and socialists, and were the first movers and the principal contributors to the revolution of July.

THE EUROPEAN. The April number of this paper has been issued. It contains a List of Patents issued in February; also, a list of those issued in 1843, with a variety of Miscellaneous and Scientific matters. Terms, one dollar per year; Kingsley & Pirson, No. 5, Wall Street, New York, publishers.

BOSTON TIMES. This paper has appeared in an entire new type, and printed on one of Hoe's new presses, which is said to give the incredible number of twelve thousand impressions in an hour. The appearance of the paper is highly creditable to the enterprise of Messrs Roberts & Garfield, the proprietors.

CONGRESS. The proceedings of the National Legislature for the past week are unimportant. The loan bill has passed the Senate by a vote of 33 to 2. Considerable debate has been had in the House on a bill to refund the moneys advanced to volunteers.

OLD COLONY RAILROAD. On and after Monday next three trains will run between Boston and Plymouth each way. See advertisement.

MEXICO. Hostilities have been generally suspended on each side. Maj. Gen. Butler has assumed the general command of the United States forces, Maj. Gen. Scott having retired after receiving orders from superior authority. Only a faint hope is entertained that the Mexican nation will agree to the treaty that has passed the United States Senate. Some skirmishes have taken place with guerrilla bands, but the Americans always beat and severely punished their opponents.

APPOINTMENT. George H. French, of this town, has been appointed and duly qualified as one of the Deputy Sheriffs for Norfolk County. We are of the opinion that the Sheriff has made a judicious selection.

MONEY WANTED. We have not, by newspaper, asked our debtors to pay for some time. They cannot find fault with our patience. Within ten days we want money—our just dues—and friends, who owe us, should pay their honest demands at this gentle admonition. The patience of a friend should be readily answered by all indebted with the one thing needful—"MONEY."

The Jackson Committee at Washington, have adopted a plan for a bronze equestrian statue of General Jackson, dressed in American uniform. It is to be made of the cannon captured by Gen. Jackson at Fort Hamilton.

A salute of one hundred guns was fired in New York in honor of the recent glorious Revolution in France.

A young man named McNulty, a clerk in the employ of Charles Vose, of New York, has decamped with 40,000.

The Boston Whig pronounces as untrue the rumor that the works of John Quincy Adams are to be given to the press.

There will be a meeting of the American Anti-Slavery Society held in Faneuil Hall, Boston, next Friday evening, in commemoration of the abolition of slavery in France and in reference to the revolution. Friends from the neighboring towns are urged to attend.

SENTENCED. Dr. Coolidge was sentenced to be hanged, after one year's imprisonment, as required by a law of Maine. When the chief justice asked him if he had any thing to say, he replied—"I can only say that sentence will be passed against an innocent man. My counsel have most faithfully performed their duty. Of the jury I do not complain. They have been overwhelmed by false testimony. But, thank heaven, there is a higher court where false testimony will not be admitted. That tribunal I am to stand before. Before that we are all to stand. I wait patiently till that time comes. I choose my lot—I choose my situation much rather than that of another who perhaps may be within the sound of my voice. It is perhaps unnecessary for me here to reveal what I know. But I will leave it in writing upon paper when I depart. I therefore bid you all, friends and enemies, an affectionate farewell, and am ready to receive my sentence." He was taken to the State Prison at Thomaston on Tuesday.

DOGS. The following has been quoted as an extract from a recent sermon of an eloquent preacher in the vicinity of Boston:

"Dogs, in large towns and cities, are a perpetual disturbance by night and an intolerable nuisance by day; a mark of inhospitality at a man's door. They become, by their numbers, masters of men and as powerful as they are in Constantinople, where the arbitrary Sultan cannot put them down."

LEGISLATIVE. The bill to authorize the Old Colony Railroad Corporation to widen their road, and construct branches in Quincy and Dorchester, has passed to be enacted.

By the provision of the act, the Corporation are authorized to take and hold land not exceeding twenty feet in width on either side of their railroad; to widen all bridges and lengthen draws; alter, widen and raise bridges over or under streets, and may alter streets, turnpikes or ways, so far as necessary. The branch in this town commences "at some point in the main line in Quincy, a little south of the turnpike on the south-easterly side of Neponset River, and thence running through or near a certain gravel-hill, called Mount Hope, to the Granite Railway, a distance of about one and a third miles." For the purposes of the act, the Company are "authorized to increase their capital stock in the sum of one hundred thousand dollars."

Worcester's
Universal and Critical Dictionary of the English Language.

By JOSEPH E. WORCESTER, LL. D.
One volume, 8vo. sheep, 1032 pages—Price $3.50

THE Publishers respectfully invite attention to the following eminent testimony to the excellence of this Standard Dictionary.

The execution of this Dictionary fully answers to its title.

The Vocabulary is probably more comprehensive than that of any preceding English Dictionary united in a single volume.

Constant reference is made to authorities, with respect to words newly introduced, and care is taken to note such as are technical, foreign, obsolete, provincial, or vulgar.

The definitions are clear and exact, and those pertaining to technical and scientific terms are especially valuable to the general reader.

The author has evidently bestowed great labor on the work, and the result is a Dictionary which is easily understood, and founded on a more complete analysis of the vowel sounds than we have elsewhere met with, together with his plan of exhibiting all the best English authorities in relation to words differently pronounced by different orthography, gives to this work important advantages as a Pronouncing Dictionary.

In orthography he has made no arbitrary changes, but where usage is various and fluctuating, he has aimed to be constant, and to reduce to the same rules words of similar formation.

The insertion of Grammatical forms and inflections of words to a much greater extent than they are given in other English Dictionaries, and the short critical notes on the orthography, the pronunciation, the grammatical form and construction, and the peculiar, technical, local, and American uses of words interspersed through the volume, give to this work much additional value.

The copious Vocabulary of Modern Geographical Names, with their pronunciation, and a greatly enlarged and improved edition of Walker's Key to the pronunciation of Classical and Scripture Proper Names, are important appendages to the Dictionary.

A year has passed since this Dictionary was published; and its already extensive use, both among cultivated English readers, and men of wide learning, affords good testimony of its merits. We confidently believe that it is destined to exert an important and careful view of the present state of our language.

For the Quincy Patriot.

WILT.

A drunkard lay upon the ground,
A noble wreck abandoned there,
And not a friendly hand was found
To screen him in his deep despair.

A maiden pass'd, of peerless grace,
And while her bosom heav'd a sigh,
She with her kerchief veil'd her face,
Beside a pear-drop from her eye.

Another eye the act had seen,
And Wirt, to sense restored, was told;
Her name was on the kerchief screen,—
A name that should be blaz'd in gold.

That name had sunk into his heart,
Expelling all that had enslav'd;
He vow'd to meet the manly part,
Reform'd, and noble Wirt was sav'd.

Oh, what a glorious prize was here,
To woo and win that peerless maid;
Two hearts, cemented with a tear,
Were on love's holy altar laid.

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

FROM A WIFE TO HER HUSBAND.

Why heaves that sigh my only love?
Is then the scene so and before thee,
That nothing can the thoughts remove,
That spread their darkening influence o'er thee?

Believe me thou art still as dear
As when thou wast in youth and riches;
Oh! wipe away that starting tear,
It is—thy wars beseech thee.

Oh! think upon those early days,
When thou to strains I sang would listen,
When thy fond look was my best prize,
And with sweet tears thine eyes would glisten.

Believe me love, 'tis all the same,
The fruit is there, tho' fall'n the blossom;
Time tempests, but not cools the flame
That burns within the faithful bosom.

There is a thought that may still bruise,
In joy or grief, we never parted;
Oh! could I but see thee smile,
I should not be quite broken hearted.

Oh! cease to heave the struggling sigh!
Oh! dash away that tear, my dearest!
Believe me, happier days are nigh;
When night is darkest, dawn is nearest.

Look on our infant's artless smile,
That strives to take away thy sorrow,
Can't thou not from that babe's sweet smile,
One ray of joy to cheer thee borrow?

There is a something in my breast
That says we are not quite forsaken,
That says we once more shall be blest,
And joy's soft tone again shall waken.

Perchance the parting beam of life
Shall shed a peaceful sunshine o'er us;
Then hand in hand we'll quit the strife,
With a bright thornless path before us.

THE DYING CHILD.

Mother, I'm tired, and I would fain be sleeping;
Let me repose upon thy bosom seek;
But promise me that thou wilt leave off weeping,
Because thy tears fall hot upon my cheek.

Here it is cold: the tempest raves madly;
But in my dreams all is so wondrous bright;
I see the angel children smiling gladly,
When from my weary eyes I shut out light.

Mother, one stands beside me now: and, listen:
Dost thou not hear the music's sweet accord?
See now his white wings beautifully glisten:
Surely those wings were given him by our Lord!

Green, gold, and red are floating all around me;
They are the flowers the angel scattereth;
Shall I have also wings: whilst life has bound me?
Or, mother, are they given alone in death?

Why dost thou clasp me as if I were going?
Why dost thou press thy cheek thus unto mine?
Thy cheek is hot, and yet thy tears are flowing;
I will dear mother, will be always thine!

Do not thus sigh—it will mar my repose;
And, if thou weep, then I must weep with thee!
Oh, I am tired—my weary eyes are closing;
—Look, mother look! the angel kneels to me!

ANECDOTES.

A gentleman riding in New Hampshire, was attracted by loud cries, and on looking discovered a load of hay overturned and a long, lank, strapping fellow, screaming and shouting like mad. "Here my son," said the man, "stop crying now, that's a good boy. I will help you on again with the hay!" "I don't care a d—n for the hay, but Dad 's under it!"

A girl was asked, not long since, to unite herself in the elixir, to a brisk chap, who named May in his proposals. The lady tenderly hinted that May was an unlucky month for marrying. "Well, make it June then," honestly replied the swain, anxious to accommodate. The damsel paused a moment, hesitated, cast down her eyes, and with a blush, said—"Wouldn't April do as well?"

"Wife! wife! our cow's dead—choked with a turnip!" "I told you so! I always knew she'd choke herself with them turnips." "But it was a pumpkin—a damned big one." "Well, it's all the same. I know'd all along how it would be. Nobody but a ninny, like you, would feed a cow on pumpkins that wasn't chopt." The pumpkins were chopt. And 'twasn't the pumpkins neither, what choked her. 'Twas the straw—the end on't is sticking out of her mouth now." "Ugh! Ugh! There goes my bread tray. No longer ago than yesterday, I told you the cow'd swallow that tray!"

An Irish cook, hearing the lady of the house at dinner ask her husband to bring Dombey and Son with him when he came to tea, laid two extra plates on the upper table for the supposed visitors.

THE excellent testimony attached to the Native Preparations by the best Dentists in this country and Europe.

we insure, according to circumstances; and all Dental Plate Work executed at our rooms is warranted to be equal to any that can be produced, and to give perfect satisfaction.

We are administering the CHLORFORM every day with success, and extracting Teeth by the dozen, without pain, and have never known it to affect the patient unfavorably, and yet we charge no more than when we do not give it.

The public will not forget that to us is due the credit of the great and important improvement recently made in the method of inserting Artificial Teeth, both on Gold Plate and Pivots, and also preserving discayed Teeth and stumps in a healthy condition.

Instruction given in relation to the New Method invented by us, and whole sets inserted in the most difficult mouths, for country or travelling Dentists, on reasonable terms. First the patient is made comfortable, and our plan is far more durable and permanent than upon gold plate, secured in the common way, and will never want resetting. When necessary to mount them on a plate of gold by our method, we extract no sound stumps, preserve the form of the mouth, and secure them so firmly that the patient can eat with them as well as if they were natural teeth; and they will last a whole life-time, and look perfectly natural.

To all who require the services of a Dentist, and particularly such as have been unsatisfactorily served, we would make our best bow, and they do not wait for an introduction, but call and see us at

MISCELLANY.

THE RUNAWAY MATCH.

Mr. Ebenezer Doolittle was the bominablest man after rich goals that ever was. He hadn't been keeping school in Pineville six months, before he had found out every gal in the settlement whose father had twenty niggers, and had all of 'em courted within a day's ride. He was rather old to be popular with the gals, and somehow they didn't like his ways, and the way they did bluff him off was enough to discourage anybody but a Yankee schoolmaster what wanted to get married, and hadn't many years of grace left. But it didn't seem to make no difference to him. He undertook 'em by the job. He was bound to have a rich wife out of some of 'em, and if he failed in one case, it only made him more persevering in the next. His motto was—'never say die!'

Betty Darling, as they used to call her—old Mr. Darling's daughter, what used to live out on the Run—was about the torn downstet mischief of a gal in all Georgia. Betty was rich and handsome and smart, and had more admirers than she could shake a stick at, but she was such a torment little coquet that the boys was all afraid to court her in right down earnest. When Mr. Doolittle found her out he went rite at her like a house-a-fire. She was jest the gal for him, and he was terminted to have her at the risk of his life.

Well, he laid reige to old Mr. Darling's house day and night, and when he couldn't leave his school to go and see her, he rit letters to her that was enuff to throw any other gal but Betty Darling into a fit of highstricks to read 'em. Jest as everybody expected, after encouraging him jest enough to make the feller believe he had the thing ded, she kicked him flat. But shaw! he was perfectly used to that, and he was too much of a philosopher to be discouraged by sich a rebuff, when the game was worth pursuin.

He didn't lose a minnit's time, but jes brushed up and went rite at her again. Everybody was surprised to see him gwine back to old Mr. Darling's, after the way he had been treated by Betty; but they was a good deal more surprised, and the boys was terribly alarmed in about a month, at the headway he seemed to be makin in his suit. All at once, Miss Betty's conduct seemed to change towards him, and though her father and mother was terribly opposed to the match, anybody could see that she was beginning to like the schoolmaster very well.

Things went on in this way for a while, till bimeby old Mr. Darling begun to git so uneasy about it, that he told Mr. Doolittle one day, that he musn't come to his house no more; and that if he ketch him sendin any more love letters and sich verses to his daughter by his nigger gals, he'd make one of his boys give him a alfred whackin.

But Mr. Doolittle didn't care for that neither. He could see Miss Betty when she came a shoppin in stores in town, and there was more'n one way to git a letter to her. What did he care for that old Darling? His daughter was hed and hart in love with him, and was jest the gal to run away with him too, if she was opposed by her parents. And as for the property, he was certain to that when once he married the gal.

On Saturday, when there was no school, Mr. Doolittle went to old Square Rogers, and told him he must be ready to marry a couple that night, at exactly ten o'clock.

'Mum,' ses he, 'you musn't say a word to nobody, Squire. The license is all ready, and the party was to be very private.'

Squire Rogers was one of the most accomodatin old fellers in the world on sich occasions. Mrs. Rogers was a monstrous cranky cross old lady, and nothing done the old Squire so much as to marry other people, it didn't make no odds who they was. Besides, Mr. Doolittle was a great scholar, in his opinion, and belonged to his church.

Mr. Doolittle had arranged the whole business in first rate order. Miss Betty was to meet him at the end of her father's lane, disguised in a ridin dress borrowed for the occasion, when he was to take her in a close one horse barouche and 'fly with her on the wings of love,' as he said he would, to the Squire's office, where they was to be united in bands of wedlock before anybody in the village know'd any thing about it. He had made arrangements at the Hotel for a room, which he seed fixed up himself for the auspicious occasion, and he had writ a letter to a friend of his down in Augusty to be ther the next week, to take charge of his school, as he thought it mought, be necessary for him to keep out of the way of Old Darling for a few weeks, till the old feller could have time to come to.

All day Mr. Doolittle was bustlin about as if he was'n't certain which eend he stood on, while the sunshine of his heart beamed from his tallow colored face in a way to let every body know something extraordinary was gwine to happen.

Jest after dark he mought been seed drivin out by himself in a barouche towards old Mr. Darling's. Everybody 'pected something, and all hands was on the look out. It was plain to see Squire Rogers' impotence was swelled up considerable with something, but nobody couldn't git a word out of him.

Mr. Doolittle didn't spare the lash after he got out of sight of town, and with strainin eyes and palpitatin hart, he soon reached the place appinted to meet the object of his consumin affections.

Was she thar? No! Yes! Is it? Yes, thar she is!—the dear creature. The skirt of her nankeen ridin dress, what sets close to her angelic form, flutters in the breeze. She stands timidly crouchin in the fence holdin her vale close over her lovely face, tremblin in every jint for fear the mought be discovered and tore away from the arms of her devoted Ebenezer!

'Dearest angel!' ses he in a low voice.

'Oh, Ebenezer!' and she kind 'o fell in his arms.

'Compose yourself, my love.'

'Oh, if father should—'

'Don't fear, dearest creature. My arm shall protect you aginst the world.' And he was gwine to pull away her vale to kiss her—

'Oh!' ses she, 'didn't I hear somebody comin?'

'Eh?' ses he, looking round. 'Let's git in, my dear.'

And with that he helped her into the barouche, and contented himself with imprintin a burnin kiss that almost singed the kid glove on her dear little hand, as she closed the door.

Then jumpin on the front seat, he drove as fast as he could to town, encouragin her all the way and swarin to her how he would love her and make her happy, and tellin her how her father and mother would forgive her and think jest as much of her as ever.

Pore gal! she was so terribly agitated that she couldn't do nothin but sob and cry, which made Mr. Doolittle love her more and sware the harder.

When they got to the Squire's office, and the boys that was on watch seed him help her out of the barouche, everybody know'd her at once, in spite of her disguise, and sich another excitement was never seed in Pineville. Sum of the fellers was half out of the senses, and it was necessary to hurry the ceremony over as quick as possible for fear of bein interrupted by the row that was evidently brewin.

'Be quick, Squire,' ses Doolittle, handin out the license, and shankin like he had a ager, 'for Miss Darling is very much agitated.'

The Squire hardly waited to wipe his spectacles, and didn't take time to enjoy himself in readin the ceremony slow, and puttin the demi-semi-quivers in his voice like he usually did. The noise was gettin louder and louder out of doors and sumbody was knockin to get in.

'Oh!' ses Betty, leanin on Mr. Doolittle's arm for support.

'Go on,' ses Doolittle, pressin her to his side, his eyes on the Squire, and his face as white as a sheet.

'Open the door, Rogers,' ses a hoarse voice outside.

But the Squire didn't hear nothin til he pronounced the last words of the ceremony, and Ebenezer Doolittle and Elizabeth Darling was pronounced man and wife.

Jest then the door opened. In rushed old Mr. Darling and Bill, and Sam Darling, followed by a whole heap of fellers.

The bride screamed and fell into the arms of the triumphant Doolittle.

'Take hold of her!' ses old Darling flourishin his cane over his head. 'Take hold of the buzzy!'

'Stand off!' ses Doolittle, throwin himself in a real stage attitude, and supportin his faintin bride on one arm. 'Stand off, old man! She is my lawful wife, and I claim the protection of the law.'

'Knock him down!—take hold of him!' ses half a dozen; and Bill Darling grabbed the bridegroom by the neck, while Squire Rogers jumped upon the table and hollered out:

'I command the peace! I command the peace in the name of the State of Georgia.'

'She's my wife!—my lawful wife!' shouted Doolittle. 'I call upon the law!'

Jest then the bride got over her faintin fit, and raised her droopin hed,—the vale fell off, and—oh, cruel fate! Mr. Ebenezer Doolittle stood petrified with horror, holdin in his arms not Miss Betty but Miss Betty's waitin-maid, one of the blackest niggers in Georgia, who, at that interestin crisis, rolled her eyes upon him like two peeled onions, and throwin her arms around his neck, exclaimed—

'Dis is my dear husband what Miss Betty gin me her own self!'

'Such a shout as did foller!'

'Go to the devil, you black—' ses Doolittle, tryin to pull away from her.

'Stick to him, Sally,' ses the fellers, 'he's yours acordin to law.'

Old Squire Rogers looked like he'd married his last couple, pore old man, and hadn't a word to say for himself. The boys and young Darlings like to laughed themselves to death while old Darling who was mad as a hornet, was gwine to have Doolittle arrested for nigger stealing, right off.

Pore Doolittle! He made out, at last, to get lose from his wife, and to find the back door. He haint never been heard of in Pineville, from that day to this.

SKETCH OF REAL LIFE.

At a musical soiree last winter, at the splendid mansion of a thriving merchant, and withal a man of taste and liberality, we were struck with the magnificence which met our eye in every direction. The highly polished mahogany doors, the ponderous and beautiful Egyptian marble mantel pieces, the rich Wilton and royal carpets, highly polished chairs and divans elaborately carved and gilt, cornices, pier glasses, suspending girandoles, satin curtains—all after the fashion of Henry IV. The drawing rooms filled with elegantly dressed ladies and gentlemen, and the supper and refreshments presented a scenes of richness and luxury only to be looked for from persons of over-grown fortunes.

How long can this last? we said to ourself, together with reflections which pressed upon us as to the rapid manner we gain and get rid of fortunes in this city—New York. How like a rocket we ascend and descend!

One day last week we took a ride in a light rockaway over one of the delightful roads on Long Island to catch a little air and appetite for dinner and stopped to look at an Italian cottage with green Venetian Piazzettes and porticos in neat taste, surrounded by a white palisade, and filled with some fields of corn and potatoes, and a patch of wheat in the distance.

While gazing on the simplicity, cheerfulness, and comfort of the premises, we were roused by hearing some one call out—'Hallo, stranger,' and on looking, discovered it to be our worthy host of—Place. He wore a tweed jacket and Manila hat.

'Come, alight, and see my improvements,' said he.

'I must go down town, to dinner—it will be too late.'

'No you don't. My dinner is just ready, and you shall dine with me. Here, Toney, take the gentleman's horse.'

Having enjoyed his hospitality while living in splendor, I could not refuse his bread and salt under reverse circumstances; so I lighted and walked into the parlor. What a change! A plainly furnished cottage, cane bottomed chairs, wooden mantle pieces and plated candle sticks, mahogany framed looking glass, an eight day clock in the corner, and a map or two on the walls. Then the dinner table—how plain! White delf plates, black handled knives and forks, tumblers and wine glasses blown at New Jersey works, and salt cellars dear at six pence. The dinner was plain but good—the vegetables fresh—the bread home baked—and we were waited upon by a strapping girl with a significant squint. The hostess of the late princely mansion looked fresh and ruddy in a cross-barred muslin dress and bobbinet cap. She was cheerful and happy. Over a glass of Madeira—the remnant of better days—we talked on numerous subjects, philosophized with all delicacy upon the admirable manner in which they bore the change in their condition. The hostess started, and the host rolling out a volume of smoke from a prince cigar, exclaimed with surprise—

'Why, my dear fellow, did you suppose I was broke—smashed—gone over the dam—eh? O, no, no! This change you see is not owing to any reverse of fortune—my business is as prosperous as ever. I did not wait till bankruptcy overtook me; but considering our children, our future prosperity, and the obligations due to society and good example, we agreed to spend $1500 per year in the contented manner you see us, instead of $15,000 in the giddy mazes of fashion. I ride into town in order to attend to my business, work in my garden, have plain and substantial cheer, bake my own bread, make my own butter, lay my own eggs, and have a glass of wine for an old friend.'

Here was not only a change, but an improvement—a cheap augmentation of happiness, a true and sensible economy; promising rich results and worthy of imitation.

TO PREVENT SORE THROATS AND RELIEVE COUGHS. Mix vinegar and spirits of any kind, in equal parts, and rub a portion of the lotion into the skin upon the throat, with a piece of flannel, night and morning. Verjuice is the acid of the crab-apple, and is far superior to vinegar, which is often used for this purpose.

TIGHT STRAPS. The tight strapping down of trousers among young men in France, and in our own country, is producing not only a stiff style of walking, but a greater evil. The knee and ankle joints not being fully exercised, become affected with anachylosis, or stiffness; which, though perhaps not troublesome at the time, may be painfully apparent in advanced years. Trousers straps, if worn at all, should be so easy, as not in the least to prevent the free action of the joints. Nature did not intend that the legs of young men should be inflexible stumps.

The easy motion and exercise of every muscle and joint, so conducive of health and vigor, are greatly impeded by military discipline. The stiff unnatural drill of soldiers gives them an unbending and bolt-upright gait, which is at variance with permanent activity. Retired military men can rarely cope in strength or agility with civilians of the same age. The 'military air' is thus, to a certain extent, a deformity. Nature and good taste alike suggest an upright, but yet an easy, flexible carriage—the back ready to bend, and the head ready to turn gracefully and promptly on its pivot of the neck.

POTATO ROT. A writer in the Philadelphia Ledger, in an article on the potato rot, comes to the conclusion, by a course of very good reasoning, that this important article of culture has reached its term of life, and is perishing with scrofula, the result of interbreeding. He thus concludes:—'If all this be well founded, the remedy is obvious. Let our farmers import varieties from Nova Scotia, Canada, Mexico, South America. Let them plant the balls produced by these varieties, and reproduce from the best kinds furnished by the balls. Thus they will obtain from the potato ball the real seed, a genuine, legitimate offspring, instead of the incestuous scrofulous trash to which, by interbreeding for forty years or more, they have run down a once large, healthy variety. Try it.'

MARRIAGE. In bringing up our children, it is my solid judgment that a real attachment is not a thing to be lightly esteemed, and when young persons of a sober mind are come to years of discretion, it requires very great care how any undue restraint is laid upon them in these most important matrimonial engagements. We are all so short sighted about them, that the parties themselves should, after all, be principally their own judges in it. Therefore, unless I see insurmountable objections, I believe duty dictates leaving our children much at liberty in these important matters.

THE FAULTS OF CHILDREN. It may be well to drop a hint against the folly and impropriety of making the faults of our children the subject of conversation with other people. Nothing can be more unkind or injudicious. If you wish your children to reform and improve, you must throw a shield around their character. However foolishly they have acted, let them see that you are anxious to keep open the way for their return to propriety and respectability. Many a youth has been driven to despair by being tauntingly upbraided before strangers with misconduct, which never needed, and therefore never ought to have been known beyond his own family. On the other hand, many a wanderer has been encouraged to return, by observing in those most injured by his follies a general readiness cordially to reinstate him in their esteem, and to shield his reputation from the reproaches of others.

SELF RELIANCE. One of the finest qualities for a good wife is self reliance or self possession. Sober, marrying men have a horror of the girls who shriek or faint if the cat sneezes louder than she ought to, or an inch of plaster drops from the ceiling, or a spark from the fire lights on the hem of their dress. The woman who can meet an emergency with calmness and nerve, grapple with and subdue it without alarming a neighborhood is just the one to rule well her own household, and take care of her husband's home, property and children during his necessary absence in prosecution of his daily business. It is not always the trial which has the most appalling aspect that is really the most severe. Many a distant mountain dwindles into a gentle undulation when reached, and half the difficulties of almost any task we overcome when we have commenced the work in earnest. Fair reader, we give you a sentiment—Self-reliance, the true dignity of womanhood.

THE ROYAL FAMILY. Louis Philippe's surviving children are Louise, Queen of Belgium, born in 1812. Louis, Duke de Nemours, (the unpopular Regent) born in 1814—married to a German prince related to Prince Albert. Maria, born in 1817, married to a German prince related to Prince Albert. Francois, Prince de Joinville, a popular favorite and High Admiral of the navy, born in 1818, married to a sister of the Emperor of Brazil and the Queen of Portugal. Henri, Duke d'Aunaise, the richest Prince in Europe, and popular with the army, born in 1822, married to a cousin of the King of Naples. Antoine, Duke de Montpensier, commander of the Artillery, and a universal favorite, born in 1824, married to a sister of the Queen of Spain. With the exception of the latter, all of the King's children are parents.

RIDING IN CARS. A gentleman lately suggested, that it was much more healthful to take the forward part of the car, when there is a fire in it and many breaths, as, by the current created by the motion of the car, all the carbonic acid is speedily conveyed to the back end of the car. There is considerable in the suggestion, as any one will perceive who will take the trouble to pass from one end of a heated car to the other. There is a manifest difference in the atmosphere.

REGULAR HABITS.

Perhaps no man ever lived, in our days, who was more regular in his habits of exercise, study, dress, and in eating and drinking, than the late President, John Quincy Adams. It was our lot to reside eight years in the town of his nativity, and where he usually spent his summers, and within a mile of his mansion house. We have heard him relate his course of life, his habits of study and exercise, and trust have been somewhat benefited by that recital.

When engaged in teaching, we once visited him with a pupil of ours, who was anxious to get an appointment at the West Point Military Academy. Mr. Adams remarked, 'I suppose I have the privilege of recommending a candidate from this district, and (turning to the young man, said,) I shall be most happy to recommend you, sir, from this my native town. But there are some things to be considered. The last young gentleman from this district took the first part in his class, and I should very much regret to recommend one who should fall off from the standard which he has erected. I do not mean, however, that you must take the first part, but that, at least, you shall be among the first ten. And your success or failure will depend mainly upon your habits of study. The bill of science is climbed by steady application alone. Regulate your habits of study by a fixed rule, and conform strictly to that rule.'

This was Mr. A.'s course in every thing. No man could be more regular in his exercise than he. And his exercise he usually took upon his feet. Up to nearly the last year of his life, he was accustomed to walk to Boston, a distance of between eight and nine miles from his residence. The habit of walking he always practised from his youth. We recollect meeting him one summer's morning, before the sun had risen more than two miles from his residence, on foot, in a shady lane; and the most remarkable feature of the case was, he was then, at that early hour, on his return from his morning walk.

He was equally regular in his bathing. This he practised daily for many years. In a word, regularity in all his habits and punctuality in all his appointments, characterized that wonderful man, and as a result, he was very rarely indisposed, and continued to a good old age, active at his post, and 'standing in his lot.' His vigorous bodily health and mental energy were the legitimate fruit of his regular life. They flowed as naturally from that course, as the blossoms of spring from the fruitful year. Hundreds of sedentary men, long since in their graves, might have been now living and active, blessed and blessing society, had they partaken of his habits.—Journal of Health.

THE STOMACH.

This is unquestionably the golden age of the stomach, the era in which it receives that apothecary's against which St. Paul warned the ancient Philippians, and exercises a more direct and decided influence upon human affairs than at any former period in the whole history of the world. Many men live exclusively for it, and not a few die in its cause. It is the great universal source of corruption, moral as well as material; for, when Sir Robert Walpole maintained that every man had his price, he admitted that the great paramount temptation of money was, its power of administering new stimulants to the pleasures of the table. Epicurism and its results seem to constitute the great leading objects of modern occupation and inquiry. Intellectuals of the first order are devoted to the composition of cookery books; the public become, in consequence, more luxurious and profound in their banquets; a new set of talents is called into exercise, and a new series of books written to remedy the increasing diseases occasioned by good living; and both sets of authors run through numerous editions, and make rapid fortunes. Mrs. Rundle's 'Domestic Cookery' was a holder of wealth to the publisher; Dr. Kitchiner's 'Familiar Receipts' have made his pot boil for the remainder of his natural life; and Accun's publication would have answered the same purpose, had he not incautiously put poison into his own pot. Never was our culinary literature so rich; and as to medical works upon bile, indigestion, flatulency, heart-burn, and stomach complaints in general, the press groans with them. The gourmandizers, who are apt to be in the same predicament as the press, buy them, and consult their authors, and get relief, and then perform a de capo. Does any young aspiring surgeon, or patientless physician, wish to ride in his carriage, let him write a book upon the diseases of the stomach, and his fortune is made. His subject comes home to the business and bosoms of men, rather, the bowels of the whole community,—for we are all enjoyers of good cheer, and all sufferers, in some way or other, from its consequences.—Journal of Health.

THE VALUE OF HEN MANURE. The complaint of the fly on turnips, and bugs on cucumbers and other similar vines, is one of yearly and sometimes of long occurrence. The mischief done by these little pests, is very provoking, and frequently results in losses of labor and good crops which are very discouraging to cultivators. I have lately been informed by an intelligent and skillful cultivator, that the following preparation affords an ample and complete remedy. Take hen manure one part, reduce it as wet as you can to powder, then with an equal part of plaster of Paris, incorporate well together, and sprinkle the mixture over the vines or sow it over the drills of your turnips.

Hen manure is free from the seeds of foul weeds, and in consequence of the great abundance of ammonia it contains, it possesses a great effect in purging plants forward. Hence for turnips, peppers, and similar plants, in our northern climate, it possesses high value. It is well worth being saved with care by farmers and gardeners for every purpose of cultivation. Care should be used, however, in its application, for if given in too large quantities and placed in too close proximity to the roots of the plant, its effects are fatal. Its value for purposes is greatly increased by being mixed with charcoal, or, when this is not at hand, with plaster. Every man who keeps hens, should have his hen house so constructed as to save all the manure, and save it dry as may be, and he will find it no inconsiderable item in his matters of rural economy.—American Agriculturist.

TO MAKE COLOGNE. Oil lavender, 1 drachm; oil bergamot, 1 drachm; oil rosemary, 15 drops; oil cinnamon, oil lemon, oil cloves, of each 10 drops; oil roses, 5 drops; essence musk, 10 drops; alcohol, 1 quart.

THE various testimonies attached to the Native Preparations of Capt. Brant's Indian Remedies is a sufficient attestation to their merits. The soothing influence of the PLEASANT BALM over the raging tortures of the CONSUMPTION, the relief of their pains, the increased facility afforded to the EXpectoration, the absence of those debilitating Night-sweats which produce the consumption of other and pernicious cures to the patient's mind. ## TOWN MEETING.

The following table is the result of the balloting for a successor to Hon. John Quincy Adams as member of Congress from this District:

Horace Mann, (Whig)	170
Edgar K. Whitaker, (dem.)	108
Appleton Howe, (liberty)	24
Henry A. Ransom, Andrew J. Allen, Harvey Field, Ibrahim Bartlett, Francis Williams, one vote each.

The following letter, in reply to one from the chairman of the committee appointed by the citizens of this town to make suitable arrangements for the funeral of Ex-President J. Q. Adams, was read and ordered to be placed on the records of the town:

Hon. THOMAS GREENLEAF, Quincy, Mass.

Washington, 5th March, 1848.

DEAR SIR:—The tribute to the memory of my husband, paid by his fellow townsmen at the meeting over which you presided, cannot be otherwise than most gratefully received by myself and the other survivors of his family. Much as his public duties had called him away from his residence, he never for a moment forgot that it was in the town where he was born and where his fathers had lived, and where he first learned to become what he was. I trust that it is needless to remind you of the interest he continued to the last to maintain in the welfare of his citizens individually as well as collectively. The assurance that this interest was reciprocated among the consolations which remain from this deep bereavement.

Please accept for yourself, and permit me through you, to tender to the citizens of Quincy, my gratitude for the sympathy so kindly manifested by them.

At the adjournment of the annual March meeting held at the Lyceum Room, on Monday last, Mr. George Marsh, moderator, the following business was transacted:

Voted—To accept the report of the Selectmen favorable to the removal of the building over the Town Hay Scales, and that the proceeds be appropriated to the repair of the Scales.

Resolved—Messrs George H. French, Charles P. Tirrell, Perez Chubbuck, Nathaniel White, William W. Baxter, Samuel Curtis, George H. Locke, Ebenezer Adams, James Lovell, John L. Souther, James Bradford and John A. Billings.

Found Leeper—Edward F. Eaton.

The report of Selectmen, presenting a list of persons for jurors, was accepted and the names will be published next week.

Voted—To accept the Selectmen's report concerning Guide Posts, etc.

Voted—That the Town Treasurer, under the direction of the Selectmen, borrow such sums of money as may be required.

Voted—To raise $14,350 to meet all the expenses of the Town for the ensuing year.

Voted—That of the sum to be raised, $3,400 be appropriated for the support of Schools.

Lewis Bass was chosen Collector of Taxes, having agreed to collect it for nine and half mills on a dollar.

Voted—To allow a discount of four per cent. on all taxes paid before the first day of September, ensuing. The Collector is required to pay interest on all taxes not paid before the fifteenth day of next February.

FUNERAL SERMON. The address of the Rev. William P. Lunt, delivered at the funeral of Hon. John Quincy Adams, in this town, has been published in a neat form, and to the kindness of the reverend gentleman we are indebted for a copy. It is well written, beautifully illustrates the character of the deceased in appropriate language, and in every respect pays the most truthful and eloquent tribute to the worth and virtues of the deceased.

STATE DOCUMENT. The Secretary of the Commonwealth has our thanks for a copy of the Transactions of the Agricultural Societies of Massachusetts, containing the Reports of the Massachusetts State Society, and of the different County Agricultural Societies in the State, embodying a large amount of valuable and interesting matter pertaining to the science and art of farming. Extracts from the Addresses of Messrs T. E. Payson, E. H. Derby, D. Henshaw, and J. R. Lawton, and of Professors J. R. Russell and C. U. Shepard, before different Agricultural Associations in the Commonwealth, are added to the reports.

JUSTICE. Mr. Zebulon Paine, of Conway, was convicted on false testimony, of the crime of arson, and sentenced to the State Prison for seven years—fourteen months of which period he served out, when, on the most positive evidence of his innocence, he was pardoned. On a petition to recompense him for his unjust punishment, a committee of the Legislature, in consideration that his little all was exhausted in his defence, his last word being sold for the purpose, and that his health had materially suffered, and also that he labored for the State fourteen months, reported a resolve giving him the immense sum of $300 to be doled out to him by the selectmen of Conway. How does this contrast with the vote to pay the widow of the late Judge Hubbard $750, because he died without leaving much property.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY. On Saturday evening, Mr. Josiah Childs, an old and respectable inhabitant of Natick, was waylaid and robbed of his wallet, containing some forty or fifty dollars. He was found by the road side terribly bruised and beaten, and in an insensible state. Two fishermen have been arrested on suspicion of being the robbers.

THE FRENCH REVOLUTION. Hon. Samuel G. Goodrich of Massachusetts (Peter Parley) who was in Paris during the late revolution, has written a full and consecutive account of what he witnessed during the three days. He thus describes what passed in the Royal Palace:—

"I entered the palace, and passed through the long suite of apartments devoted to occasions of ceremony. A year before I had seen these gorgeous halls filled with the great and the fair—the favored and the noble, gathered to this focal point of luxury, refinement and taste, from every quarter of the world. How little did Louis Philippe, at that moment, dream of 'coming events'! How little did the stately Queen—a proud obelisk of silk and lace and diamonds—foresee the change that was at hand! I recollected well the effect of this scene on my mind, and felt the full force of the contrast which the present moment presented. In the very room where I had seen the pensive and pensile Princess de Joinville and the Duchess of Montpensier—then fresh from the hymeneal altar—her raven hair studded with a few diamonds, like stars of the first magnitude—whirling in the dizzy dance—I now beheld four creatures like Caliban, gambolling to the song of the Marseillaise.

On every side my eyes fell upon scenes of violence. Passing to the other end of the Palace, I beheld a mob in the chambers of the Princesses. Some rolled themselves in the luscious beds others mounted their heads with choice pomade, exclaiming, "Dieu, how sweet it smells!" One of the Gamans, grinning with gunpowder, blood and dirt, seized a truth brush, and placing himself before a mirror, seemed delighted at the manifest improvement which he produced upon his ivory.

In leaving the palace, I saw numbers of the men drinking wine from bottles found in the cellars. None of them were positively drunk, but in the words of Tom O'Shinner—"They were no' far, but just had plenty,"—perhaps a little more. They tossed their guns and pistols, brandished their swords, and performed various antics,—but they offered no insult to any one. They seemed in excellent humor, and made more than an ordinary display of French politeness. They complimented the women, of which there was no lack—and of them, seeming like a figure of Pan, seized a maiden by the waist, and both rejoined over the floor.

Leaving the scene of waste, confusion and uproar, I proceeded toward the gate of the gardens leading into the Rue Rivoli. I was surprised to find here a couple of ruthless looking bonapartes, armed with pistols keeping guard. On inquiry, I found that the mob themselves had instituted a sort of government. One fellow in the midst of the devastation in the palace, seeing a man put something in his pocket, wrote on the wall, "Death to the Thief!" The draconian code was immediately adopted by the mob, and became the law of the gardens. Five persons, taken in acts of robbery, were shot by the people, and their bodies exposed in the streets, with the label of "Thieves" on their breasts. This order and law seem to spring up from the instincts of society, in the midst of confusion, like crystals starting from the chaos of the elements."

NOVEL CASE. In the common pleas at Keene, (N. H.) young Mr. Parr has obtained a verdict for one thousand dollars damages against Mr. Ladd and wife, for breach of promise of marriage. In the fall of 1845, the lady, then Miss Mary Wales, was engaged to the plaintiff; a Bellows Falls clerk; in July, 1846, she became acquainted with her husband, a New York merchant, and married him three months afterwards.

RAILROAD ACCIDENT. One day last week, as the train from Plymouth approached the place where the work for a double track is going on near Savin Hill, the engineer discovered that the guy of the derrick was not high enough to allow the engine to pass. It was too late to stop and the rope struck the smoke pipe which it shattered. The guy broke, so that the chimney was not thrown back upon the engine, which would have killed the engineer and fireman. Two workmen were considerably injured by the falling of the derrick.

A VALUABLE PAPER. We accidentally met with a copy of the "Spirit of the Times," published in New York City, and edited by William T. Porter, Esq., a gentleman with whom we were personally acquainted about fifteen years since. The perusal of the number before us evinces all the wit, from its well filled columns, and tact, as well as display the talents, which the editor so eminently possesses. The "Times," is particularly devoted to the Turf, Field Sports and Theatre, but is also enriched with original and miscellaneous matter in regard to literature, agriculture, and other reading calculated to make an interesting paper.

FROM MEXICO. The dates from the Capitol are to the 25th ult. A renewal of the difficulties between Generals Scott and Worth had taken place. Mr. Trist had been retained as a witness against Gen. Scott. Col. Wilson has succeeded Gen. Twiggs as Governor of Vera Cruz. No more supplies than is necessary are to be sent to the interior in view of the immediate withdrawal of the troops. The Court of Inquiry commenced its session on the 16th. The Massachusetts regiment was still at San Angel.

LEGISLATIVE. A bill has been reported to authorize the sale of real estate by First Baptist Church in Stoughton. B. W. Foster and others have petitioned for a railroad in Kingston and Plympton to connect with the Old Colony. A Committee has been chosen to express sympathy with the republican movement in France. An order was offered, probably way of a joke, for the appointment of a committee to report when the Legislature can adjourn. It was laid over.

CONGRESS. There has been quite an animated discussion in Congress upon resolutions offering congratulations and sympathy to the French people. Both branches have the subject before them.

I trust that it is needless to remind you of the interest he continued to the last to maintain in the welfare of his citizens individually as well as collectively. The assurance that this interest was reciprocated among the consolations which remain from this deep bereavement.

Please accept for yourself, and permit me through you, to tender to the citizens of Quincy, my gratitude for the sympathy so kindly manifested by them.

At the adjournment of the annual March meeting held at the Lyceum Room, on Monday last, Mr. George Marsh, moderator, the following business was transacted:

Voted—To accept the report of the Selectmen favorable to the removal of the building over the Town Hay Scales, and that the proceeds be appropriated to the repair of the Scales.

Resolved—Messrs George H. French, Charles P. Tirrell, Perez Chubbuck, Nathaniel White, William W. Baxter, Samuel Curtis, George H. Locke, Ebenezer Adams, James Lovell, John L. Souther, James Bradford and John A. Billings.

Found Leeper—Edward F. Eaton.

The report of Selectmen, presenting a list of persons for jurors, was accepted and the names will be published next week.

Voted—To accept the Selectmen's report concerning Guide Posts, etc.

Voted—That the Town Treasurer, under the direction of the Selectmen, borrow such sums of money as may be required.

Voted—To raise $14,350 to meet all the expenses of the Town for the ensuing year.

Voted—That of the sum to be raised, $3,400 be appropriated for the support of Schools.

Lewis Bass was chosen Collector of Taxes, having agreed to collect it for nine and half mills on a dollar.

Voted—To allow a discount of four per cent. on all taxes paid before the first day of September, ensuing. The Collector is required to pay interest on all taxes not paid before the fifteenth day of next February.

FUNERAL SERMON. The address of the Rev. William P. Lunt, delivered at the funeral of Hon. John Quincy Adams, in this town, has been published in a neat form, and to the kindness of the reverend gentleman we are indebted for a copy. It is well written, beautifully illustrates the character of the deceased in appropriate language, and in every respect pays the most truthful and eloquent tribute to the worth and virtues of the deceased.

STATE DOCUMENT. The Secretary of the Commonwealth has our thanks for a copy of the Transactions of the Agricultural Societies of Massachusetts, containing the Reports of the Massachusetts State Society, and of the different County Agricultural Societies in the State, embodying a large amount of valuable and interesting matter pertaining to the science and art of farming. Extracts from the Addresses of Messrs T. E. Payson, E. H. Derby, D. Henshaw, and J. R. Lawton, and of Professors J. R. Russell and C. U. Shepard, before different Agricultural Associations in the Commonwealth, are added to the reports.

JUSTICE. Mr. Zebulon Paine, of Conway, was convicted on false testimony, of the crime of arson, and sentenced to the State Prison for seven years—fourteen months of which period he served out, when, on the most positive evidence of his innocence, he was pardoned. On a petition to recompense him for his unjust punishment, a committee of the Legislature, in consideration that his little all was exhausted in his defence, his last word being sold for the purpose, and that his health had materially suffered, and also that he labored for the State fourteen months, reported a resolve giving him the immense sum of $300 to be doled out to him by the selectmen of Conway. How does this contrast with the vote to pay the widow of the late Judge Hubbard $750, because he died without leaving much property.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY. On Saturday evening, Mr. Josiah Childs, an old and respectable inhabitant of Natick, was waylaid and robbed of his wallet, containing some forty or fifty dollars. He was found by the road side terribly bruised and beaten, and in an insensible state. Two fishermen have been arrested on suspicion of being the robbers.

Horace Mann, (Whig)	170
Edgar K. Whitaker, (dem.)	108
Appleton Howe, (liberty)	24
Henry A. Ransom, Andrew J. Allen, Harvey Field, Ibrahim Bartlett, Francis Williams, one vote each.

The following letter, in reply to one from the chairman of the committee appointed by the citizens of this town to make suitable arrangements for the funeral of Ex-President J. Q. Adams, was read and ordered to be placed on the records of the town:

Hon. THOMAS GREENLEAF, Quincy, Mass.

Washington, 5th March, 1848.

DEAR SIR:—The tribute to the memory of my husband, paid by his fellow townsmen at the meeting over which you presided, cannot be otherwise than most gratefully received by myself and the other survivors of his family. Much as his public duties had called him away from his residence, he never for a moment forgot that it was in the town where he was born and where his fathers had lived, and where he first learned to become what he was. I trust that it is needless to remind you of the interest he continued to the last to maintain in the welfare of his citizens individually as well as collectively. The assurance that this interest was reciprocated among the consolations which remain from this deep bereavement.

Universal and Critical Dictionary of the English Language.

By JOSEPH E. WORCESTER, LL. D.

One volume, 8vo. sheep, 1032 pages—Price $3 50

THE Publishers respectfully invite attention to the following eminent testimony to the excellence of this Standard Dictionary.

The execution of this Dictionary fully answers to its title.

"The Vocabulary is probably more comprehensive than that of all preceding English Dictionaries united.

Constant reference is made to authorities, with respect to words newly introduced, and care is taken to note such as are technical, foreign, obsolete, provincial, or vulgar.

The definitions are clear and exact, and those pertaining to technical and scientific terms are especially valuable to the general reader.

The author has evidently bestowed great labor on pronunciation. His system of Notation, which is easily understood, and founded on a more complete analysis of the vowel sounds than we have elsewhere.

A year has elapsed since the publication of this best English Dictionary in relation to words different from those of any other, and it is now pronounced by different orthopeds, gives to this work important advantages as a Pronouncing Dictionary.

In orthography he has made no arbitrary changes, but where usage is various and fluctuating, he has aimed to be constant, and to reduce to the same rule words of similar form.

The insertion of Grammatical forms and inflections of words to a much greater extent than they are given in other English Dictionaries, and the short critical notes on the orthography, the pronunciation, the grammatical form and construction, and the peculiar, technical, local, and American uses of words interspersed through the volume, give to this work much additional value.

The copious Vocabulary of Modern Geographical Names, with their pronunciation, and a greatly enlarged and improved edition of Walker's Key to the pronunciation of Classical and Scripture Proper Names, are important appendages to the Dictionary.

A year has elapsed since this Dictionary was published; and its already extensive use, both among cultivated English readers, and men of wide learning, affords good testimony of its merits. We confidently recommend it as containing an ample and careful view of the present state of our language.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

MY MOTHER.

Half sleeping on my mother's bed
I lay, a young and careless boy,
My mother, bending o'er my head,
Cried, sleep—sleep on my darling boy.
She kiss'd me, tho' I did not move,
I knew and felt a mother's love.

That voice of kindness reached my heart,
That kiss of love, I feel it yet,
And death may chill my mortal part,
But cannot make my soul forget.
Through every nerve I feel it thrill,
She loved me then—she loves me still.

When driving on the mountain wave,
In danger, near the rocky shore,
My mother's blessing made me brave,
And nerved me for the trial hour.
Small were my terrors on the sea,
I knew my mother prayed for me.

Night came, with toil and pain oppress'd,
I dreamed her worship'd form was near,
And on my cheek a kiss impress'd,
The same to infant memory dear.
The morning found me well again,
My mother's kiss had cured the pain.

Through different climes my course I've steer'd
And various hardships had to prove,
But midst them all my heart was cheer'd
By thinking on my mother's love.
A mother's love, what tongue can tell
How much she loves, how true, how well.

F. M. ADOLPHSON, Weymouth.

EXCELSIOR.

The shades of night were falling fast,
As through an Alpine village passed,
A youth, who bore, 'mid snow and ice,
A banner with the strange device
Excelsior!

His brow was sad; his eye beneath
Flash'd like a fault-finder from the sheath,
And like a silver clarion rung
The accents of that unknown tongue,
Excelsior!

In happy homes he saw the light
Of household fires gleam warm and bright;
Above, the spectral glaciers shone,
And from his lips escaped a groan,
Excelsior!

"Try not the Pass!" the old man said;
"Dark lowers the tempest overhead,
The roaring torrent is deep and wide!"
And loud that clarion voice replied
Excelsior!

"O stay," the maiden said, "and rest
Thy weary head upon this breast!"
A tear stood in his bright blue eye,
But still he answered, with a sigh,
Excelsior!

"Beware the pine-tree's withered branch!
Beware the awful avalanche!"
This was the peasant's last Good-night,
A voice replied, far up the height,
Excelsior!

At break of day, as heavenward
The pious monks of Saint Bernard
Uttered the oft-repeated prayer,
A voice cried through the startled air,
Excelsior!

A traveller, by the faithful hound,
Half-buried in the snow was found,
Sift' grasping in his hand of ice
That banner with the strange device
Excelsior!

There in the twilight cold and gray,
Lifeless, but beautiful, he lay,
And from the sky, serene and far,
A voice fell like a falling star,
Excelsior!

ANECDOTES.

"Sarah—have you had that old rotten stump of a tooth pulled out yet?"
"Yes—I have."
"Vy—how was it done?"
"Vy, ye see as how I took some Mexico."
"Vat!—you took vat?"
"Vy—I took some Mexico—or—something close by it on to her side."
"Close by to her side—vat was that?"
Another person present informed them that California was near Mexico.
"Ah, yes!" said Sarah, that was it. "I took some California on a piece of sponge, and the Doctor cut it out, and it didn't hurt a bit."
"Oh no, my child, it was chloroform," said the Grandmother, laying aside "the lives of the Saints."
"Vat—I never!" said Sarah in great surprise.

A pious African at Louisville stumbled while walking on a very dark night, and was pitched head-foremost down a cellar, which afforded him an "open door of entrance." Springing to his feet, he exclaimed, "Breast de Lord dat I lit on my head! if dis stagger had scraped his shine so hard I spec he broke his leg."

"Jim," enquired a schoolboy of one of his mates, "what is the meaning of relics?" "Don't you know?" "Well, I can tell you; you know the master licked me in school yesterday?" "Yes." "Well, he was satisfied with that but kept me after school and licked me again. That is what I call a relic."

"Do you suppose that a person can see better by the aid of glasses," said a man in company. "I know he can," said a toper, "for I have taken a dozen glasses, and I can see double."

"I say, Mister, how came your eyes so all-fired crooked?" "By setting between two galls and trying to look love at both at the same time."

THE venerable testimony attached to the Native Preparations of Capt. Brant's Indian Remedies is a sufficient attestation to their merit. The soothing influence of the PULMONARY BALM on the raging tortures of the CONSUMPTIVE COUGH, the cessation of their pains, the increased facility afforded in the EXPECTORATION, the absence of those debilitating Night-Sweats altogether produce the consciousness of relief and permanent cure in the patient's mind. PERFORM all Operations belonging to the DENTAL PROFESSION, and continue to Manufacture and insert the purest and best of MINERAL TEETH, upon the AR-MORPHIC, and on all other principles as practised by the best Dentists in this country and Europe.

Every Tooth we FILE, and every one we INSERT, we insure, according to circumstances; and all Dental Plate Work executed at our rooms is warranted to be equal to any that can be produced, and to give perfect satisfaction.

We are administering the CHLORIFORM every day with success, and extracting Teeth by the dozen, without pain, and have never known it to affect the patient unfavorably, and yet we charge no more than when we do not give it.

The public will not forget that it is due the credit of the great and important improvement recently made in the method of inserting Artificial Teeth, both on Gold Plate and Pivots, and also preserving diseased Teeth and stumps in a healthy condition.

Instruction given in relation to the New Method invented by us, and whole sets inserted in the most difficult mouths, for country or travelling Dentists, on reasonable terms. Pivots Teeth adapted to the mouth on our plan are far more durable and permanent than upon gold plate, secured in the common way, and will never want resetting. When necessary to mount them on a plate of gold by our method, we extract no sound stumps, preserve the form of the mouth, and secure them so firmly that the patient can eat with them as well as if they were natural teeth, and they will last a whole life-time, and look perfectly natural.

To all who require the services of a Dentist, and particularly such as have been unsuccessfully served, we would "make our best bow," and say, don't wait for an introduction, but call and see us at

A very handsome youth, with more charms in his appearance than money in his pocket, became most desperately in love with the daughter of a rich neighbor. The father of Antonio was dead, and the young man had speedily dissipated the little fortune that then became his only portion; however, his worst enemies never urged anything against Antonio, excepting a few extravagances and follies, which, perhaps, were mere failings to an otherwise amiable character. Finetta, the object of his affections, was the only daughter of a rich noble, who, perceiving in Antonio poverty alone, forbade his daughter, under severe penalties, to think of Antonio, when, in fact, she could think of nothing else. Love is the parent of more inventions than necessity. Antonio put on the humble attire of a gardener, and so employed in the pleasure-grounds of the rich latter. Never were the flowers known to flourish so luxuriantly, for were they not to form bouquets for Finetta, who was never seen without a fresh one in her bosom. She took lessons, besides, of the gentle craft. How happy they were in such employment! The mother of Finetta complained that the embroidery frame had been deserted!

"When," exclaimed her daughter, "could I hope to equal the beauty of nature's lovely tints? Embroidery is an unhealthy employment! Whereas this balmy air, with the odor of the flowers and shrubs, inspires my very heart."

The mother looked at her daughter's blooming face, and was satisfied; but the father was not so easily duped, for it happened that while there was a nosegay in every room, there was seldom a salad for the table. The master noticing the neglect, Antonio only replied, by pointing to a beautiful bowler he was then constructing. He was abruptly dismissed on the spot, and driven out like Adam, from his paradise of flowers. "In truth,"

THE THREE LOVERS.

A very handsome youth, with more charms in his appearance than money in his pocket, became most desperately in love with the daughter of a rich neighbor. The father of Antonio was dead, and the young man had speedily dissipated the little fortune that then became his only portion; however, his worst enemies never urged anything against Antonio, excepting a few extravagances and follies, which, perhaps, were mere failings to an otherwise amiable character. Finetta, the object of his affections, was the only daughter of a rich noble, who, perceiving in Antonio poverty alone, forbade his daughter, under severe penalties, to think of Antonio, when, in fact, she could think of nothing else. Love is the parent of more inventions than necessity. Antonio put on the humble attire of a gardener, and so employed in the pleasure-grounds of the rich father. Never were the flowers known to flourish so luxuriantly, for were they not to form bouquets for Finetta, who was never seen without a fresh one in her bosom. She took lessons, besides, of the gentle craft. How happy they were in such employment! The mother of Finetta complained that the embroidery frame had been deserted!

The mother looked at her daughter's blooming face, and was satisfied; but the father was not so easily duped, for it happened that while there was a nosegay in every room, there was seldom a salad for the table. The master noticed the neglect, Antonio only replied, by pointing to a beautiful bowl he was then constructing. He was abruptly dismissed on the spot, and driven—out like Adam, from his paradise of flowers. 'In truth,' said the mother, 'when my daughter thinks proper to give rings to a gardener, it is high time he should go elsewhere to wear them.'

Finetta took to embroidery very diligently, and became as pale as the lily she worked. The father proposed matrimony. Love transformed Antonio into the master falconer; he rides by her side; what are the charms of floriculture to that of galloping in the breezy air? The roses bloomed with fresh vigor, and the chariot falconer, in gazing on them, forgot to recall his birds from their flight. The falcon was taken from his finger, on which Finetta contrived to place another jewel as a consolation for his disgrace. After this, there being neither gardening nor fowling to amuse her, the languid girl fell into a state of melancholy, that quite disconcerted her parents. They sent for a noted physician, in spite of the fair one's opposition, who understood her own ailment well enough to know that he could offer no remedy. His visits raised the anxiety of the watchful Antonio, who contrived to waylay the physician, and learned that he could do nothing for her.

'Be of good cheer,' replied Antonio, 'I know well her complaint, and if you will let me have the opportunity, she shall soon eat, drink, and sleep, and be merry and glad, instead of the poor, mooping, pining patient, you prescribe for in vain.'

He then confidentially related their mutual love, and the physician being a good-hearted man, and besides finding his advice in vain, consented to use his interest in behalf of the anxious lover. Behold Antonio as the attendant of the physician, waiting on the invalid with basket in hand. The new medicines had a wonderful effect; the physician received a rich present from the father; and in taking leave of the attendant, the fair Finetta slipped a third ring on his hand. So tenderly grateful was the attendant, that he did not perceive the entrance of the father. Antonio was thrust out of the room rather quicker than he expected and the fair Finetta was commanded, with a stern rebuke, to her chamber. The old lady, thereupon, asking her husband the cause of this sudden change in affairs, he replied—

'Wife, I fear much we shall have some troubles with our only child, if we do not marry her, forthwith. Here I found the doctor's man on his knees, feeling her pulse, I presume, that he may steal away her hand.'

'Husband,' replied the lady, 'thank Heaven, he was no lower in rank. I heard that she bestowed a ring upon that gardener, who was fonder of flowers than vegetables; and it is much to me if she has not bestowed some sweet looks, at least, upon our last falconer; he would never have dared, otherwise, to look first, as I saw him look at her one morning. Ah! quoth she in grief, 'would we had let her have Antonio; my heart misgives me that we shall be brought to disgrace on her account. If he is poor, he is nobly born, and have we not money enough for both?'

Her husband wisely agreed in these sentiments; but would Antonio be recalled? The old lady promised to undertake this, and after a proper lecture to her daughter on her indiscretions, she expressed her sorrow, and dutifully wrote a letter to her lover, who came joyfully in his own character as a gentleman, and was most graciously received. When the wedding day arrived, and the company assembled, the mother perceived, with surprise, three handsome rings, belonging to her daughter, on the hand of the intended bridegroom; before she could ask any questions, Antonio took Finetta by the hand—

'I think, Madam,' said he to the lynx-eyed mother, 'that I can guess what is passing in your mind. The three rings which have caught your eye, were really bestowed by your daughter on a gardener, a falconer, and the attendant of a physician; but lest any one should impeach the honor and constancy of the donor, know that I am ready to maintain it, in token of which I have put on these several jewels.'

The hearts of the parents were so greatly lightened by this confession, that the marriage was made doubly a time of rejoicing, and the fair Finetta had never cause to regret the triple wooing of the gardener, the falconer, and the physician's attendant.

HOW MISS PINCHE GOT A BABY.

Miss Jimima Pinche was a prude, and Miss Jimima had long been known as a lady 'of a certain age.' She had passed the first—ay, the second 'corner'—and the chances were now against her decidedly, for the long anticipated marriage settlement which such ladies do covet.

But Miss Jimima Pinche had a strong predilection in favor of babies and numerous were the instances of enthusiastic delight she had evinced for the 'precious little ones,' belonging to the more fortunate of her sex, with whom she occasionally came in contact.

Miss Jimima had frequently offers of marriage—so she informed her confidants—but she had declined them! And now it had got to be a matter of extreme dubiousness, when the time might come that she should have another opportunity to refuse a marriage proposal.

Miss Pinche had at length got to be very loquacious, and the 'blessed little hearts' of her neighbors and friends' babies had lately become most affectionately endeared to her.

'Such a love of a boy, is that of Mrs. Pringle's,' she exclaimed one morning; 'oh, the darling! How I should doat upon such a dear little soul of my own.'

The servants, in the afternoon, announced a stranger in the drawing-room of the dwelling where Miss Pinche resided. The lady had called upon some trifling pretence of business, and bore in her arms a smiling babe, some four weeks old. This was enough to secure the good offices of Miss Pinche, who at once lavished her praises upon the darling present, in particular, and upon the fraternity of babies in general. Such a charming babe was this too! To be sure the caller was an entire stranger, the infant was a clean, well-dressed boy, but the guardian of this prize was mistaken, and had to go further to complete the object of her mission. She didn't wish to trouble the lady of the house, but if she would be so kind as to retain the little one, but for an hour, it would confer a great favor upon her.

Miss Pinche was the most obliging creature in the world, (when babies were concerned,) and she was perfectly delighted with the opportunity to amuse herself for 'an hour' with the innocent little dear. The lady departed—and, stranger as she was, or pretended to be—she didn't return!

Miss Jimima Pinche creased the infant—she prattled to the boy—and dandled him on her knee for an hour—for two, three hours; but the ladylike caller didn't come! The boy got tired of Pinche's attentions, after a while (for he found it 'dry work,') and he set up a howl. Miss Pinche didn't like crying babies, so she turned it over to the servant. The servant got tired, too, at length, and Miss Pinche laid the 'brat' on the sofa, while she looked out at the window.

Night came, but the stranger did not make her appearance. It grew dark, and Miss Pinche, (whose eyesight was none of the best,) 'couldn't' for the life of her, see why the woman didn't come back!

But she never came; and Miss Jimima Pinche who had all her life time so ardently desired it, had at last got a baby!

The little stranger didn't understand the utility of a pap spoon or its contents, which Miss Pinche industriously endeavored during the evening to force into its now 'awful looking mouth'—and next day, the unfortunate intruder was delivered over to the Guardians of the Poor who provided it with a nurse.

Miss Jimima Pinche has never since been known to look an infant in the face, and she positively declares, though she may have a thousand offers, that she will never consent to be married, 'no how you can fit it.'—Boston Times.

MARRIAGEABLE MAN.

The marriageable man is a personage of great importance. Go where you will among the other sex, he is sure of a cordial reception. His company is equally courted by the matron and the maid. The wife lavishes her attentions on him because she has a daughter with whom she is desirous he should enter into a matrimonial compact. The young girl plays the part of Miss Amiable on her own account. Between the attentions of the two, he surely ought to be a happy man; for everybody knows that he who is fortunate enough to occupy a prominent place in the good graces of mother and daughter, is sure, as a matter of course, also to enjoy the friendship of the husband and father, the brothers and sisters. In fact all are his friends. He is or ought to be much more at home in the house of the marriageable girl than even the master of the establishment himself. The female portion of the family, from mamma downwards, display the very perfection of amiability. Wherever he looks, he encounters beaming eyes and smiling countenances. He lives in a region of smiles.

And such smiles! Mother and daughters vie with each other in lavishing their choicest looks upon him. Just see the difference between the smiles with which he is honored, and those which are bestowed by mamma on the marriageable miss on the married. Would you have believed there could be so great a difference in the smile of the same lady? The marriageable man meets with friendship and favor at every step. Mamma and the young ladies overwhelm him with their attentions. They hang upon his breath; his wishes are anticipated before they are even formed. He is the centre of the family circle. The females, mother and all, are but as many planets moving round him, and deriving all their happiness from him. He reads in their countenances that they are all dying to make him happy; and, in the overwhelming sense he entertains of this, and at the same time charitably forming his opinion of the sex generally, from the charming specimens by whom he is surrounded, he feels a burning indignation rise in his bosom as he recalls to mind the many harsh things he has uttered touching the tempers of women. He inwardly pronounces all such assertions or insinuations downright libels, and impelled by so strong a sense of gallantry, that he could on the instant find it in his heart to call out any and every person that dared to whisper a word to the disadvantage of the sex.

Formerly he wondered at the extreme folly of Don Quixote and other knighterrant of old, in doing gratuitous battle for the fair. His wonder has vanished; or, rather, given place to extreme surprise that he ever could have felt such wonder at all. His astonishment now takes a different direction; it runs in an opposite channel. It is all the other way. The only matter of amazement with him is, that any one should quietly sit in his seat, and not appeal to the pistols at once when a single reflection is hazarded respecting the temper or the virtue of the female sex.

THE BEST IS LEFT. What if calamities do come; they never take all that we have, and often only take that of which we are better deprived than possessed. Jeremy Taylor once on suffering an utter deprivation of his worldly goods by sequestration, cried out, in the midst of his calamity, 'What have they taken? Let me look about me! They have left me sun and moon, fire and water, a loving wife and many friends to pity me, and some to relieve me, and I can still discourse; and unless I list, they have not taken away my merry countenance, and my cheerful spirits, and a good conscience; they have still left me the providence of God; all the promises of the gospel, and my religion, and my hopes of heaven, and my charity to them, too. And still I sleep, and eat, and drink, and digest. I read and meditate; I walk in my neighbor's pleasant field, and see the varieties of natural beauties, and delight in all that in which God delights, that is, in virtue and wisdom, in the whole creation, and in God himself.'

BOILING WATER. Every person engaged in culinary affairs ought to be aware that when water has once been heated to the boiling point, all that is further requisite, is to keep it at that temperature,—any additional fuel, more than is barely necessary to effect this, is uselessly expended; he water, heated in an ordinary culinary vessel can, by no possibility of art, be made more than boiling hot. By stopping the evaporation of steam, a very high temperature may be obtained; as in 'Papin's Digester,' water may be made red-hot.

JOHN JACOB ASTOR.

Mr. Astor was a native of Germany, but has resided in this country almost sixty years. He landed here with only a trifling sum in his pocket. He early commenced business as a trader in Fur, and when the State of New York was a wilderness, made frequent voyages up the Mohawk to trade with the Indians. As his wealth increased, he enlarged his business, until by the formation of the American Fur Company he was a competitor with the great capitalists of Europe, the Proprietor of the North Western and Canadian Fur Companies. Such was his enterprise that he extended his business to the mouth of the Columbia River, and formed the first fur establishment there, known as Astoria. Several expensive expeditions were fitted out by him, of overland journeys to the Pacific, some of which were executed by individuals with great suffering. These exploits belong to history, and are faithfully recorded by Washington Irving. For many years previous to the war of 1812, and subsequently, Mr. Astor was extensively engaged in the Canton trade, and during the war was so fortunate that several of his ships arrived here with valuable cargoes in safety. The profits on these ships were enormous.

Mr. Astor made large investments in American stocks, which he purchased during the war with Great Britain, at sixty or seventy cents on the dollar, and which after the peace, went up to twenty per cent. above par. His great estate, however, has increased more from the purchase of real estate than from any other source. He is the largest proprietor by far, of city property, than any in the State. Mr. Astor was in feeble health for a long time, but sank gradually, from the infirmities of age, without any disease. His will was executed July 4th, 1836, but as he acquired new estates, or the circumstances of his devisees changed, or he changed his opinion of what was best, he made sundry codicils. The great features of the will and its codicils are ample provision for all the relations of Mr. Astor and their children—his son, Wm. B. Astor, being the great residuary legatee. There are no trusts created for the benefit of relatives; though in quite a number of cases, only income, or a sum per annum, is to be paid to the present generation, with a reversion to their children, or other heirs, who succeed to unrestricted possession. The only important bequest for the public benefit is one of $400,000, by the codicil of August 20, 1839, for erecting suitable buildings, and establishing a library in New York, for free general use. For this purpose he appropriated a plot of ground 65 feet front by 125 deep, for the building. This building is not to cost over $75,000, and the land is estimated at $35,000. Then $120,000 are to be expended in books, maps, statuary, etc, and the remainder to be placed at interest, to defray the expenses of management, purchase of books, or the establishment of lectures, as the trustees may think fit. The trustees are to have no pay; nor is any of them to hold any office of emolument under the board. There is a bequest to the poor of Waldorf (Germany) by establishing an institution for the sick or disabled, or for the improvement of the young, of $60,000. The other public bequests are as follows, but most, if not all of them, were paid in advance during the life of the testator. The German Society, $20,000; Institution for the Blind, $5000; Half Orphan Asylum, $5000; Lying-in Asylum, $2000. The personal estate of Mr. Astor is worth from seven to nine millions of dollars, and his real estates perhaps as much more; so that the aggregate is less than twenty millions.

EVENING HOURS. What have evening hours done for mechanics who had only ten hours' toil? What in the moral, what in the religious what in the scientific world! Harken unto these facts. One of the best editors of the Westminster Review could ever boast, and one of the most brilliant writers of the passing hour, was a cooper in Aberdeen. One of the editors of a London daily journal was a baker in Elgin; perhaps the best reporter on the London Times was a weaver in Edinburgh; the editor of the Edinburgh Witness was a stone-mason. One of the ablest ministers in London was a blacksmith in Dundee; another was a watch-maker in Banff; the late Dr. Milne, of China, was a herdsman in Rhynie; the principal of the London Missionary Society's College, at Hong Kong, was a saddler at Huntly; and one of the best missionaries that ever went to India was a tailor in Keith. The leading mechanist on the London and Birmingham Railway, with £700 a year was a mechanic in Glasgow; and perhaps the richest iron-founder in England was a working man in Moray. Sir James Clarke, Her Majesty's physician, was a druggist in Banff; James Hume was a sailor; Mr. Macgregor, the member for Glasgow, was a poor boy in Ross-shire; James Wilson, the member for Westbury, was a ploughman in Haddington; and Arthur Anderson, the member for Orkney, earned his bread by the sweat of his brow in the Ultima Thule.

PRAYER. God looks not at the oratory of your prayers, how elegant they may be; nor at the geometry of your prayers, how long they may be; nor at the arithmetic of your prayers, how many they may be; nor at the logic of your prayers, how methodical they may be; but the sincerity of them he looks at.

ALL IS WELL.

When the hum of business has ceased in a populous city; when fainter and still more faint grows the laugh and the revelry, and the heavy tread of the straggler upon the stone pavement has a solitary and uncerthly sound; when hushed is every murmur, and midnight broods over the palace and the hut, who, in that still moment, when from turret and from tower peals the passing hour, has not been startled by the cry of 'all is well' from the guardian watchman of the night, and been soothed and calmed by the magic sound!

All is not well—with the young mother as she leans over the fevered couch, and wipes the death-damp from the marble brow of her only child—nor with the votary of pleasure as he prays for the dawning of light hoping to assuage the pain, caused by the intoxicating cup, and perhaps a monitor within which tells him of damning and accursed deeds of days gone by—nor with the oppressor of the widow and the orphan, as he beholds the sceptre of power and the diadem of glory passing away forever—nor with the gambler in the gorgeous saloon, as deeply quaffing spiced wine, he seizes with gaunt and jewelled hand the dice-bow, and dashes aside the pleasures of a home once rendered dear, but for his own turpitude. And oh! the heart, there of his wife, broken, and which cling to him and will fondly cling to him to the last. To all these, that cry sounds like a funeral knell—and brings no hope nor consolation. When the last hour of man has been numbered, and his life flickers in the socket, happy the person who can look calmly back to the past, and putting that question to his soul, hear the gladdening, the heart-cheering response from the unerring monitor within, all is well.

OYSTERS. It is estimated that three millions of dollars are yearly spent in New York City, for oysters. One hundred dollars are sometimes taken of a night over the oyster counter alone of a noted saloon in that city. The trade gives employment and prosperity to hundreds and hundreds of hard working men. Common as oysters are in America, their natural history is very little known. Men who have been in the habit of selling and opening them for years, cannot tell with accuracy the male from the female. The male is supposed to be smaller in shell and size of the meat than the female. A skillful opener can dissect an oyster so as to show you the cardere, and an apparent back bone and ribs. Oysters should never be eaten until they have been a few days out of water. They then fatten on their own liquor and become solid. To invalids they are of great value. When the stomach can retain seemingly nothing, oyster broth, not too highly seasoned, is highly nutritive and beneficial.

SERMON ON DRINKING. My hearers, to keep continually dry, always wear an oil cloth dress, carry a good umbrella, and practice rural drinking. The first two articles however are only essential in protecting the outside from superabundant moisture, but the latter keeps the inside as dry as a stove pipe. I never knew a drinker but who was eternally dry—dry in all kinds of weather. He goes to bed dry, and gets up dry, keeps himself dry through the day. It's not to be wondered at; for how can he be otherwise than dry, when he keeps the blue blaze of hell constantly burning in his bosom, by pouring double distilled damnation down his throat forever. In fact, my friends, the more he drinks the dryer he grows; on his death-bed he cries for one more drink, for the last, and then he goes out of the world as thirsty as if he had lived on codfish all the days of his life.—Dodo, Jr.

FRUIT TREES. Be careful in planting to give the trees a fair chance for life and health, by digging the holes in which they are set, wide and large, so that they may be surrounded loose earth, that can be easily penetrated by the tender fibres of the roots, which are to convey nourishment for their sustenance and growth. A tree properly planted will grow as much in five years as one carelessly and badly set in, will in ten; and often the chance of survivorship is dependant on this slight circumstance. An excellent plan for preventing young fruit trees from becoming hide-bound and mossy, and for promoting their health and growth, is to take a bucket of soft soap, and apply it with a brush to the stem or trunk, from top to bottom; this cleanses the bark and destroys the worms or eggs of insects. The soap becoming dissolved by rains, descends to the roots, and causes the tree to grow vigorously.

A GREAT HIT. A Pittsburg paper took the following story out of the mouth of a Pennsylvania militia officer, and printed it: 'I was once in Harrisburg, on official business. During my stay, a horse race came off near the capital, and as I am rather partial to horse racing, I went to see it. Just as the horses were starting, some fellow insulted me by jostling me rather roughly. Now, you know I don't often fight, but when I strike, why, then I do strike—so I up fist, and hit him a blow that sent him against the fence, into a field, carrying with him nine sections of posts and rails. The fellow laid a short time, then raising himself in a sitting posture, he looked wildly around him. 'Gentlemen,' said he, 'has the storm done much damage? Did the lightning strike anybody but me?'

THE various testimonies attached to the Native Preparations of Capt. Brant's Indian Remedy is a sufficient attestation to their merits. The soothing influence of the PULMONARY BALM, over the raging tortures of the CONSUMPTIVE COUGH, the cessation of their pain, the increased facility afforded to the EXPECTORATION, the absence of those debilitating Night-Sweats altogether produce the consciousness of relief and permanent cure in the patient's mind. The public will not forget that to us is due the credit of the great and important improvement recently made in the method of inserting Artificial Teeth, both on Gold Plate and Porcelain, and also preserving diseased Teeth and stumps in a healthy condition.

Instruction given in relation to the New Method invented by us, and whole sets inserted in the most difficult mouths, for country or travelling Dentists, on reasonable terms. First Teeth adapted to the mouth on gold plate are far more durable and permanent than upon gold plate, secured in the common way, and will never want resetting. When necessary to mount them on a plate of gold by our method, we extract no sound stumps, preserve the form of the mouth, and secure them as firmly that the patient can eat with them as well as if they were natural teeth, and they will last a whole life-time, and look perfectly natural.

To all who require the services of a Dentist, and particularly such as have been unskillfully served, we would 'make our best bow,' and say, don't wait for an introduction, but call and see us at 238 Washington St. corner of Central Court, Boston, Feb. 19.

POPPING THE QUESTION. The girls dislike proxy speeches. It makes a young lady fidgety to be kept in suspense. If you have a declaration to make, out with it like a man! We admit it is a queer, one sided, a dreadfully awkward business to pop the question. It is really a very funny business, and a sensitive person will naturally shrink from it, but hearken, what thou doest, do quickly. A few words, (when the load is taken off the mind)—a squeeze of the hand—a slight scream followed by a convulsive shudder, and all is over.

GREAT FIRE. Between two and three o'clock on Thursday afternoon last, the lumber yard of Messrs William H. Chamberlain & Co., at Neponset Village, Dorchester, and near the Old Colony Depot, was discovered to be on fire. The wind blew very strong at the time, and low tide, the fire was not arrested until the lumber and two buildings were consumed. The lumber in value would not fall much short of twenty thousand dollars, on which there was an insurance of ten thousand dollars at the Manufacturer's office in Boston, and fifteen hundred at the Weymouth and Braintree Mutual office. The buildings are valued about fifteen hundred dollars, and one was insured at the Manufacturer's office, in Boston, for five hundred dollars, and the other at the Norfolk Mutual in Dedham, for four hundred and fifty dollars. COLLUSION. A new preparation with this name has been recently invented by Mr. S. L. Bigelow, of Boston, for the healing of wounds. It consists of a solution of gun-cotton in ether. The cotton is entirely dissolved, and the preparation seen in a phial is clear as water. When applied to a cut or wound it hardens into a flesh-colored water-proof coating. As the coating dries it contracts, and thus draws the lips of the wound close together, protecting it from irritation, and leaving the least possible scar.

He is a powerful debater and an honest man.

The work contains a vast amount of statistical and historical information, which is of interest to all classes; containing a general view of the political, religious and business institutions, their officers, etc. It has also a brief sketch of some of the first Governors of the State, with fac-similes of their autographs. ## POETRY.

TO A BEE HOVERING OVER THE LIPS OF A SLEEPING GIRL.

There's honey on her cherry lips,
But touch it not adventurous bee;
'Tis poison to the wretch who sips,
I've tried it and it poison'd me.
I did but taste, and, for my pains,
It ran like wild fire through my veins.

The garden rose is not so sweet,
Nor half so rich the tulip's hue;
Yet venture not the dangerous treat,
It maddened me and it may you.

"Twill rob thee of thy power to fly,
And there thou'lt wish to rest and die.

Rose not so near her perfumed breath,
More powerful than the Fairy's spell;
Poor fool! thou goest to thy death,
Its potent charm I know full well.

Yet while I thus would thee advise,
I'm thinking for the tempting prize.

F. M. ADENGTON, Weymouth.

CHARCOAL TO SELL.

The shades of night were falling fast,
When through a Yankee village passed,
A youth who drove through snow and ice,
An ox-drawn with the strange device.

Charcoal to sell.

His brow was black, his eyes well told
That not a burr he had sold,
And like a silver tin-horn rung
The accents of that well-known tongue.

Charcoal to sell.

In happy homes he saw the light
Of walnut fires gleam clear and bright;
Near by the tavern windows shone,
But one passed without a groan.

Charcoal to sell.

"How to your sled," the landlord said,
"Dark lowers the tempest overhead,
Turn out your team and stop awhile,"
But still he answered with a smile.

Charcoal to sell.

"Oh, stay," the daughter said, "and rest
Your dusky head upon this breast!"
A tear stole from his coal-black eye,
But still he answered with a sigh.

Charcoal to sell.

"Beware the pine stumps on your road!
Look out, or you'll upset your load,"
This was the old man's last advice;
"My coal," he cried, "is good and nice."

Charcoal to sell.

At break of day when rowdies shout,
When watchmen sleep, and lamps are out,
There chafin faint that same old song,
A tipsy youth came staggering on.

Charcoal to sell.

The team had stopped far down the road;
But ought to him were team or load,
For fast he held, with grasp of vice,
A bottle with that strange device.

Charcoal to sell.

There in the twilight-gold and grey,
Most beautifully corned he lay,
A tarnished, dimmed, and fallen star,
While boys were shouting near and far.

Charcoal to sell.

SPRING IS COMING.

Spring is coming! Spring is coming!
Birds are chirping, insects humming;
Flowers are peeping from their sleeping,
Streams, escaped from winter's keeping,
In delightful freedom rushing,
Dance along in music gushing.

Scenes of late in deadness saddened,
Smile in animation gladdened;
All is beauty, all is mirth,
All is glory upon earth:

Shout we then in Nature's voice,
Welcome Spring! Rejoice! Rejoice!

Spring is coming—come, my brother,
Let us rove with one another,
To our well remembered wild wood,
Flourishing in Nature's childhood;
Where a thousand flowers are springing,
And a thousand birds are singing;
Where the golden sunbeams quiver
On the verdure girdled river;
Let our youth of feeling out,
To the youth of Nature shout,
While the waves repeat our voice,

ANECDOTES.

A distributor of tracts asked a poor fellow sawing wood, and who looked as if he stood in need of the "gospel," and a clean shirt, if he ever read the Bible? "Yes," said he, "I did wonder, but it's so long ago I forgot the story." And then he fell to amputating the timber again.

The John-Donkey gives the following as the variety of the bar-room:—"I say, Charley, step up, and take a snifter." "Not for all New York, I never drink twice in one day, you know." "Only a little Port, my boy." "Well, I don't care if I do just take a little Port."

"I'd give anything to hear Ole Bull, and an up country less to hear him." Well, answered he, dad's got an old brindle chap, and you can hear him beller a most any time you like.

"G is an very close," it was observed, "he will squabble about a single farthing." "Well," remarked another, "I have always thought that the less one squabbles about the better."

"Man," says Adam Smith, "is an animal that makes bargains. No other animal does this; no dog exchanges bones with another."

SURGEON DENTISTS,
238 Washington Street—near Summer Street,
BOSTON.

PERFORM all Operations belonging to the DENTAL PROFESSION, and continue to Manufacture and insert the purest and best of MINERAL TEETH, upon the most perfect and on all other principles as practiced by the best Dentists in this country and Europe. Every Tooth we fill, and every one we insert, we insure, according to circumstances, and all Dental Plates Work executed at our rooms is warranted to be equal in any that can be produced, and to give perfect satisfaction.

It is in administering the CHLOROFORM every day, with success, and extracting Teeth by the dozen, without pain, and have never known a patient to object unfavorably, and yet we charge no more than when we do not give it.

The public will not forget that to us is due the credit of a great and important improvement recently made in the method of inserting Artificial Teeth upon Gold Plate and Plugs, and also preserving diseased Teeth and stumps in a healthy condition.

Instruction given in relation to the New Method invented by us, and while seats inserted in the most difficult mouths, for country or traveling Dentists, on reasonable terms. First Teeth adapted to the mouth on our plan are far more durable and permanent than upon gold plate, secured in the common way, and will never want resetting. When necessary to mount them on a plate of gold by our method, we extract no sound stumps, preserve the form of the mouth, and secure them so firmly that the patient can eat with them as well as if they were natural teeth, and they will last a whole lifetime, and look perfectly natural.

To all who require the services of a Dentist, and particularly such as have been unsuccessfully served, we would make our best bow, and say, don't wait for an introduction, but call and see us at 238 Washington St. corner of Central Court.

RULES AND REGULATIONS OF THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE OF THE TOWN OF QUINCY.

WITH EXTRACTS FROM THE Laws of the Commonwealth
Relating to Public Schools.

Extracts from the Revised Statutes—Chap. 23.

Sec. 10. The inhabitants of every town shall, at their annual meeting, choose, by written ballots, a School Committee, consisting of three, five or seven persons, who shall have the general charge and superintendence of all the public schools in such town.

Sec. 13. The School Committee shall require full and satisfactory evidence of the good moral character of all instructors, who may be employed in the public schools in their town, and shall ascertain, by personal examination, their literary qualifications and capacity for the government of schools.

Sec. 14. Every instructor of a town or district school shall obtain, of the School Committee of such town, a certificate in duplicate, of his qualifications before he opens such school, one of which shall be filed with the Town Treasurer, before any payment is made to such instructor on account of his services.

Sec. 16. The School Committee, or some one or more of them, shall (for the purpose of making a careful examination) visit each of the district schools in their town, on some day during the first or second week after the opening of such schools, respectively, and also on some day during the two weeks preceding the closing of the same; and shall also, for the same purposes, visit all the schools kept by the town once a month, without giving previous notice thereof to the instructors.

Sec. 17. The School Committee of each town shall direct what books shall be used in the several schools kept by the town; and may direct what books shall be used in the respective classes.

Sec. 18. The scholars at the town schools shall be supplied by their parents, masters or guardians, with the books prescribed for their classes.

Sec. 19. The School Committee of each town may procure, at the expense of the town, or otherwise, a sufficient supply of such class books, for all the schools aforesaid, and shall give notice of the place where such books may be obtained; and the books shall be supplied to the scholars, at such prices, as merely to reimburse the expense of the same.

Sec. 20. In case any scholar shall not be furnished by his parent, master or guardian, with the requisite books, he shall be supplied therewith by the School Committee, at the expense of the town.

Sec. 21. The School Committee shall give notice, in writing, to the Assessors of the town of the names of scholars so supplied by them with books, and of the books so furnished, the prices thereof, and the names of the parents, masters or guardians, who ought to have supplied the same; and said Assessors shall add the price of the books so supplied, to the next annual tax of such parents, masters or guardians; and the amount so added shall be levied, collected and paid into the Town Treasury, in the same manner as the town taxes.

Sec. 22. In case the Assessors shall be of opinion, that any such parent, master or guardian is unable to pay the whole expense of the books so supplied on his account, they shall omit to add the price of such books, or shall add only a part thereof, to the annual tax of such parent, master or guardian, according to their opinion of his ability to pay.

Sec. 23. The School Committee shall never direct to be purchased or used, in any of the town schools, any school books which are calculated to favor the tenets of any particular sect of Christians.

Act passed April 16th, 1836. No child under the age of fifteen years shall be employed to labor in any manufacturing establishment, unless such child shall have attended some public or private day school, where instruction is given by a teacher qualified according to the 1st section of the 23d chapter of the Revised Statutes, at least three months of the twelve months next preceding any and every year in which such child shall be so employed.

Act passed April 13th, 1838. SEC. 1. The School Committee shall annually make a detailed report of the condition of the several public schools in their respective towns, designating particular improvements and defects in the methods or means of education, and stating such facts and suggestions in relation thereto, as in their opinion will best promote the interests and increase the usefulness of said schools; which report shall be read in open town meeting, in February, March or April, in each year, or be printed and distributed for the use of the inhabitants, and shall be deposited in the office of the Clerk of the town; and an attested copy thereof shall be transmitted by said School Committee to the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, with the official return now required by law.

SEC. 2. The School Committee shall select and contract with the teachers for the town and district schools; provided, however, that the teachers may be selected and contracted with by the Prudential Committees as heretofore, whenever the town shall so determine.

Act passed February 23d, 1844. The School Committee of any town are hereby authorized to dismiss from employment any teacher in such town, whenever the said Committee may think proper, and from the time of such dismissal such teacher shall receive no further compensation for services rendered in that capacity.

Act passed March 26th, 1845. Any child unlawfully excluded from public school instruction in this Commonwealth, shall recover damages therefor, in an action on the case, to be brought in the name of said child, by his guardians, or next friend, in any Court of competent jurisdiction to try the same, against the city or town by which such public school instruction is so withheld.

Passed April 16, 1846. In every city and town in the Commonwealth, in which it is now required by law that the school committee shall be elected in the month of February, March or April, the school committee of the year preceding such election, shall continue to hold their office, and to discharge the duties thereof, notwithstanding the election of successors, until the winter terms of the several schools shall have closed, and until the certificate, return, and report, as hereinafter provided, shall have been made and transmitted to the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth: provided, however, that, in regard to the examination of teachers for the summer schools, the visitation of those schools, and all other duties, except the making and transmitting of the said documents, the term of office of the new committee shall be held to commence immediately after their election to the same.

The school committee of each city and town shall, as soon as may be after the first day of May, annually, ascertain by actual examination or otherwise, the number of persons between the ages of four and sixteen years, belonging to such city or town, on the said first day of May, and shall make a certificate thereof, under oath, and also of the sum raised by such city or town for the support of schools, including only wages and board of teachers, and fuel for the schools, during the said year; and shall transmit the same to the Secretary of the Commonwealth, on or before the last day of the following April.

The school committees shall annually make a detailed report of the condition of the several public schools in their respective cities and towns, which report shall contain such statements and suggestions in relation to such schools as the said committees shall deem necessary or proper to promote the interests thereof; and a certified copy of such report shall be transmitted by said committees to the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, on or before the last day of April. Said report shall also be deposited in the office of the clerk of the city or town; and shall either be read in open town meeting in the month of February, March or April, or, at the discretion of the school committee, shall be printed for the use of the inhabitants.

Act Passed March 29, 1847. In addition to the grants of money for common schools, which cities and towns are now by law authorized to make, any city or town may appropriate such further sums of money as it may deem expedient for the support of schools for the instruction of adults in reading, writing, English Grammar, arithmetic, and Geography. Such money shall be assessed, levied, collected and paid into the treasury in the same manner that other town or city taxes are, and shall then be at the disposal of the School Committee of the town or city to be expended by them for the purpose aforesaid in such manner as they may deem expedient.

RULES AND REGULATIONS

RULE 1. From the first day of April to the first day of October, the several schools shall commence at nine o'clock in the forenoon, and at two o'clock in the afternoon, and close at twelve o'clock, noon, and at five o'clock in the afternoon. From the first day of October, they shall commence at half past one o'clock in the afternoon, and close at half past four o'clock. An exception to this rule, in the case of any district, may be made on the written request of the district to that effect.

RULE 2. In those districts where three grades of schools are established, the Primary department shall embrace all scholars between the ages of 4 and 7; the Intermediate department those between 7 and 10; and the Grammar school all over 10 years of age. In districts where there may exist but two grades, the Primary department shall embrace all scholars under 8 years, and all over that age shall be admitted into the Grammar school. The Committee, however, may transfer scholars from one department to another, with reference to qualifications rather than age, whenever they may deem it advisable, in order to equalize the labor of teachers, or to promote the discipline and improvement of the schools.

RULE 3. Pupils in the public schools shall not be dismissed during school hours, nor be absent, nor tardy, without a written or satisfactory excuse to the teacher, from their parents or guardians.

RULE 4. The morning Exercises of all the schools shall commence with reading a portion of the Scriptures, both by the teachers and scholars, not so much as an exercise in reading as to inspire a reverence for the sacred volume, and as a very suitable and becoming mode of commencing the duties of the day.

RULE 5. All the teachers shall be required to keep books in addition to the Registers required by law, in which they shall record the names, ages, absences, delinquencies, amount of improvement of every scholar, and in which such remarks shall be entered respecting the behaviour of the several scholars in and out of school as shall enable the Committee to form a just idea of the state of the schools.

RULE 6. The teachers shall endeavor to vary their modes of instruction as much as possible, and by mingling oral instruction with the use of books, seek to excite and interest the children, and make the exercises pleasant as well as profitable.

RULE 7. The most perfect order, attention and decorum must be preserved in all the schools. This is considered by the Committee of vital importance, and will be insisted on most strenuously. As a general rule, mild and gentle government should be adopted. But when this fails, the instructor is permitted and required to resort to punishment more or less severe, as in his judgment the case may require. In all doubtful cases, or wherever determined wilfulness and habitual misconduct are exhibited, the instructor shall resort for advice to the Committee.

RULE 8. It shall be the duty of the instructors to exercise as far as practicable, a general oversight and care of their pupils, out of school, as well as within its walls. They shall exert their influence to prevent all quarreling and disagreement, all rude and noisy behavior in the streets, all vulgar and profane language, all improper games, and all disrespect to travellers. They shall take special pains to impress upon the minds of their scholars the importance of good manners, and the still higher value of truth, honesty and benevolence.

RULE 9. It shall be the duty of the instructors to take care that the school houses, and all the public property pertaining thereto, shall receive no damage from cutting or marking or other modes of defacing and injuring the same. Their attention is also required to the proper ventilation of the school rooms.

RULE 10. The teachers of the several schools, shall prescribe such rules for the use of the yards and out-buildings, connected with their school houses, as shall insure their being kept in a neat and proper condition.

RULE 11. The teachers shall be excused from keeping school as follows: every Saturday afternoon in the year, Fast day, Thanksgiving day, and the two days following, Christmas day, fourth day of July, and such other times as the Committee specially shall designate.

The following is a list of the Books approved of by the present School Committee, to be used in all the public schools in the town, viz:

CHOOSING A WIFE.

I had a cousin, a clever, charming girl. She could dance gracefully, draw beautifully, and play divinely; she was a most delightful companion, being both sensible and witty; and she could also perform any sort of household work. The latter she was compelled to do, for there was a large family of them. My aunt being unable to keep more than one servant, and my cousin Ellen being the oldest, a good deal of labor fell to her share. This she did not much mind, but always performed it cheerfully and well, only taking care that it should not be known among her acquaintance, fearing, if it were, she should lose the respect and consideration her superior address and accomplishments every where insured her; and as she was at all times seen dressed like a lady, and never at any occupation more useful than knitting, or knotting worsted work, no one suspected her of being able to do what she really did. I cannot say she was without lovers, for she was universally admired and sought; but somehow the young men seemed unanimously to set her down as a fine lady, and she had completed her twenty-second year without having an offer. Her companions all marvelled that she should remain single so long; and I, among the rest, thought it very odd, that though there was often an actual contention for her at a ball, yet no one wished to secure her as a partner for life.

Among our intimates was a gentleman distantly related to my husband, who, I had often suspected, greatly admired my cousin Ellen. But still he made no proposal. By mere chance, I ascertained that she regarded him with feelings more favorable than she had ever entertained for another; and as the match seemed so suitable, I resolved to find out what kept them apart. A long tete-a-tete I had one evening with the gentleman favored my design. After conversing for a time on various subjects, we began to talk of our female acquaintances, and in order to disarm suspicion, I purposely avoided mentioning Ellen's name.

"It is unaccountable to me, Philip," said I, "that you don't begin to look out for a wife; you know what an advocate I am for matrimony, and positively, if you become an old bachelor, I shall cut your acquaintance altogether."

"I have no such intention, I assure you," answered Philip; "and to speak the truth, I have been seeking a wife for a long time past."

"Indeed, you are so impressed with the idea of your own excellencies, that you cannot find a woman worthy of you?" I asked.

"Not so," replied Philip; "but I fear the woman I am most charmed with is not a fit wife for me. I cannot marry a mere fine lady, and yet I require an accomplished woman. My wife must be cultivated and polite, and I should like that she possessed personal charms; many such women have I known; but then she must be amiable, and though quite at home in the drawing-room, she must also understand the details of housekeeping, and be competent to manage a family, to direct the servants, and to take the servant's place if need be."

"Why, it is a rara avis, indeed, that you require," said I, laughing; "I admire your modesty, young gentleman, I must confess, and supposing you were to find such a phoenix, what, may I ask, do you propose as an equivalent, or do you imagine your own pretty person, the privileges of your name, and making the most of your income, would constitute a fair exchange? What could you offer to induce such a rare piece of perfection to accept you for her lord and master?"

"What could I offer?" returned Philip, with warmth; "Why, I could offer myself, not mind you, after the fashion of too many young men of the present day. I would bind myself to her, body and soul. For such a woman I would toil like a slave, if it were necessary; for such a woman I do not say I would die; that is tame; but for such a woman I would live; I would lighten her of every care; I would surround her with every comfort; in short, I would dedicate my whole existence to the promotion of her happiness."

"Gently, gently," cried I; "moderate your transport, and tell me if you know any who approaches near the perfection you demand?"

"I know one," he replied, slightly hesitating, "that I would give much to possess one or two of the requisites, some, I know she has, but the most essential, I fear she wants. Listen to me, my friend. I am at present in flourishing circumstances, but how can I be sure they will continue? Now, I am resolved never to marry a woman who is not a thorough housekeeper. Accomplished beauties too often prove the ruin of their husbands; and, besides, I cannot afford to maintain an expensive establishment. Now your cousin Ellen is the most lovable creature I ever beheld; but then she is not a fine lady, unable to exist without servants to wait on her?"

"By no means," I answered; "Ellen is as notable as she is accomplished and refined; everything in the house is under her direction, and the order you observe in their domestic arrangements is the effect of her management."

"You surprise me," exclaimed Philip; "nay, surely you jest. To confess the truth, I have, in order to discover her sentiments, sometimes hinted at the usefulness of a woman's education, but she has so constantly shrunk from the subject, that I feared she was totally opposed to my views."

"Ha!" said I, "this is Ellen's weak point; but come with me to-morrow, and pay her a morning visit. I promise you shall see her in all her glory."

Accordingly, the next day we went together, and I desired the servant, who showed us into the parlor, not to say I had any one with me, but just tell my cousin that I wished to speak to her, and was in haste. In two minutes down she came, the very picture of health and good humor.

"My dear cousin," she said, not perceiving Philip; "you are a privileged person, for you know I am invisible to company at this hour; what can you want—is it a new pattern, or have you come to help me toss the beds and sweep the rooms?"

At this moment her eye rested on the figure of Philip, reflected in the looking-glass; but finding herself fairly caught, she had too much self-respect to betray any confusion. Gracefully apologizing for her dishabille, which by the way, was most becoming, she entered easily into conversation, and thus completed her conquest of the heart of poor Philip.

Six months after this incident, Philip and Ellen pronounced their vows at Hymen's altar, and I never heard that either of them found cause to repent.

Now, let the young ladies be sure that Philip is not alone in dislike to fine lady wives; it is the feeling shared by the greater number of his sex—indeed, by all the sensible portion. As long as girl-study only to excel in the lighter acquirements of female education, neglecting, nay, despising, the useful and essential, let them not wonder at the large portion of our young men remaining unmarried. How can a man, with any forethought, but shrink at connecting himself with a woman who is ignorant of the commonest duties of a wife and mistress? Blind indeed must love have rendered him, who would take to his hearth and his bosom a being, whose chief recommendations are, that she can play and sing, and dance the polka, and entertain company; and this is the gross amount of requisites many candidates for matrimonial honors command. Such accomplishments are duly appreciated in a ball room, at an evening party, but they are not for every day wear. Man will choose such partners in a quadrille, but not for wives.

REMEDY AGAINST MOTHS.

It is an old custom with some housewives to throw into their drawers every year, a number of fir cones, under the idea that their strong resinous smell might keep away the moth. Now, as the odor of these cones is due to turpentine, it occurred to Reaumur to try the effect of this volatile liquid. He rubbed one side of a piece of cloth with turpentine, and put some moths on the other; the next morning they were all dead, and strange to say they had all voluntarily abandoned their sheaths. On smearing some paper slightly with the oil, and putting this into a bottle with some of the grubs, the weakest were immediately killed; the most vigorous struggled violently for two or three hours, quitted their sheaths, and died in convulsions. It was soon abundantly evident that the vapour of oil or spirits of turpentine acts as a terrible poison to the grubs. Perhaps it may be said that even this remedy is worse than the disease, but, as Reaumur justly observes, we keep away from a newly painted room, or leave off for a few days a coat from which stains have been removed by turpentine, why therefore, can we not once a year keep away a day or two from rooms that have been fumigated with turpentine?

It is, however, surprising how small a quantity of turpentine is required; a small piece of paper or linen just moistened therewith and put into the wardrobe or drawer a single day, two or three times a year, is sufficient preservation against moths.

A small quantity of turpentine dissolved in a little spirits of wine (the vapour of which is also fatal to the moth) will entirely remove the offensive odour, and yet be a sufficient preservative. The fumes of burning paper, wool, linen, feathers, and of leather are also effectual, for the insects perish in a very thick smoke, but the most effectual smoke is that of tobacco. A coat smelling but slightly of tobacco is sufficient to preserve a whole drawer. We trust our fair reader will not scold us for thus affording their husbands or lovers an additional excuse for perpetrating a bad habit.

The vapour of turpentine and the smoke of tobacco are also effectual in driving away spiders, ants, earwigs, bugs, and fleas. The latter tormentors are so abundant on the continent as frequently to deprive the weary traveller of his night's rest. If he would provide himself with a phial, containing turpentine and spirits of wine in equal parts, and would sprinkle a few drops over the sheets and coverlet before retiring to rest, he would probably have reason to be grateful for the hint. Foreigners are in the habit of smoking in their bedrooms—a habit which excites surprise and disgust in England; it will now be seen, however, that there is reason for the practice.—Sharpe's London Magazine.

Audubon. It is said that when Audubon, the distinguished naturalist, arrived in the city of Cincinnati, his poverty was so extreme that he humbly requested permission of a drayman to pull a few hairs from his horse's tail. The novel request was granted, and these hairs Audubon manufactured into rings, which he disposed of for a few cents, and thus laid the foundation of fortune and success in life.

True friendship is like sound health—it is value is seldom known until it is lost.

THE venereal testimony attached to the Native Preparations of Dr. Brant's Indian Pulmonary Balsam is a sufficient attestation to their merits. The soothing influence of the PULMONARY BALM over the raging tortures of the CONSUMPTIVE COUGH, the erosion of their lungs, the increased facility afforded to the EXPECTORATION, the absence of those debilitating Night-Sweats altogether produce the consciousness of relief and permanent cure in the patient's mind. ## HOW TO PROSPER IN BUSINESS.

In the first place make up your mind to accomplish whatever you undertake, decide upon some particular employment, persevere in it. All difficulties are overcome by diligence and assiduity.

Be not afraid to work with your own hands, and diligently too. 'A cat in gloves catches no mice.'

'He who remains in the mill, grinds,' not he who goes and comes.

Attend to your own business and never trust it to another. 'A pot that belongs to many, is ill stirred and worse boiled.' Be frugal. 'That which will not make a pot will make a pot-lid.'

'Be abstemious.' 'Who dainties love shall beggars prove.'

Rise early. 'The sleeping fox catches no poultry.' 'Plow deep while sluggards sleep and you will have corn to sell, and to keep.'

Treat every one with respect and civility. Every thing is gained and nothing lost by courtesy. Good manners ensure success.

Never anticipate wealth from any other source than labor; especially never place dependence upon becoming the possessor of an inheritance.

'He who waits for dead men's shoes may have to go a long while barefoot.' 'He who runs after a shadow has a wearisome race.'

Above all things never despair. 'God is where he was.' 'Heaven helps those who help themselves.'

RICH AND POOR. Dr. Channing, in one of his excellent essays, thus contrasts the difference between the rich and poor: 'When I compare together the different classes as existing at this moment in the civilized world, I cannot think the difference between the rich and the poor, in regard to mere physical suffering, so great as it is sometimes imagined. That some of the indigent among us die of scanty food is undoubtedly true; but vastly more in this community die from eating too much than from eating too little; vastly more from excess than starvation. So as to clothing, many shiver from want of defences against the cold, but there is vastly more suffering among the rich from absurd and criminal modes of dress, custom has sanctioned, than among the poor from deficiency of raiment. Our daughters are often brought to the grave by their rich attire, than our beggars are by their nakedness. So the poor are often overworked, but they suffer less than among the rich who have no work to do, no interesting object to fill up life, to satisfy the infinite cravings of man for action. According to our present modes of education, how many of our daughters are victims of ennui, a misery unknown to the poor, and more intolerable than the weariness of excessive toil! The idle young man, spending the day in exhibiting his person in the street, ought not to excite the envy of the overworked poor; and this number of the ground is found exclusively among the rich.'

THREE FAULTS OF NURSES. To lip in a baby style, when the same words, in an endearing tone, would please as well; the reverse should—the voice clear, emphatic, and each syllable distinctly articulated for imitation.

2. To tell of witches, ghosts and goblins; such superstitions, impressed upon young minds, are rarely gotten rid of.
3. To direct a child to act like a man; whereas it is not often becoming for a little boy to ape the man, but not only to conform his demeanor to his age; every age has its own peculiar decorousness.

SPINSTERS. Formerly, women were prohibited from marrying until they had spun a set of bed furniture; and, till their wedding, were consequently called spinsters, which continues to this day in all legal proceedings.

For the Quincy Patriot.
HAY SCALES.

The Committee appointed by general consent in behalf of the town of Quincy, to superintend the sale and removal of the building over the Hay Scales, have been very vigilant in the discharge of their onerous and important duty. From seventy-five to one hundred members of the committee were present while the building was on its passage to its present location and every thing that could in any-wise compromise the honor of the town was most carefully avoided. It was a subject of regret to the Committee that the sum realized by the sale of the building was not larger, yet when it is considered that the purchaser paid at least twice the value, no blame should be attached to the committee. A large sub-committee have been in daily and constant attendance at the repairs of the scales, but owing to the peculiar character and object of the work, it was deemed advisable, therefore the undertaking has progressed slowly. The committee are of opinion (unanimously we believe) that unless some unforeseen accident occurs the scales will be ready for use some time or other. On one point the committee have been somewhat divided, and after many anxious and important consultations they have yet come to no definite conclusion. The subject of difference was this—when the old platform was removed the boys of the town (likely enough the sons of members of the committee) descended in the cellar and sitting there, after scraping over the dirt and sifting the same through their fingers, found sundry articles of value, to-wit: a rusty jack-knife—a brumagen ninepence, and four marbles, (three of the class called commoners and one alley-tor) and the question arose among the committee and which caused the discussion was as to the proprietorship of the articles aforesaid. Some were for an immediate suit in behalf of the town—others thought that they belonged to the Centre District, and a paper was prepared for signers to sustain the Chairman in maintaining the suit and would have been presented, had not some member sneeringly remarked that the signers would be likely to back out if there was anything to pay, and thus the matter stands at present.

The Committee trust that the chain to be put across one end of the platform will not maintain its position for more than ten or a dozen people annually.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, APRIL 22, 1848

John A. Green, Editor.

THE PRESIDENT. At the late whig festival, in honor of Hon. Henry Clay, at Philadelphia, a letter was read from the distinguished statesman, in which he expresses his willingness to submit his name to the National Convention as a candidate for the Presidency, and to be subject to the decision of that convention.

Cassius M. Clay, abolitionist and a volunteer in the Mexican war, has written a long communication in reply to the above letter and winds up by saying, that "Henry Clay can never be President of these United States."

BECOME A LAWYER. At the recent term of the Court of Common Pleas, at Plymouth, William H. Spear, Esq., of Dedham, was admitted, upon examination, to practise as an attorney and counselor at law, in all the Courts of this Commonwealth. We presume this gentleman to be an old acquaintance, who for a short period occupied the "chair editorial" of a political journal formerly published in Roxbury, and more generally known as a school teacher. We wish him abundant success in his new avocation, and hope to see his "familiar collocation," once more.

ASTHMA AND PHTHISIC CURD. An individual of Gloucester, in this State, of undoubted veracity, states that he has been cured as well as many others of his acquaintance, of this distressing complaint by the use of cold water. His method is to apply a very coarse towel, perfectly wet, to the whole surface of the body and extremities, and then a dry one, equally coarse, with as much friction as possible. Sea water is preferable, but if not at hand, make your spring water about as salt. The best time for the purpose is the evening at the retiring hour, and will not occupy more than fifteen minutes.

NEW PRESIDENT. Alfred C. Hersey, Esq., of Boston, formerly of Hingham, has been elected President of the South Shore Railroad Company, vice Caleb Stetson, of Braintree, resigned. We learn that the work on this route is progressing with much rapidity, and that an addition has been recently made in the number of laborers employed.

IMPROVEMENTS. The Contractor for filling up the Neck lands has commenced upon the bridge over the South Bay on which a track is to be laid for a railway from the Old Colony road to the city lands of Boston. The road is to run from near the crossing on the South Boston Turnpike to the vicinity of Urann's Wharf, on Harrison Avenue. It is stated that the gravel is to be taken from the lands of the late Col. Edward Glover of this town, being a portion of the eminence called Mount Hope.

APPOINTMENTS. Rev. Azariah B. Wheeler has been again stationed as a preacher in this town, by the Methodist Conference, at their late meeting.

We notice also the following appointments for the neighboring towns, viz: Dorchester, J. W. Merrill; East Weymouth, Henry H. Smith and Stephen Puffer; Roxbury, J. D. Bridge; Stoughton, Joseph Macready; Hull and Cohasset, Lewis Bates and George A. Winchester; Hingham, Thomas Spilsted.

ESCAPE AND CAPTURE OF SLAVES. Some seventy-seven slaves absconded from the District of Columbia and neighborhood on the night of the 15th inst., in a Philadelphia vessel down the Potomac. They were re-taken together with the Captain (Baker) of the vessel and his crew and imprisoned in the jail in Washington City, which has been strongly guarded. The greatest excitement prevails.

Two evenings afterwards a large crowd assembled in front of the office of the New Era newspaper, an anti-slavery journal, and commenced throwing missiles, breaking windows, doors, etc., but the progress of the mob was finally stayed by the arrival of the police, and by the efforts of sundry citizens, who made addresses on the occasion.

ELECTION OF PRESIDENT. In the event of no choice of President by the people next November, the election will in the first place, go to the House of Representatives. If the House does not choose a President previous to the 4th of March next following the day of election, the Vice President is to act as President. If the Electors fail to choose a Vice President, the choice devolves upon the Senate who are to choose one from the two highest candidates.

GREAT FIRE IN NEW YORK. A fire occurred in New York Friday night, which was more destructive than any which has taken place since the great conflagration of 1845. It originated in a Cabinet Maker's shop, 118 Wooster street, and spread with such rapidity, that ten or twelve three-story brick buildings were totally consumed before the flames could be subdued. The loss is estimated at $150,000. Insured $75,000.

JOHN JACOB ASTOR. The N. Y. Journal of Commerce states that the value of the estate of the late John Jacob Astor does not exceed $7,500,000, of which about $4,000,000 is real, and $3,500,000 personal.

They have got up a report in New York that John Jacob Astor was never naturalized. If such is the case, his immense property must revert to the State, a sum which could amply provide for the liquidation of the State debt, and provide for the School Fund.

LEGISLATURE. Little business of public importance has been transacted in General Court during the past week.

The House have rejected the committee's license bill, but passed to a third reading (111 yeas to 108 nays,) a short substitute which is prohibitory so far as drinking on the premises where sold is concerned. This is the only essential alteration from the present law.

A motion to indefinitely postpone the whole subject was rejected.

SAYINGS. Hon. Harace Mann occupies for the present the seat of Mr. Grinnell of this State, left temporarily vacant in the absence of that gentleman. The seat formerly occupied by Ex-President Adams is now in possession of Mr. Vinton of Ohio.

It is reported that Hon. Mr. Mann does not intend to resign his office as Secretary of the Board of Education at present, but will resume his duties in the summer, as soon as Congress shall adjourn.

WEYMOUTH TOWN OFFICERS. The following gentlemen were elected town officers for the ensuing year at the recent annual meeting:

Town Clerk—Oran White.
Treasurer—Thomas Nash.
Selectmen—Noah Vining, Jr., Nathan Canterbury, Leonard B. Tirrell.

Assessors—Thomas R. Hanson, Allen Vining, Wm. B. Raymond.

Overseers of the Poor—Alvah Raymond, James Tirrell, Samuel Reed.

School Committee—Appleton Howe, William Bartlett, Joshua Emery, Jr., Noah Vining, Jr., Nathan Canterbury, Josiah Ball, Willard M. Harding.
Constables—Silas Binney, Henry Loud.

PROPOSALS FOR THE LOAN. The Secretary of the Treasury has issued proposals for a loan of $12,000,000, at six per cent interest, reimbursable in twenty years after July next. Bids will be received for sums of fifty dollars and upward, and will be opened at the Treasury Department on the 17th of June next, in the presence of such persons as may desire to attend.

At the election for an Alderman, in Boston, to fill a vacancy, no choice was effected. William Hayden, lately one of the editors of the Atlas, was the regular whig candidate.

The Post Office Department at Vera Cruz being now conducted by the Mexican Postmaster, under the Mexican laws on postage, the attention of persons in the United States corresponding with the army or navy, is urgently called to the necessity of having their letters properly directed, specifying the corps of department to which their correspondents belong.

The town of Taunton, at a late meeting, constituted the Selectmen and Constables a Committee to prosecute all persons who are guilty of selling intoxicating liquors contrary to law: and voted also, that the Selectmen be authorized to draw their warrant on the Treasurer to defray the expenses of the prosecutions.

The hotels of Camden, (N. J.) were all closed on Sunday, in consequence of the operation of a law passed by the Legislature of that State, prohibiting the selling of refreshments of any kind on the Sabbath.

It is stated that Joseph Chapman, the well known crowing politician in Indiana, died recently in Mexico.

Boats are now running from New York to Albany, more than one hundred and twenty miles distance, for fare as low as twelve and a half cents.

The robbers of the President of the Chester County Bank, Pennsylvania, have been arrested at Matamoros, Mexico, and now await the requisition of the Governor of that State. About forty thousand dollars of the money will be recovered.

The Selectmen of Barnstable have agreed that each member of every family in that town, may have five dozen herring, by paying the catcher one cent per dozen for fresh, or two and a half cents for salted and stuck.

It is 1817 twenty barges did the whole carrying on the Mississippi, and 160 keel boats on the Ohio, making the whole tonnage less than 7000 tons. In 1846 the steamboat tonnage alone was 249,055 tons, and the amount carried during that year was 3,410,336 tons, valued at $185,406,719.

The New York Legislature has provided for a permanent Normal School at Albany. The sum of fifteen thousand dollars is appropriated for a building, and five thousand dollars a year for the maintenance of the school.

A report from the Land Office shows that the State of New York still owns more than four hundred thousand acres of uncultivated land.

By the new constitution of New York, the pay of the members ceases after they have been in session one hundred days. The good effect of this law has been already manifest by the adjournment of the late session on their last pay day.

George Washington Dixon of "Zip Coon" notoriety, has sailed from New Orleans for Yucatan in command of twenty men with two cannon. He has issued an address to the Yucatecos.

Another new steamer, called the Connecticut, has been built in New York for the People's Line, intended for Long Island Sound, to ply between New York and Stonington, will be ready to commence running by the first of May, when it is expected that the connection of the Providence and Stonington railroads will be completed.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

"GIVE ME LIBERTY OR DEATH!"
Hark like the distant thunder's sound
A murmur trembles on the air;
And now its echoes shake the ground,
The starting notes are wafted near.

"Tis the voice of France exclaiming,
"Give me liberty or death!"
"Tis her sons a Tyrant shaming,
Scorning with a nation's breath.

France in arms for right contending,
Fierce as the volcano's fire
Tyrant's Throne and Palace rending,
Shakes the Nations with her ire.

Despots, look! the world is rising,
Freedom's banner waves on high,
Man, nor life, nor fortune pining,
Liberty his only cry.

Will you brave the rash of Nations!
They are waving Slavery's pall,
Give to Freedom due oblations,
Or beneath her vengeance fall.

Long the suffering world lay groaning,
While your feet their necks have pressed;
Thou' your sins are past atoning,
Num'rous wrongs may be redressed.

In the balance weigh'd and wanting,
Throneless will your future be;
Millions for the conflict pining,
Swear to perish or be free.

Equal rights the world is claiming,
And 'till death they will maintain,
E'er your palace are flaming,
Loose oppression's galling chain

Think not by the sword or fetters,
Freedom's onward march to bound;
While her name in fables lingers,
Stamp'd on every heart is found.

Will you brave the rash of nations!
They are waving Slavery's pall,
Give to Freedom due oblations,
Or beneath her vengeance fall.

*Patrick Henry.

HONOR TO ALL HANDICRAFTS.

Honor to him whose snow'd arm
Swings the ponderous sledge;
Honor to him whose sturdy hand
Delivers at the fruitless hedge;
To every toiler who strives
To beautify the earth,
Be honor and fame for greater
Than to men of kingly birth.

To toil—it is to fill complete
The Lord of Life's command,
To crown with golden fruit and grain,
The wilds of every land;
To rear the mansion and the cot,
In city or in glen,
That joys and sweet content may meet
Around the homes of men.

Who makes a blade of grass grow
Where there grew none before,
Is greater than the demi-god
Whose mantle drips with gore;
Then plant the spade in desert grounds
And make its treasures spring,
To bless the hand and home of him
Who's greater than a king!

ANECDOTES.

"Iswanny," exclaimed a green horn from the country, as he gazed at a sign-board in garden street, bearing the inscription "Mysterious Girl, No. 17," "I tell you, mister, I never heard tell of the girl, and I never heard tell of the girl, and I never heard tell of the girl."

"Dick," of the New Orleans Delta gives the following good one:—"The people of Mexico had been told that the Americans eat children, and all these pledges of love had been renewed. 'Lieut. M. of the Dragons, having heard this story, accosted a man, and asked him if he knew where he could get a 'nice fat boy for supper'—adding that he was 'very hungry.'"

"The astonished Mexican answered, with a 'doleful shake of the head, 'Any no.'"

"Well," said M., "as I'm hungry, I ain't particular—let us have a little girl, then."

"The poor man, still more horrified, declared that there was none of these in the village."

M. then turned to him and inquired, "Well, show me a market where I can get a nice piece of a full grown man."

"This was too much for the Mexican, and he took to his heels in the twinkling of a jack-knife."

"Are fond of flowers, child?" "O, yes, ma'am. I'm wonderful fond of 'em."

"Which kind do you like best, my dear?" "O, I like cauliflower pretty well, but boiled cauliflower is best!"

A jolly tar was accidentally knocked over-board from his vessel at one of our wharves a few days ago, and swimming to the rudder, was, though safe, for a time out of sight of the rest of the crew. The Captain, feeling alarmed, called over the stern:

"Hallo! Jack, are you there?"
"Yes," was the ready reply.
"How are you getting on below, there?" was the next interrogatory.
"Oh swimmingly!" shouted the floundering sailor.

"Would you believe it, aunt," exclaimed a pale-faced young lady of the upper ten,—"would you believe? Uncle Solomon, here, tells me the ladies do like West actually speak to the tradesmen and retail storekeepers!" They must be badly in want of society, must they?"

"Humph! yes," interposed Uncle Solomon, "they are as badly off for society, dear, as your father was when he pulled radishes and asparagus for a living, and your mother sold them in the old Fly Market. Ha! ha! society—humph!"

If we are administering the Chloroform every day with success, and extracting Teeth by the dozen, without pain, and have never known it to affect the patient unfavorably, and yet we charge so much more than we do not give it.

The public will not forget that to us is due the credit of the great and important improvement recently made in the method of inserting Artificial Teeth, both on Gold Plate and Pains, and also preserving diseased Teeth and stumps in a healthy condition.

By instruction given in relation to the Mar. 4 had invented by us, and whole sets inserted in the most difficult mouths, for country or travelling Dentists, on reasonable terms. Patent Teeth adapted to the mouth on our plan are far more durable and permanent than upon gold plate, secured in the common way, and will never want resetting. To all who require the services of a Dentist, and particularly such as have been unskillfully served, we would make our best bow, and say, don't wait for an introduction, but call and see us at

MISCELLANY.

A COUSIN'S KISS.

'There's something in a kiss,
'That never comes amiss.'

Booyant with the spirit of youth, about returning home after an absence of several years, I looked forward with an almost childish glee to my meeting with my affectionate uncle and aunt. Having finished my profession, the fond recollections of the past seemed to vie in affording pure joy to the present and equally to inspire me with emotions of delight. I was an orphan, with neither brother or sister; but then I had a blooming cousin, and that was pretty much the same thing, for we had grown together from almost infancy; and if she was not a sister, I was not then philosopher enough to know the difference.

During my travel homeward, I tried to picture to myself the scenes so fondly loved, from which I had so long been separated; and whenever my imagination reverted to my cousin, which I confess it frequently did, I saw the fancied transport with which she would welcome me home. Alas! that we should be so vain.

I was received with open arms and evident pleasure by kind relatives, and when I was kissed by them all—uncle, aunt, nurse, down almost to the washerwoman—it was absolutely outrageous—positively shocking! that Harriet, my pretty, blushing cousin, should alone refuse the kiss most desired.

Such, then, was the termination of all my glowing day-dreams, and though her eyes did sparkle with joy, it was not exactly the meeting I had expected. But she was so sorely I could not get angry; it would have been ungallant in the extreme if I could, and I understood the female heart well enough to know that resentment was not the way to obtain the wished for kiss. That she who used to treat me with such frank, and artless familiarity, herself as gentle, playful and innocent as a fawn, and whom I found the same fair being as formerly, with the exception that she was far more beautiful, and had a little less of the girl about her; I say that she should be thus reserved and obstinate—why? I declare, it was really too bad! How could I win the coveted boon?

I was puzzled! My cousin was so popular that all the beaux in the country were in her train; and I had but two months to stay before commencing my profession; and yet, notwithstanding these difficulties, I was resolved to gain the kiss a thousand times more valued, now that it was so pertinaciously withheld. I must try.

There was one of her suitors named Sumner, who she seemed to like better than the rest; and I must say, that during the first month of my visit, she coquetted with him a good deal at my expense. It used to give me a touch of uneasiness now and then, but I consoled myself with the reflection that I was not in love, that there was no sense in being jealous, and besides, Mr. Sumner's favorable reception had nothing to do with my object of gaining a kiss. So I took to teasing my pretty cousin about her favorite lover. This made a great change in her conduct, as I soon perceived. She denied the charge at first, and then grew really worried that I wouldn't believe her, and finally showed me a pretty marked preference on every occasion. But I was only a cousin and nobody took any notice of it. My walks and conversations were all set down on the score of coquetry, but they were so delicious that I had regretted that the time had come for me to begin to think of departure, and wished that one's cousin might be with one forever, but I was not worth one copper dollar, unless I could get some heir to marry me for pity, and saw no way of living without roughing it through life, so that it was necessary that I should do something for myself. I was too proud to trespass further upon the bounty of my uncle, or rather I felt too keenly the sense of my boundless obligations to him already, to be guilty of a still greater dependence on him; for it had been through his generosity that I had been placed at a profession, and he had declared his intention of aiding me still farther in my professional career. I must therefore, have been very ungrateful indeed to have been long idle; so my visit was nearly up. Happy, too happy, had been those two short months, and Harriet was the centre of it all. She, sweet angel, like all the rest, charged it to coquetry; but I at last began to open my eyes, and half suspected the truth, for I had noticed that my cousin, unconscious to herself, seemed very fond of my presence. All this I learned by close observation of her conduct and innumerable trifles; many a monarch would have given her his broad lands, his greatest victories, or the finest jewels in his crown to win such little tokens of affection from the one he loved. Well, the two months were up, and in all this time I had not got a kiss from my cousin.

It was the night but one before I was to go away. I determined to make a last effort. We were sitting by the window, and the old folks were out; my poor cousin looked pensive and doubtless felt so. I was somewhat sentimental myself. It was just the time for melting thoughts; and the moon shone tenderly upon the river in the distance, pouring her silver light like fairy verdure upon the distant hills. Harriet sat by my side, and we were talking of my approaching departure.

'I shall be very busy, to-morrow, Harriet,' said I, 'and do not know whether I shall be able to come in here in the evening.'

She slowly raised her dark eyes to mine, till her very soul seemed pouring out beneath the long lashes, and seeming to look right through me, answered—

'Why not? you know how glad we shall be to see you.'

'Because,' said I, a little piqued at the word we, for to tell the truth, I half suspected I was in love, and of course flattered myself that I was reciprocal, 'I shall be very busy; and besides, I heard Sumner ask you the other night to go to H—— to-morrow night with him, and of course, my pretty coz, you —'

'There goes that Sumner again,' said she, 'I declare you are so provoking; you know what I think of him.'

'Ah! but,' replied I wickedly, 'actions speak louder than words; why make engagements on the night who old companion is going away.'

Her gaiety was stopped at once. She hesitated an instant and then answered—

'I told him I would answer him to-day—but I thought we were all going together; but I'll send him a note declining at once. You know you don't mean what you said, William.'

I laughed it off and directly arose to depart.

'How very soon you are going,' said she, in a voice with something unusually melancholy in its gentle tones.

'Are you going to kiss me?' said I gaily, after a little merry conversation; cousins always do at parting.'

'Indeed I ain't!' said she saucily.

'Indeed you ought to,' said I earnestly.

'Indeed you are mistaken for once.'

'Isn't it your duty,' said I.

She said nothing, but looked as if doubtful whether I was quizzing her or not.

'I can prove it by Talmud,' said I.

A smile began to flicker around the corner of her mouth.

'I can establish it by text!'

'Indeed,' said she, smiling archly at my anticipated perplexity. But I was ahead of her.

'Do unto others as you would others should do unto you?' isn't it my pretty coz?'

'Well, you really deserve something for your wit, did you learn that while studying your profession?' and her eyes danced as she answered me.

I saw I was no match for her, so I betook myself to another ground.

'Well, good-by, coz.'

'So early?'

'Early!' and I began to put on my gloves.

'You'll be here to-morrow night, won't you?'

'Do you really wish me?'

'How can you doubt?' said she warmly.

'But I shall interrupt a tete-a-tete with Mr. Sumner,' said I teasingly.

'Phaw! Mr. Sumner again,' said she pettishly.

There was a moment's silence, at its end came a low half-suppressed sigh. I began to think I was upon the right track.

'You won't give me a kiss!—if now it was to mend Mr. Sumner's glove or —'

'It is too provoking,' said she in a pensive tone, 'how can you think I care for him?'

'How can I? you do fifty things for him you wouldn't do for me.'

'You don't think so.'

'Indeed I do,' said I.

'William!'

'I ask for the smallest favor. I take this one for a sample, and you refuse; you are very unfair, cousin,' and I took her hand.

'Why?' said she, lifting her dark eye till its gaze met mine, and her voice trembled a little as she repeated, 'Why?'

'Because you never do any thing I ask you to.'

'Indeed I do! you know I do,' said she, earnestly.

'I wish I could think so,' said I positively.

We were standing by the window, and I thought her hand trembled as I spoke; but she turned her head away with a sigh, and without speaking, gazed out upon the lawn.

At another time, perhaps, she would have listened to my language differently, but I was going away, perhaps forever, and the thought made her pensive. Yet she did not know her own feelings, something told her to grant my boon—it was a trifle—it seemed too foolish to hesitate; but then something whispered to her that she ought not to do it. But then it would be so reserved and uncourtly to refuse; and might I not justly be offended at her prudery? I could hear her breathe, and see her snowy bosom heave with contending emotions. The conflict was going on between love and reserve, and yet, poor girl, she knew it not! but I had seen more of the world than my unsophisticated cousin.

'And you really won't come to-morrow evening —'

'She paused and blushed, while the low, soft, half-reproaching tone in which she smote me to the heart, and almost made me repent my persistence. But then it was so pretty to see her perplexed!'

'Harriet,' said I, 'I feel grieved; you do not think that I would trifle with you. I never before tried to test how true were the professions of those I love, and if one is to be thus bitterly deceived, I care not to try again; and half letting go her hand, I turned partially away.'

For a second she did not answer, but she looked upon the floor, and as she everted her head I saw a tear-drop fall. Directly a cloud came over the moon, and just as the whole room was buried in darkness, I heard a sigh that seemed to come from the depths of my cousin's heart. I felt a breath like a zephyr steal across my face, a thrill went through every nerve, as I felt her soft glowing kiss! I had conquered! But a tear was on my face, and as I pressed her hand more warmly than became a cousin, a sudden revulsion of feeling came across her, the true secret of her delicacy flashed like sunlight upon her mind, and feeling how she had betrayed herself, her head fell upon my shoulder, and I heard a sob.

My heart stung me, and I would have given worlds to have saved her from that moment of agony. But in another instant came the consciousness that I loved her, and pressing my arm gently around her, I drew her tenderly towards me. We spoke no word, we whispered no vow, but as I felt how pure a heart I had won, a flash of holy feeling swept across my soul. That moment I shall never forget. She ceased to sob, but she did not yet look up. I might have been five minutes, or it might have been half an hour—I could keep no measure of time.

'Dear Harriet!'

'Will you come to-morrow night?' whispered she, lifting her dark eyes timidly to my countenance.

'How can I refuse, dearest,' said I, kissing tears from her cheeks.

'No love—but now'—and pressing her again to my throbbing bosom, and imprinting on her lips, a kiss, a burning, a passionate kiss, I murmured 'good night, dearest,' and we parted.

The next morning I was greeted by a glance from my cousin, which eloquently told the feelings of her heart. Her embarrassment did not escape the penetration of my good uncle, and when he heard the particulars of our interview his laugh rung loud and joyous, in spite of the blushes of my dear Harriet. Though that was many years ago, I am still a very happy man; no less happy than when my lovely cousin first became my wife.

TRIMMING TREES.

Many trim their fruit trees early because they have more leisure than in May and June. But early trimming is not good, as the wounds never heal so soon as when the trees are growing.

A great error is committed by trimming excessively. It is better to trim a little each year, than to wait for a good growth of firewood before trimming. A good general rule is, never to cut limbs that will not be likely to heal over in two years. One inch and a half in diameter is as large as any limb ought to grow in case it is not to remain permanently on the tree.

In regard to young trees just transplanted, there is a prevalent notion that as much of the top should be lopped as was lopped from the roots on taking up the tree. But this is no rule to govern in such cases. A small top can have but small growth, for wood is made in a summer in proportion to the amount of healthy leaves borne by the tree.

The sap is elaborated through the leaves, and made into sap wood, or albumen. A few leaves cannot elaborate much sap, and many young standards suffer for want of leaves.

We have often seen grown men strip off all the leaves that were on the trunks of young trees in the nursery. You can hardly injure young trees more than by thus robbing them of their leaves. Limbs might be cut to from a good top; leaves are never injurious, but are all needful to set the sap in motion.—Ploughman.

A man is half an inch taller in the morning than he is at night—owing to the relaxation of the cartilages.

COURTESY IN THE FAMILY.

If any one doubts whether the family circle is a frequent witness of a want of due courtesy, even among its well disposed members, let him apply one test which to us seems perfectly safe, that is, which never unjustly casts censure, though often too liberal in its acquittals, viz: Would you speak thus to husband, wife, sister, brother, child, etc., if a stranger was present?

We of course do not refer to the thousand instances in which a parent unbends himself to engage in the sports and frolics of his child, nor to language uttered in the way of judicious discipline, but to ordinary intercourse as among companions and associates.

Not only will this test condemn all rudeness on the part of equals in age and condition, but of parents in their intercourse with children, and of teachers with pupils. 'The I will,' and 'I won't,' so obnoxious on the part of children, none of our friends, though our ears do, even now, hear sometimes, from those almost or quite at years of 'freedom,' language equally impudent, addressed even to the aged. But such gross instances of impropriety are too universally censurable, to need comment. Not only is it wrong for children to use such language to parents, or pupils to teachers, but it is equally wrong for parents and teachers thus to address children and scholars. It is uncourtly, and they have no right to set such an example before the young. A parent or teacher has no more right to trample upon the rules of good breeding and kindness than anybody else. In some respects such an example from them is fraught with the greatest possible evil.

The language of refinement only should be tolerated in a family or in a school room, and the heads of those institutions should be the last to violate this rule.

Our public tables, the coach, car, and steamboat, would not exhibit so much of the ludicrous nor of the offensive, if this rule was strictly observed in the family circle, and in the school room.

If parents would always exhibit courtesy in their intercourse with their children, in most cases, children would be courteous to each other and to their associates and acquaintances.

THE ARKANSAS MAN.

One time an Arkansas man, a genuine character who had been born and bred in the backwoods, happened to be in a river town on the banks of the 'Father of Waters,' when one of its largest and most magnificent steamboats was lying at the pier. Our hero was magnificently clad in a wolf skin cap, and blue homespun trousers, thrust into his enormous cowhide boots. His huge red hands were adorned with brass rings, and numerous warts as large as nutmegs, which gave note of his approach as he walked, like the rattle of the reptile. Attracted by the sound of music, the genius strolled on board the boat and accosted the Captain.

'Mornin' stranger. Pretty peart music hereabouts. What mought'n it come out of?'

'A piano-forte, sir.'

'A what?'

'Piano-forte!'

'Never heern of one them're things before. Where mought it be stranger?'

'In the lower cabin, sir.'

'Mought I take a look at the — thing?'

'Certainly, sir, walk down.'

The Arkansas man needed no further information. He went 'down stairs' into the cabin, where two tables were laid out for dinner. Walking up the narrow passage between them, he swept off knives and forks by the swing of his coat-flaps; but so intent was he upon the music and piano at the farther end of the cabin, that he heeded not the ruin he had created. Approaching the instrument he literally devoured it with his eyes. The young lady who was seated at it, continued playing, and the 'stranger' was wrapped in silent wonder. At length, when the sounds ceased, he raised his cap respectfully, and addressed the audience:

'Ladies, I'm much obliged to you for the kindness you have done me. I never heard one of them afore, and never 'spect to again.'

'You appear to be very much pleased with it,' observed a lady.

'Why, yes, madam, I am—somewhat—and perhaps I should like it better if I had an ear for music—like my brother. Yes—I like it well enough—but if my brother Dick could only hear that 'ere—thing—ladies, he'd tear his shirt and fall right thru' it!'

A CHALLENGE. When Judge Thatcher was member of Congress from Massachusetts, he was challenged to fight a duel by Mr. Blount, a member from North Carolina, for words spoken in debate. The Judge, on reading the message from Blount, after adjusting his wig and revolutionary hat, said to the bearer—'Give my respectful compliments to your master, and tell him he cannot have a definite answer to day. Let him be patient a short time, till I can write to Portland and receive an answer. I always consult my wife on matters of importance, well knowing that she is a better judge of family affairs than myself. If she consents to take the choice of becoming a widow, or having her husband hanged for murder, I certainly will fight Blount. Tell him not to be in a hurry; it will not take more than three weeks to receive her selection.'

Lard never spoils in warm weather, if it is cooked enough in frying out.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, APRIL 29, 1848.

John A. Green, Editor.

IMPORTANT NEWS. The steamer Acadia arrived at Boston on Sunday. Her advice is to the 8th inst.

Sir George Gray had given notice of his intention to introduce a bill for the better security of the Crown, and a proclamation had been issued forbidding all to attend a meeting of the Chartist.

The Government seem determined on bringing matters to an issue, and large bodies of cavalry, infantry, and artillery have been drafted into the metropolis, so that it is computed the force in the city at present cannot be less than ten thousand men.

The position of affairs in Ireland is every day becoming more alarming and complicated, and the friends of order and existing institutions are now apprehensive of a long and deadly conflict between the authorities and the populace of Ireland. The people are arming themselves throughout the country.

The news from France is not particularly important. The general election of the representatives of the people had been postponed to the 23d of April. The National Assembly is to meet on the 4th of May next.

In Belgium all attempts to overthrow the government or create disturbances had failed.

The accounts from every part of Germany are calculated to excite great and increasing solicitude. These elements of public order and national greatness still remain; but events have occurred, and a revolutionary spirit has manifested itself, which greatly increases the difficulties of a task at all times most difficult.

A war between Prussia and Russia was accounted certain.

The Emperor of Russia is taking very decided measures with regard to Poland.

There had been considerable excitement in Spain on the reception of the news of the refusal of Queen Victoria to receive the Duke and Duchess of Montpensier. Quite a disturbance took place at Madrid.

INSTRUMENTAL CONCERT. A correspondent who signs himself "An old inhabitant of Quincy" writing from South Braintree on the 20th inst., says:—"The inhabitants of this place and vicinity were highly gratified and delighted at the concert of the Union Weymouth and Braintree Brass Band, given here last evening, at the Town House, under the excellent direction of Prof. A. Bond, the leader of the Boston Cornet Band. All their music was performed with excellent precision and taste; and the performance of a few pieces, especially the popular Sleigh Waltz and Railroad Gallopade, we venture to say could hardly be excelled. They evinced in every way that they had been under excellent discipline and instruction. One or two solos were performed by their accomplished instructor on the Trombone and Clarinet, to hear which would in themselves alone remunerate any one for his time and money. We hear that they intend sometime in the next week to visit Quincy. We hope that they will be greeted with a crowded house, for they indeed deserve it. We make bold to say that no one who hears it will regret the small amount demanded for admission. Do give them a strong house."

MEXICO. There has been an arrival from Vera Cruz bringing dates to the 9th inst. Santa Anna sailed on the 5th for Venezuela. The elections for city officers had taken place in Vera Cruz and Mexico. The American troops marched out of the city and remained till the polls were closed. No quorum had been formed in the Mexican Congress. Opinions are very various as to the ratification of the Treaty. It was supposed at Vera Cruz that General Scott and suit and Mr. Triet, would leave Mexico about the 5th inst. "The court having adjourned its sitting to the United States."

MAY BALL. On Monday evening ensuing, a ball will take place at the Town House, in honor of the Queen of May. A goodly number will be present and Blanchard's full band will discourse excellent music. The supper will be at the Hancock House, and the "Dep. Mine Host's" reputation needs no recommendation; it is said by all to be good, excellent and superior, beyond conception. This ball will probably be the last of the season, and therefore the admirers of an agreeable and healthy recreation should enjoy it.

"Pub. Doc." We are indebted to the kindness of Hon. Horace Mann, for several Congressional documents. His attention is duly appreciated. We have not yet seen a printed copy of the proceedings in relation to the death of Hon. John Quincy Adams, which, we believe, were ordered to be printed by Congress.

FIRE. On Monday last, about half past six o'clock in the afternoon, the barn of Daniel Baxter was discovered to be on fire, and generally supposed to have caught by a spark from the steam locomotive on the railroad. At the time, a strong wind was blowing, and a large conflagration expected. This was alone prevented by the Tiger Engine being located in that vicinity and they were promptly on hand and worked with a zeal worthy of emulation. The other fire companies do their duty, and are deserving of great praise. The efforts of the firemen are richly worthy of notice, and they should be remembered by the corporation whom it is believed caused this waste and narrow risk of property.

CONGRESS. In the Senate, the Massachusetts resolutions on the Mexican war have been presented, and ordered to be printed. Bills for the organization of the territories of Minnesota and Nebraska have been introduced. Both the Senate and House have discussed the matter of slavery as connected with the late attempt of slaves to escape from the vicinity of Washington. Mr. Calhoun said that if northern vessels could not visit southern waters without endangering their property, the southerners would prevent their coming at all. The House on the 21st were discussing Mr. Palfrey's resolution setting forth the proceedings of the mob, and proposing to raise a select committee to report what action the House will take to secure its members from personal threats and attacks. This resolution was offered on Thursday.

LEGISLATURE. A bill to increase the school fund to a million and a half, has passed to a third reading in the House. The Senate has reported in favor of closing the session next week. The resolve in favor of the County Commissioners of Norfolk has been recommitted.

Leave to withdraw has been reported on various petitions for a repeal or modification of the Hawkers' and Pedlars' law.

An order that the Committee appointed to request a copy of the eulogy delivered by the Hon. Edward Everett on John Quincy Adams, be instructed to cause the proceedings of the Legislature in relation to the death of Mr. Adams to be printed with the eulogy, has been amended so as to provide that the proceedings be published with the laws and resolves of the Commonwealth.

MR. TRIET. It is said that Gen. Butler has received orders from Washington, to send home Mr. Triet as soon as he had given his evidence before the Court of Inquiry. Gen. B. immediately communicated to Mr. Triet the orders of the government, and apprised him of his intention to execute them.

Mr. Triet then addressed a long letter to the General, denying his right to arrest, or forcibly move from the country, an American citizen. The reply was briefly, that he had received orders from his government, imperative in their nature, and that he would execute them to the letter. Gen. Butler went into the court and requested the conclusion of the evidence of Mr. Triet to be taken as soon as possible, as he intended to send him out of the country within six days, under escort, as he politely termed it; but in reality the "Napoleon of Peace" will be sent under guard.

THE CHARTISTS OF ENGLAND. Our readers may gather an idea of the objects sought by the Chartist, and whence they derive their name, from the following synopsis of their petition to Parliament. It contains six heads—1, Universal Suffrage; 2, Vote by Ballot; 3, No Property Qualification; 4, Annual Parliaments; 5, Payment of Members; 6, Equal Electoral Districts. The first is the essential one.

"FANNY FORKSTER." The Moulmain Free Press of December 24th, 1847, announces that a daughter was born to Mrs. Judson on the morning of that day.

LUMBER. Dealers in lumber will please notice, the advertisement of H. T. Clay & Co., of Boston in this paper.

CLESICAL. We have been informed that the Second Congregational Society, in Milton, have given Rev. Samuel Kimball an unanimous call to become their Pastor, and that he has accepted and entered on the duties of his office.

MANUFACTURE OF FLAX. A company is about to commence the manufacture of flax at Northampton. They will furnish seed to be returned after harvest, and will purchase the flax after being threshed, at twelve dollars per ton. It is their intention to prepare the flax for spinning, to erect a mill with machinery, and to manufacture thread twine, or whatever will meet with demand in the market.

LAW FOR DOGS. In the Court of Common Pleas in Boston, in the case of Mary McColey, vs. Edward Ricker, which was an action, brought by a little girl, by her next friend, to recover damages for being bitten by the defendant's dog. The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff, for $44.59.

PRESIDENT EVERETT. It is rumored that the health of Mr. Everett is such, that in accordance with the advice of his physician, he will resign the office of President of Harvard University at the close of the present term.

THE BANKS DISCOUNTING. After herculean labors, Yankee Seth of the Palo Alto Saloon, has made the clam banks discount to the amount required for a No. 1 chowder, and will be ready to serve that luxury to his customers this evening with that dexterity and suavity which defies competition.

HATS AND CAPS. W. M. Shute, 173 Washington Street, Boston, offers a splendid assortment, latest styles, at wholesale or retail. [See advertisement.]

MURDER OF A WATCHMAN. On Thursday morning last, about one o'clock, one of the night-policemen of Boston, saw two men come out of a store, when he started in pursuit with the cry of "stop thief." Mr. David Estes, a watchman, seized one of the men when the ruffian discharged a pistol, the ball of which took effect in Mr. E.'s side. The accomplice also discharged a pistol at the other officer but without effect. Mr. Estes has since died of the wound.

RE-APPOINTMENT. Ezra Wilkinson, Esq., of Dedham, the present worthy Attorney for this District, has been re-appointed by the Governor and Executive Council.

Corn meal should never be ground very fine. It injures the richness of it.

There are two hundred and ninety two species of the bees, or apis genus, and one hundred and eleven kinds are known in England.

Putnam and Mrs. Martha W. Bacon, aged 4 years and 8 months. Massachusetts and Vermont papers will please copy.

An early, withered leaf,
Faintly glow from a tough,
Lies lightly on the little grave,
A fitting symbol now.
What thoughts of tender love
Circles his tomb around!
The mother's heart oft wanders here
As to a holy ground.

His garments white hang
On their accustomed nails;
She trembles when she hears his voice
And then her cheek grows pale.

She hears no grating now
To play around the hearth;
How lonely is the house where death
Has stilled the children's mirth.

The father 'mid his cares
Forgets that death has come
And borne away his child, and left
Deep silence in his home.
But when his feet retreat
The household path once more,
No bright-eyed boy with joyous shouts
Salutes him at the door.
But why a mother's tears,
And why a father's sighs,
When God removes their sweetest flower
To plant it in the skies?
When heaven's immortal light
Shall pierce thy sodded tomb,
Then thou shalt find thy boy with Him
Wreathed with undying bloom.

THIS immense and truly magnificent Establishment will be open at Quincy on SATURDAY, May 6th, for one day only.

In addition to their already Mammoth Troops of Equestrians and Animals, the proprietors offer the present season, a series of Novel and Magnificent Entertainments, far surpassing anything ever presented to the American Public. The leading new features of this extensive Company consists of a pair of TRAINED ELEPHANTS, Jenny Lind and Romeo, and ten Egyptian CAMELS, whose performances have been the wonder and delight of thousands in Great Britain and on the Continent of Europe. Independent of these unparalleled novelties, the company proper is composed of a host of Artists whose abilities have stood the test of the most searching criticism both in the Old and New Worlds, and the names which are now offered are a sufficient guaranty that none but the most talented have been selected.

Among them will be found those of Mr. R. SANDS and his children, Maurice and Jesse; MRS. CANE in her astonishing performances; Master WALTER AYMER, the Juvenile Equestrian Wonder in various acts of Equitation, unapproached as a bareback rider; MRS. ROSALIE MADIGAN, the Fairy Amazonian Princess of the Arena, only 7 years of age; Mr. MADIGAN, the great scenic and polyhippian Equestrian; Sig. PEREZ, the unrivalled contortionist; Mr. RUGGLES, the popular and unsurpassed former on the Corda Volante; Wm. AYMER the Aerial Vaulter; ALBERT AYMAR; Messrs. RICE, MITCHELL, CRAWFORD, LACY, TUCKER, and a host of other performers, male and female, all of the most approved talent in their various feats.

The Mammoth Corps will enter town on the morning of the exhibition, at 11 o'clock, in PROCESSION and CAVACADE, preceded by the Sacred Egyptian Dragon CHARIOT of Isis and Osiris drawn by ten Egyptian CAMELS! containing the Splendid Full BAND attached to the Company. Next in order will be the East India CAR, to which will be harnessed the two ELEPHANTS, followed by the Magnificent Stud of Horses, and all the numerous costly and highly ornamented Vehicles belonging to the Company. The beautiful FAIRY CARRIAGE, drawn by 20 LILLIPUTIAN PONIES! driven in hand, will bring up the rear of the whole procession, the touts ensemble of which surpasses anything which language can describe.

Annie's next visitor was John Brown, her betrothed, who came in, accompanied by Clara. "Now, dear Annie," said John, "why didn't you let me come in before; I have a thousand things to tell you about, and not ten minutes to say it in. Why, Annie! my gracious! how well you are looking. Beautiful! You sick? Why, your cheeks and lips are glowing, and your eyes brighter than I ever saw," exclaimed John, in admiration, mistaking the burning fire of fever for the blooming rose of health. "Come, you mustn't lie there much longer; you must get up, and come and see my little new house, (our little new house, sweet Annie," said he, lowering his voice to a whisper.) "it is so pretty—painted lead color, with close white shutters. I have got the fence put up, and the garden laid off; and I've planted some peas, (which we will have for dinner the first time Clara and the old man come to see us, dear.) And I want you up, that you may go with me to select some furniture. I have got seventy-five dollars towards it."

"And I have got twenty-five," said Annie, "saved from my needlework."

"Keep it, keep it, darling; surely, if an American lad can't furnish a little house for his bride, without taxing her earnings, he must be a very worthless fellow."

Annie smiled, but in the midst of her smile an expression of pain traversed her countenance, the color died away from her face for an instant, and then rushed back in a crimson glow. Clara approached the bed, and bent over her anxiously.

"What is the matter, dear Annie?"

"Nothing—a sharp, sudden pain; it is over now," said Annie.

"A stitch," suggested John.

Annie's face again quivered, grew pale, then flushed. She grasped her sister's hand tightly.

"Dear Annie, you are suffering; you have had too much company; you have been excited and worried. John, go home—that's a good boy; you may come again this evening."

"Good bye, Annie," said John Brown.

"Good bye, good bye," replied Annie. John Brown was gone.

"Oh! Clara, I am very ill!"

"Dear, dear Annie, I am so sorry; where are you sick?"

"I am in excruciating pain," cried Annie, as her face flushed and paled rapidly.

"I will send for the Doctor."

"No, no; he could not be found now; he is on his round. Send for John's mother; she is a sort of doctress; she, perhaps, can think of something to relieve me."

Clara hurried down stairs, overtook John, and sent him for his mother—then hastened back to her sister. Annie was extremely ill. The stimulating food that she had taken had excited a violent inflammation. The old lady, Mrs. Brown, soon came in, exclaiming—

"Well, well; what's the matter now? John came running after me, as though he were crazy. Young people are so quickly frightened—and you all alone by your two selves—pity, poor things, but what you had a mother. Where's your misery, Annie?"

Annie explained.

"Ah ha! I knew it. That cold, windy water-gruel has disagreed with you. So much for following after the Doctors. Here! Clara, run and fetch me some brandy and ginger, and boiling water. Quick, now! Be in a hurry! She must take some brandy-toddy, with ginger in it. Make haste!"

Mrs. Brown made Clara fly about and bring her all the things. Mrs. Brown was in her glory. Nothing pleased that dear old lady better than to see a fellow creature in an agony of

THE veracious testimony attached to the Native Preparations of Capt. Brant's Indian Remedies is a sufficient attestation to their merits. We are administering the CHLOROFORM every day with success, and extracting Teeth by the dozen, without pain, and have never known it to affect the patient unfavorably, and yet we charge no more than when we do not give it.

The public will not forget that to use the credit of the great and important improvement recently made in the method of inserting Artificial Teeth, both on Gold Plate and Ivory, and also preserving diseased Teeth and stumps in a healthy condition.

pain, if the sufferings afforded a fair opportunity for the gratification of her ruling propensity—doctoring. It was to her what game was to the sportsman, play to the gambler, or bull-baiting to the Spaniard. Yet Mrs. Brown was called, and believed herself to be, a very benevolent woman, very kind to the sick, and an excellent nurse. The old lady concocted the dose, and carried it to her patient. Annie drank it all, and thanked her poisoner.

'And now, honey,' said she, 'I must go. I promised to call in and see Mrs. Piper's baby again to-day. The little one is getting no better, although I gave it a dose of medicine of my own preparing. Indeed, I think it is worse. They've got that young Doctor Jones attending it. What does he know about babies? Good bye, Annie. That toddy will ease you. You will sleep after it.'

And the old lady departed, with the comfortable consciousness of having performed a good action. She met John at the street door, and told him that he might go to work, as Annie was better, and John, careful not to disturb the sick one, left the house without saying good bye. As may be readily supposed, Annie grew rapidly and alarmingly worse. She suffered excruciating torture. Clara was in despair.

She sent for her father, and for the physician. Mr. Gray followed the summons immediately. The Doctor came in the afternoon. He never suspected the cause of, and was wholly unable to account for, the dreadful change that had taken place in his patient. He taxed his skill to the utmost for her relief. He remained with her all the afternoon; then, promising, to return early in the morning, he left her somewhat easier, and went to another patient.

Not far from Mr. Gray's humble dwelling stood a house of more pretensions to quality. It was occupied by Mr. Piper, a rising young lawyer, and his wife. They had one infant, upon whom they both doted with all the fondness of young parents for their first and only child. But now the babe was ill, and the father and the mother wild with alarm. Mr. Piper had called in Dr. Jones, a young physician of eminent talent, one who had already acquired a large practice, and who had effected several remarkable cures. When he arrived at Mr. Piper's house, he found the pale young mother, with the babe in her arms, walking him about the floor. She sat down, and laid the babe across her lap for the Doctor's inspection, watching the expression of his countenance eagerly.

He told her that the babe was suffering under only a very slight attack of cholera infantum, and that his recovery depended more upon her own careful nursing, than upon medicine. He charged her to let the child take no food whatever, except that which nature had provided; and, giving a few peremptory but judicious directions for its treatment, he wrote a prescription, and left the house. The doing mother was reassured, and smiled again. In a day or two the babe was much better, though not quite restored to health. He was recovering slowly but surely under the young Doctor's excellent method of treatment, when the evil genius of the physician sent the news of the baby's illness to Mrs. Brown, who straightway considered it her 'duty' to go and see the sick baby. Upon that fatal morning, something in the appearance of the infant had aroused the very excitable fears of his mother, and she felt and looked very uneasy when Mrs. Brown entered.

'Good morning, Mrs. Piper. How do you do? I heard that your little one was very ill, and I thought I would step in and see it.'

'Indeed, I am very grateful, Mrs. Brown. Please look at him, and tell me how you think he is.'

Mrs. Brown took the infant upon her lap, and looked solemnly and wistfully at him; put her hand upon his chest, and upon his head; and finally poked her great finger into his mouth, and felt his gums; then turned up the whites of her eyes, and ejaculated—

'Ah! Lord!'

'Oh! Mrs. Brown, you don't say so!' exclaimed the nervous mother, in affright. 'Is he so bad?'

'Who is tending him?' inquired the old lady, without replying to the question.

'Why, Dr. Jones—Dr. Jones. Oh! is he very ill, Mrs. Brown?'

'Dr. Jones! That young man! Why t'other day he was no taller than my knee. He a Doctor?'

'They say he is a very successful practitioner. But, oh! dear Mrs. Brown, please tell me—is the baby very sick?'

'Pretty sick. What has that young man (I can't call him a Doctor,) ordered for it?'

'Why, this is it,' replied the trembling mother, showing a little folded packet of small powders.

'Umph-humph! Calomel and prepared chalk, I suppose. That will not do it any good. If you keep on giving that to the child, you'll kill it.'

'But the Doctor—'

'Oh! the Doctor! What does he know about babies? He never was a mother. I've had thirteen children—and raised two and buried eleven; and I should think I ought to understand nursing children.'

The infant here became very fretful, and the mother very uneasy, and Mrs. Brown very loquacious and didactic.

'Oh! dear Mrs. Brown, what had I better do?'

'Stop. Have you got any laudanum?'

'Yes, but—'

'Well, get it, girl, and bring me a spoonful of water in a cup.'

This direction was given to a maid-servant who was standing in the room, and who forthwith brought the required articles.

'What are you going to do, Mrs. Brown?' inquired the mother, who was pacing the floor, with the babe in her arms.

'Give the child a few drops of laudanum.'

'Oh! Mrs. Brown, I am afraid!—'

'Never mind what you're afraid of. This is the shortest way to stop the child's complaints. I'm a better judge than you are,' persisted the old lady, holding the cup in one hand, and dropping the laudanum slowly with the other. The timid young mother suffered herself to be out-talked and over-ruled. The laudanum was dropped and poured down the babe's throat. The child dropped into a deep sleep.

'There, now! Didn't I tell you so? See how nice he's sleeping. Don't tell me about Doctors; one old woman is worth twenty Doctors, for curing babies.'

'Yes, indeed,' assented Mrs. Piper. 'He is sleeping now more quietly than he has been for a long time.'

'Well, good morning, my dear child. Whenever you want me, send for me. I am always ready to visit the sick.'

'Thank you, dear Mrs. Brown! Indeed, I am very, very grateful to you. You've given my poor baby relief, and you couldn't have done me a greater favor. I shall never forget your kindness,' said the poor woman, earnestly.

'I have only done my duty,' said the old lady, meekly; and she went off, enjoying the reward of 'an approving conscience.'

'What an excellent woman,' murmured the mother, as she returned to her infant's cradle, after seeing Mrs. Brown out. But an exclamation of horror broke from her lips, as her glance fell upon the child. The infant had waked up in a spasm. A little fretfulness, a slight fever, in the babe, was enough at any time to arouse all the mother's worst fears; but now—now that she saw her child's features convulsed and limbs quivering, in a frightful spasm, her alarm and grief exceeded all description.

At that moment Dr. Jones entered the room, and, seeing the state of the child, he demanded rather peremptorily, as was his custom, what had been given to the child. And the pale and trembling mother told him, informing him at the same time who had prescribed the dose. 'Out of his grief and his vexation,' the young physician exclaimed—

'By Heaven, madam, she has killed your child!'

'Oh! don't say so, Doctor! Don't! don't! I should go mad! Oh, no! It can't be! God would not take my baby away from me, that I love so dearly!'

Losing all self-control, she sank down by the side of the cradle. Her grief became so poignant as to render her incapable of discharging her duties. Seeing the state of affairs, and being ignorant of their family resources, Dr. Jones sent off for Mr. Piper. It was near night when the babe's spasms went off, and he sunk into a coma.

It was on the night of the same day on which Annie Gray had received her death draught from Mrs. Brown. The Doctor had left her comparatively easy a few hours previous. Mr. Gray, poor man, suspecting no danger, had retired to rest. Clara had lighted the night taper, and, setting it upon the hearth, took her seat by her sister. Clara, also, was free from apprehension now; but she could not, she knew not why, make up her mind to go to bed. Annie was lying quite still. She was easy, but with the fatal ease induced by mortification. She was dying, and she knew it.

'Clara!'

'Well, Annie?'

'Won't you lie down, love?'

'Presently, dear Annie; I am not sleepy yet. How do you feel, Annie?'

'Quite easy. Perfectly free from pain of any sort.'

'I am so glad,' said poor, unsuspecting Clara. The silence continued unbroken in the room except by the ticking of the clock, for many minutes. Then Annie called, in a low voice—

'Clara!'

'Well, sister?'

'Look in my little Bible, and bring me that folded paper, and a lead pencil.'

'Dear Annie, what is it you want to do? You must go to sleep, darling.'

'So I will, very soon, and take a long nap; but give me them first.'

'Here they are, then, Annie.'

'Raise me up.'

'Why, what are you going to do, darling?'

'Just to add four words to that paper.'

'Let me do it.'

'No.'

Annie feebly scratched four words to the end of some writing, and fell back exhausted upon her pillow, retaining the paper in her hand. She lay still a long time, and again the ticking of the clock became awfully distinct. At last, again she called—

'Clara!'

'Well, darling?'

'What day is this?'

'Friday, you know, dear. Day after tomorrow you are to have the oysters.'

'Friday, Saturday, Sunday. Clara, take this paper, and put it away safely; and do not read it until Monday, and then go by it, will you?'

'Why, what in the world do you mean, dear Annie?'

'Never mind what I mean. Promise me, will you?'

'Yes, love, certainly. Now try to sleep, dear.'

'Yes, I will.'

Why was the silence in that peaceful room so awful. Why ticked the clock so loud and fast, and why fell its strokes so heavily upon the heart of the watcher? She did not know it was counting away the last seconds of a dying girl. At length, the dread silence was relieved by the low, sweet music of Annie's voice—

'Clara!'

'Darling!'

'Where is father?'

'Gone to bed.'

'Give my love to him.'

'Annie! Annie! What do you mean?'

'Nothing, only he forgot to kiss me.'

'She lay silent for a few moments, then for the last time called lowly—'

'Clara!'

(She seemed to love the iteration of her sister's name.)

'What now, love?'

'Tell dear John Brown, I say, God bless him.'

'Annie! Annie! Oh, dear me, what is the matter with you? I am—I'm so uneasy. I—I'll call up father,' cried Clara, as in her fright she seized the taper, and flashed its light upon her sister's face.

Annie's face was white as marble, but a sweet smile hovered over it. Clara's countenance was blanched to a 'violet paleness,' and she shook in every limb.

'Don't look so frightened, dearest sister; I'm going to sleep now.'

'Are you at ease?'

'Perfectly. Kiss me.'

Clara pressed her warm lips to the cold brow of the dying girl. Re-assured, she resumed her seat. Clara was nervous. Oh! why did that clock tick so loud and fast, and why jarred its strokes so heavily upon the excited nerves of Clara? It counted away, fast and faster, the fleeting seconds of the parting seraph.

'Father! Clara! John!' whispered Annie.

Clara bent over her sister, and looked silently on her face. Her eyes were closed, her countenance was still, save for the smile that still hovered upon her lips.

'She is talking in her sleep,' thought Clara.

'Mother! mother! murmured the dying girl. Again Clara looked upon her sister's face, but it was perfectly still; even the smile had fled. Annie Gray's gentle spirit had passed away.

'She has gone sound asleep at last, thank God,' said Clara.

Morning dawned. Mr. Gray rapped at his daughter's chamber door, to inquire how Annie had slept. Clara opened the door.

'What! been up all night, poor Clara? Could you get no one to sit up but yourself?'

'I could not have left Annie, father.'

'How does she seem?'

'Better. Still sleeping.'

'Thank Heaven.'

The father hurried away from the door, to finish dressing. After having raised the window and opened the blinds, Clara returned to her beloved sleeper, and looked upon her face. The face was cold and stiff—the eyes half open, and the blue lips were apart, and the white teeth glistening between them. The hand that Clara had taken fell heavily from her grasp. With a heart-rending cry, Clara cast herself upon the bed of her sister, and fainted. That cry brought the father back into the room. The father was a strong man. He suffered, as he gazed upon his dead Annie, as deeply as Clara had; yet no tear sprung to his eye—no groan broke from his lips. The muscles of his iron face worked convulsively—his broad chest heaved, as he stood some moments looking upon the sisters. Then, gently lifting the insensible Clara from the body, he bore her to the next room, laid her upon the bed, and calmly walked down stairs to send for Mrs. Brown. That benevolent lady was not at home. She was occupied with laying out Mrs. Piper's baby, which had just expired. Some other neighbors, however, tendered their services to see to things.

Sunday came—the Sunday of poor Annie Gray's funeral. Clara had exhausted her strength by giving way to the wildest expressions of grief and despair, and now lay prostrate upon the very bed on which Annie had yielded up her gentle spirit. Clara lay quivering, gasping, fainting, under the weakness induced by a violent outbreak of sorrow. Low moans and sighs were all that escaped her now. The rooms below stairs were filling with funeral guests. Mrs. Brown, who had taken the direction of affairs, was in a high state of excitement and business. Poor Mr. Gray was standing about in everybody's way, having nothing to do, looking heart-broken, gazing into vacancy. Mrs. Brown, in her flying hither and thither, ran against him, and nearly overturned him; started, begged his pardon, and asked him for his hat, to pin a piece of crape 'round it.' Poor Gray put his hand to his head, and looked around in perplexity.

'Your hat, Mr. Gray—your hat, if you please, to pin a piece of crape on it.'

His face worked convulsively. He gave her his hat, and turned away. The old lady looked at him, and said, while she fixed his hat—

'Dear, dear! Mr. Gray, don't take on so—don't. Bear this like a man—a christian man. Annie's gone to Heaven. She was a sweet, good—'

'Don't—don't,' whimpered poor Gray. 'But I must—I must talk to you. It's for your own good. You know I'm your best friend, don't you?'

'I know you have been very kind to me and mine, Mrs. Brown. You were like a mother to the poor girl that's—that's—'

'That's gone. Yes, and if she had taken my advice, instead of following after Doctors, from the first, she would have been living now.'

'God bless you, Mrs. Brown—God bless you. I never shall forget your kindness to the poor motherless girl. May God reward you.'

'Should not that blessing have "heaped coals of fire" upon her head?'

'I've tried to do my duty, Mr. Gray,' said the self-sufficient old lady, as she moved off with a bundle of white cambric for the hack-driver's hat.

In the meantime, Clara lay upon the bed in the upper room. The guests continued to arrive. She heard their slow steps, their murmuring tones, and their whispered condolences. At last all was still. Then the tones of the clergyman's voice were heard, as he read the sublime funeral service of the Episcopal church. At length his voice ceased. Then, by the movement of many feet, and the slow rolling of carriage wheels, Clara knew that the corpse was being borne out, and that the funeral procession was in the act of being formed.

'Farewell, Annie! Farewell, playmate!—Farewell, sister!'

These words burst from her lips, in heart-breaking sobs, many, many times; and as long as the retreating sound of the wheels was heard, she gasped, from time to time—

'Farewell, Annie! Farewell, dear Annie!'

'How often,' says a celebrated divine, 'is the excitement of thought and feeling so great, that but for the interruptions of humble cares and trifles—the interposition of a wise Providence—the mind and frame would sink under them entirely.'

The mechanic's daughter could not indulge her sorrow in inaction. Her father would be coming back, bringing his brothers to supper. So, after a while, she was compelled to arise. She bathed her eyes, and went into the kitchen to prepare the supper.

On Monday morning, Clara thought of her sister's paper. She went to seek it. It merely contained some common but too much neglected rules for the preservation of health. It was evidently written for Clara. It was dated a month back, at a time at which, as Clara recollected, Annie had despaired of recovery. The four concluding words were written upon the last night of her existence, and in very unsteady characters. It was headed—

'Annie's Legacy to the Consumptive.'

You are, or you believe yourself to be, consumptive. You wish, above all things, for health and strength. You are poor, you wish that you were able to buy some of the patent, all-curing, all-promising specifics advertised in the newspapers. Thank God, rather, for the poverty that prevents your purchasing. Taking patent medicines is like drinking in the dark, where some of the vessels are filled with wholesome drink, and some with deadly poisons. You may chance upon the right draught, or you may not. It is a great risk. But the medicines for your debility are cheap—cheap as sunshine; and safe—safe as nature. They are—air, water, exercise, diet. There is nothing original in the rules I am about to transcribe. They are as old as common sense. You may read them in many books and newspapers, and hear them at lectures; but yet you may not heed them more than I did, before it was too late. Perhaps, though, when they come as a legacy from your sister, who has lost health and life by the neglect of them, why, then they may exercise all the moral influence of 'the last dying speech and confession' of a man about to be hanged.

1. Bathe in tepid water every day. The benefit of bathing can only be justly estimated by those that practise it. Wear flannel winter (and summer, too, if you can bear it) next your skin. It will keep the skin in a healthful condition.

2. Take a walk every fine day. But that will not be exercise enough, or of the kind, for a consumptive. Make beds, rub tables, sweep, or do something else that will exercise the arms and chest. Sing or read aloud.

3. Ventilate your rooms, air your bedding, clothing, etc., every day. The lungs require pure air, as well as the palate requires pure water. Mem. Do not keep a stove in your common sitting room; what it saves in fuel, it costs in health. I have found from experience that the burnt air from hot stoves, and the thick vapor from anything that may be cooking upon it, is very unpleasant, and very injurious to weak lungs. Use a fireplace or a Franklin stove in preference; for then everything injurious is carried up the chimney.

4. If you can, leave off gradually the use of strong tea and coffee. They keep up a slow, consuming fever in your system; (it has been so with me;) drink milk instead. When you are feversish, do not use pepper, mustard, spice, etc., in your food. Try this way of living for a month; and if you are not stronger, take the advice of a regular practitioner. Never take Neighbor's Prescriptions.

Reader, poor Annie's rules were not neighbor's prescriptions; they were mostly taken from a work recently published by an undeniable M. D.

ERRATA.

MR. EDITOR.—In the printing of an abstract of the proceedings of the Worcester Town Meeting, which you was so kind to do, I see an error of some importance which would be well to correct. The error, in the aggregate, is not quite as large, however, as was made by the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, it being only six hundred and eighty dollars. For "twelve thousand dollars for each district" to be appropriated and expended in each of the six districts for the purpose of establishing intermediate schools, etc., read twelve hundred.

One other error the reader will please notice. In giving a few statistics in relation to the schools, it was designed to have been stated that "each Grammar School has, with one exception, a teacher and female assistant, in which school the scholars are instructed in all the ordinary English and some of the higher branches of study." SATURDAY, MAY 6, 1848.

John A. Green, Editor.

CONGRESS. The California claim bill finally passed the Senate on the 27th. A proposition was made for the purchase of Gen. Taylor's portrait; and amended by a proposition to include the portraits of all the American Generals; but was finally laid on the table. The President transmitted a message to the Senate on Saturday in relation to aid to Yucatan; the subject was postponed. On Monday the Senate adjourned, on account of the death of Senator Ashley, the ceremonies of whose funeral was attended on Tuesday by both branches. In the House, the correspondence between Mr. Marcy and Gen. Scott, was received and ordered to be printed. A bill repealing the act of the last session, which gave the President the discretion, when the army was reduced, at the end of the war, to retain the old or new generals, was introduced. The Scott and Marcy correspondence was debated. In the Senate on Wednesday, Mr. Butler of South Carolina, reported a bill in favor of facilitating the recovery of fugitive slaves, and imposing a penalty of one thousand dollars for aiding to rescue any slave from the service of their owners. Mr. Hale, of New Hampshire, submitted a resolution, instructing the Committee on the Judiciary to inquire and report what legislation was necessary to protect colored citizens in non-slaveholding States, in the enjoyment of their constitutional rights, etc., which was adopted without debate. In the House, Mr. McClelland reported favorably on Whitney's Railroad, proposing to connect Lake Michigan with the Pacific. The bill in favor of extending land bounties to promoted soldiers was debated.

LATER FROM EUROPE. A new steamship of the Cunard line, called the America, arrived at New York on Saturday, in fourteen days from Liverpool. The news from England is, that the government by the aid of a strong military force, and the array of a force of five thousand extra police had completely prevented the expected chartist demonstration. There was a large gathering at the appointed time, but the strength of the government force prevented any movements, and a deputation of two individuals went to the Parliament. Victoria's infant princess is to be called Louise, after the Queen of the Belgians.

The European Times says the opinion seems to be progressing among Englishmen that the country would be better without Ireland. The Repeal movement has reached a crisis which it must be confessed it has never hitherto attained. The present posture of affairs in that country is most complicated and perilous, and no lengthened period can elapse before the English Government, and the majority of the Irish people will have joined issue on the subject of repeal.

The French nation seems to be as quiet as could be expected. The Provisional Government still holds the reins, and much encouragement is afforded to a Republican Government will be settled upon them soon.

Hostilities have seriously commenced between the forces of Denmark and those of Schleswig Holstein.

Letters from Warsaw of the first of April state that no outbreak had taken place in that city, but that the inhabitants were in a state of great fears.

All remains quiet at Rome.

Madrid was quiet, but the arbitrary conduct of the government was producing general discontent.

The Emperor of Russia promises strict neutrality as regards other States.

In Belgium and Holland tranquility continues to be maintained.

THE RUNAWAY SLAVES. Most of the slaves who recently escaped from Washington, and were retaken, have been sold to go South, as is the usual custom in such cases. Their situation is thereby rendered ten times worse than before they attempted to escape.

The individuals who have been detected in abducting these slaves, as the laws of the South express it, have undergone an examination, and been fully committed for trial. The criminal court meets in June next. The names of these individuals are Edward Sayres, (captain of the vessel) Chester English and Daniel Drayton.

LEGISLATIVE. The Old Colony Extension Railroad Company bill has been under consideration and occupied considerable time. The bill for the relief of insolvent debtors has passed to be engrossed; also, the resolves expressing sympathy with the French revolution. An order has been adopted instructing the committee on manufactures to consider the expediency of providing by law that no operative in this commonwealth shall be obliged by his employer to work more than ten hours a day. The bill to regulate the sale of alcohol has been laid on the table in the House. A resolve in favor of Zebulon Paine, after being amended by reducing the amount from one thousand to five hundred dollars, has been passed to be engrossed. Bill concerning railroad accidents and the security of persons at railroad crossings were also passed to be engrossed.

PICTORIAL SHEET. The 4th July mammoth pictorial double Brother Jonathan is now about being issued in New York by Wilson & Co. at twelve cents per copy. Among the engravings (specimens of which have been sent to us) are four fine original portraits, of the size of life, of our distinguished fellow citizens, Messrs. Benton, Webster, Calhoun and Clay. The Jonathan is likewise to contain an immense engraving (some four feet wide by two feet from top to bottom,) of the ascent of the Americans on the Castle of Chapultepec, the landing of fifty-seven deserters, etc., being the largest picture of the kind ever attempted in the world. An engraved copy of the original Declaration of Independence in Jefferson's hand writing, with all the original signatures attached, is also to be given, together with the usual variety of other engravings and attractions for our great National Jubilee.

RAILROAD ACCIDENTS. One evening last week a man was run over by the cars on the Medford Branch Railroad. He was killed almost instantly. A bottle of rum was found in one of his pockets. Hannah O'Honora, a recent immigrant, was run over near the depot of the Old Colony Railroad in Boston, on the 27th ult., and so much injured that amputation of some of her limbs was rendered necessary.

THE CAMELS ARE COMING. Oh no! oh no! Sands, Lent & Co's celebrated circus company will enter town to-day about eleven o'clock, when our citizens will have an opportunity to witness the novel spectacle of a chariot drawn by ten camels. The Hippodrome arena will be established on the Hancock Lot. The feats of the trained camels, elephants, ponies, and men, are said to be truly wonderful. For particulars see advertisement.

CLOTHING. Great inducements are offered to call at Dinegan's Fashionable Tailoring Establishment. He employs the very best of journeymen tailors, and makes up his garments at such prices as will insure a return of his customers. Read his advertisement.

THE PLAYMATE. The May number has just come to hand. The work combines a good proportion of imaginative and matter-of-fact reading, to suit the taste and improvement of childhood. One dollar per annum. Gill & Co. are agents.

DANIEL WEBSTER FOR PRESIDENT. The Whig members of the Legislature met recently in Tremont Temple, according to previous notice. Hon. Zeno Scudder, President of the Senate, was chosen Chairman, and F. W. Lincoln, of Boston, and Mr. Severance, of Shelburne, were chosen Secretaries. A spirited Address to the Whigs of the Union, was adopted, warmly urging the claims of Mr. Webster for the Presidency.

VIRGINIA ELECTION. The election for members of the Legislature took place on the 28th ult. As far as heard from returns indicate a democratic majority.

FROM CHINA. Mrs. A. H. Everett was a passenger in the Samuel Russell which has arrived at New York from China. Fears of trouble were still entertained, the Macao passage was reported to be blocked up and British vessels of war were arriving. It was feared that there would be an attack upon the foreign Hong and the guards were doubled.

EXTRAS. We have been indebted, on several occasions, to the New York Sun establishment for extras containing full accounts of the news by foreign arrivals. Although our limits will not permit of very copious extracts, yet the polite attentions of the Messrs. Beach are duly appreciated.

HONORS TO MAJOR WEBSTER. The remains of Major Edward Webster, of the First Regiment of Massachusetts Infantry, who died at San Angel near Mexico, in January last, recently arrived in Boston and were interred on Thursday last with military honors. A large concourse of citizens were in attendance.

FROM MEXICO. Mr. Clifford arrived at the city of Mexico on the 10th ult., with the Secretary of the Commission, Mr. Walsh, and was very handsomely received, all the troops in the city having, by order of Gen. Butler, turned out to give him a reception. Mr. Sevier was on his way from Vera Cruz and would be received with similar honor. Gen. Cushing's brigade has been ordered to Jalapa. In anticipation of a favorable action upon the treaty about one thousand sick have been removed from the capital to Jalapa. A patrol of American soldiers were fired upon in the city of Mexico. Various contrary predictions in relation to the probable fate of the treaty are continually arriving. At Santa Fe there were symptoms of an insurrection.

GEN. TAYLOR. A letter from Gen. Taylor has been published, defining his position as a candidate for the Presidency. He says:

"I confess, whilst I have great cardinal principles which will regulate my political life, I am not sufficiently familiar with all the minute details of political legislation to give solemn pledges to exert my influence, if I were President, to carry out this or that measure. I have no concealment. I have no opinion which I would not readily proclaim to my assembled countrymen; but crude impressions upon matters of policy, which may be right to-day and wrong to-morrow, are, perhaps, not the best test of fitness for office. One who cannot be trusted without pledges, cannot be confided in merely on account of them."

He repeats his declaration that he is a whig, but not an ultra whig; and that he would endeavor to act independent of party domination. He is opposed to the use of the veto power by the President, except where there has been a clear violation of the constitution on the part of Congress, or manifest haste and want of consideration. Upon the subject of the tariff, the currency, and internal improvements, he thinks that the will of the people, as expressed through their Representatives in Congress, ought to be respected and carried out by the Executive. With regard to the Mexican war he is of opinion, that our national honor has been vindicated, and that in dictating terms of peace we may well afford to be forbearing, and even magnanimous, to our fallen foe.

MAY DAY. The feast of the 'Goddess Flora' was not very generally observed in this vicinity on the 1st inst. An extract from a book entitled "New England Memorial" will show how it was kept in olden time:

"In the year 1625 at Mount Wollaston now Braintree, Mass., a man named Morton became Lord of manse and maintained (as it were) a school of Atherton. He and his neighbor set up a May pole and danced and fished around it like so many fairies, or furies, rather, yea, and worse practices, as if they had revived the feast of the Goddess Flora. Mr. John Endicott, under the broad seal of England, ordered their May pole to be cut down and rebuked them for their profanity."

MERRY ENGLAND. The Queen's household costs the mournful denizens of merry England over $5,000,000 a year; each of her children draws $150,000, and King William's widow is a pensioner to the fortune of a million, the public debt is $500,000,000, and the yearly expenditures $279,000,000.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

RUTH TO NAOMI.

Entreat me not to leave thee,
Naomi do not so;
Thy daughter would not grieve thee,
But from thee will not go.
With thee I'll hide, with thee I'll roam,
And where thou dwellest make my home.

And whoso'er thou diest,
There will thy daughter die;
The grave wherein thou liest,
There will thy daughter lie.
Thy people, mother, shall be mine,
And Ruth will kneel at Israel's shrine.
F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

THE ENGINEER'S SONG.

I love—oh! how I love to ride,
The Iron Horse in his fiery pride;
All other joys seem dull and vain
When I lay my hand on his misty mane.

Fear him not! with his ribs of steel,
His flaming throat and his crushing wheel,
And his smoky crest, so black and tall,
Like a pillar covered with funeral pall.

Though his motion shakes the solid ground,
And he scatters fire flakes all around,
He's gentle as a jewel in lady's rein,
When he feels my hand on his misty mane.

Set me astride on the Iron Horse!
Full of fierce fury, speed and force;
And hark! how he pants and blows and snorts,
While my skill his eager bounding thwarts.

But when I'm mounted on his back,
And you see him coming—clear the track!
Nothing can stand the giant force
Of his thundering charge, my Iron Horse.

Schiller's poor "Pegasus in the Yoke"
Was vicious and proud, and all unbroke;
And the Bronze Horse of Chinese glory
Was only fit for an eastern story.

Will Shakespeare's Palfrey, glorious steed,
Was a colt of Phobos' noble breed;
But Plato's self would not disdain
My courser with the misty mane.

Then, huzza! The Iron Horse for me,
To ride o'er the land or to plough the sea!
Through the wintry crust of the river to break,
Or glide o'er the face of the sun with summer lake.

He tracks the prairie, he climbs the hill,
The wild woods echo his neighing shrill;
And when fierce tempests lash the shores,
Loudly than even the storm he roars.

Huzza! The Iron Horse for me,
No magic steed flies fast as he;
He skims the ocean and scours the plain,
And shakes like a cloud his misty mane.

New York Evening Post.

ANECDOTES.

"John, did you leave Mr. Jones's umbrella at home?" said a fond mother to her first-born.
"No, ma," said John.
"And why did you not, my son? Did I not tell you to?" said the mother.

"Yes, you did, ma," said John; "but didn't you always tell me to keep something for a rainy day, and as it looks as if to-morrow would be wet, what better thing can I keep than an umbrella?"

During a blow upon the Lakes, a passenger was very much frightened, and, believing all was lost, went below and offered up a feeling prayer, after which he came on deck, but the storm had not abated in the least. At this juncture he met the cook, a worthy descendant of "Afric's sunny fountain," and a wave of more than usual force striking the boat, he exclaimed, and at the same time taking his hand, "Good bye, meet me in Paradise." The negro somewhat astonished replied, "Thacker, thacker, sir, but I ain't g'wine. I sticks to de boat any how!"

They have a straight forward way of doing business in Arkansas, that is perfectly refreshing. A minister recently undertook to come down on our warrenters. The next day one of the deacons dropped him a line, saying that "people in his digress went to church to hear the devil abused, and not their country; and if he persisted in 'violating their taste any further,' all he had to say was that 'geese still grew feathers, and North Carolina tar.'"

When Sir Walter Scott was at school, a boy in the same class was asked by the 'domine,' what part of speech "with" was. "A noun, sir," said the boy. "You young blockhead," cried the pedagogue, "what example can you give of such a thing?" "I can tell you, sir," interrupted Scott; "you know there's a verse in the Bible which says 'they bound Samson with withs.'"

"Job Printing—Job Printing!" exclaimed an old woman, as she peeped over her specs at the advertising page of a country paper, "poor Job; they've kept him printing week after week, ever since I first learnt to read, and if he wasn't the most patient man that ever was, he never could have stood it so long no how!"

A pedlar on west states that in the course of his travels he found a lady with one child in the cradle and another at the breast, playing penny-bluff with the village clergyman, at three cents a lick. When the pedlar left, the minister was trying to borrow a nippeniece, offering as security, a copy of "Baxter's Call to the Unconverted."

"Do you keep pins and needles?" "Yes, all sorts of needles and pins," said the shopkeeper. "Well, then, I will have some ten pins and terpinus."

The Graefenberg Company, OF NEW YORK.

HAVING established a Branch at No. 154 Washington Street, Boston, has appointed Mr. Edward C. Barnes, Secretary thereof, now, after the people of New England their celebrated series of Medicines, in the fullest confidence that after a fair trial they will be found far superior, and will rapidly supersede all others now in use. The Company would first call attention to

THE GRAEFENBERG VEGETABLE PILLS. For the prevention and cure of the ordinary diseases which afflict humanity, (especially biliousness,) these Pills are infinitely superior to any the world has before seen. No language can describe their virtues. They are as different from all others before the public as light is from darkness. Every family in New England should try them. Price 25c a box, with full directions. The Graefenberg SARSAPARILLA COMPOUND in which the virtues of the noble and health giving Sarsaparilla are highly concentrated; it is warranted to make two quarts superior to any other manufacturer, and in the most powerful agent in the world to cleanse and purify the system. Price $1 per bottle.

The Graefenberg CHILDREN'S PANACEA, a medicine expressly adapted to the various diseases of children and youth, and the only one of the kind ever before offered to the public. It is composed of vegetables only, and may be used with perfect safety by infants. Price fifty cents per bottle.

Dentistry.

GRANDIN, DUDLEY & BLAKE,
SURGEON DENTISTS,
238 Washington Street—near Summer Street,
BOSTON.

PERFORM all Operations belonging to the DENTAL PROFESSION, and continue in Manufacturing and inserting the most perfect and best of MINERAL TEETH, upon the most scientific and on all other principles as practised by the best Dentists in this country and Europe. Every Tooth we fill, and every one we insert, we insure, according to circumstances; and all Dental Plate Work executed at our rooms is warranted to equal to any that can be produced, and to give perfect satisfaction.

We are administering the CHLOROFORM every day with success, and extracting Teeth by the dozen, without pain, and have never known it to affect the patient unfavorably, and yet we charge no more than when we do not give it.

The public will not forget that to us is due the credit of the great and important improvement recently made in the method of inserting Artificial Teeth, and in Gold Plate and Pains, and also preserving diseased Teeth and stumps in a healthy condition.

Instruction given in relation to the New Method invented by us, and whole sets inserted in the most difficult mouths, for country or travelling Dentists, on reasonable terms. First Teeth adapted to the mouth on our plan are far more durable and permanent than upon gold plate, secured in the common way, and will never want resetting. When necessary to mount them on a piece of gold by our method, we extract no gold stumps, preserve the form of the mouth, and secure them so firmly that the patient can eat with them as well as if they were natural teeth, and they will last a whole lifetime, and look perfectly natural. To all who require the services of a Dentist, and particularly such as have been unsuccessfully served, we would "make our best bow," and say, don't wait for an introduction, but call and see us at 238 Washington St. corner of Central Court. ### A LEGEND OF LIFE AND LOVE.

A very cheerless and fallacious doctrine is that which teaches to deny the yielding to natural feelings righteously directed because the consequences may be trouble and grief, as well as satisfaction and pleasure. The man who lives on from year to year, jealous of ever placing himself in a situation where the chances can possibly turn against him—ice, as it were surrounding his heart, and his mind too scrupulously weighing in a balance the results of giving way to any of those propensities his Creator has planted in his heart—may be a philosopher, but can never be a happy man.

Upon the banks of a pleasant river stood a cottage, the residence of an ancient man, whose limbs were feeble with the weight of years and of former sorrow. In his appetites, easily gratified, like the simple race among whom he lived, every want of existence was supplied by a few fertile acres. Those acres were tilled and tended by two brothers, grandsons of the old man, and dwellers also in the cottage. The parents of the boys lay buried in a grave near by.

Nathan, the elder, had hardly seen his twentieth summer. He was a beautiful youth. Glossy hair clustered upon his head, and his cheeks were very brown from sunshine and open air. Though the eyes of Nathan were soft and liquid, like a girl's, and his cheeks curled with a voluptuous swell, exercise and labor had developed his limbs into noble and manly proportions. The band of hunters, as they met sometimes to start off together after game upon the neighboring hills, could hardly show one among their number who in comeliness, strength, or activity, might compete with the youthful Nathan.

Mark was but a year younger than his brother. He, too, had great beauty.

In course of time the ancient sickened, and knew that he was to die. Before the approach of the fatal hour, he called before him the two youths, and addressed them thus:

"The world, my children, is full of deceit. Evil men swear in every place, and sorrow and disappointment are the fruits of intercourse with them. So wisdom is wary."

"And as the things of life are only shadows passing like the darkness of a cloud, twine no bands of love about your hearts. For love is the ficklest of the things of life. The object of our affection dies, and we thenceforth languish in agony; or perhaps the love we covet dies, and that is more painful yet."

It is well never to confide in any man. It is well to keep aloof from the follies and impurities of the earth. Let there be no links between you and others. Let not any being control you through your dependence upon him for a portion of your happiness. This, my sons, I have learned by bitter experience, is the teaching of truth."

Within a few days afterward, the old man was placed in the marble tomb of his kindred, which was built on a hill by the shore.

Now the injunctions given to Nathan and his brother-injunctious frequently impressed upon them before by the same monitory voice—were pondered over by each youth in his inmost heart. They had always habitually respected their grandire; whatever came from his mouth, therefore, seemed as the words of an oracle not to be gainsaid.

Soon the path of Nathan changed to be sundered from that of Mark.

And the trees leaved out, and then in autumn cast their foliage; and in due course leaved out again, and again, and many times again—and the brothers met not yet.

Two score years and ten! what change works over earth in such a space as two score years and ten.

As the sun, an hour ere its setting, cast long slanting shadows to the eastward, two men, withered, and with hair thin and snowy, came together at a tomb built on a hill by the borders of a fair river. Why do they start, as each casts his dim eyes towards the face of the other? Why do tears drop down their cheeks, and their frames tremble even more than the feebleness of age? They are the long separated brethren, and they enfold themselves in one another's arms.

"And yet," said Mark, after a few moments, stepping back, and gazing earnestly upon his companion's form and features, "and yet it wonders me that thou art my brother. There should be a brave and beautiful youth, with black curls upon his head, and not those pale emblems of decay. And my brother should be straight and nimble—not bent and tottering as thou."

The speaker cast a second searching glance—a glance of discontent.

"And I," rejoined Nathan, "I might require from my brother not such shriveled limbs as I see—and instead of that cracked voice, the full swelling music of a morning heart. But half a century is a fearful melter of comeliness and of strength; for half a century it is, dear brother, since my hand touched thine, or my gaze rested upon thy face."

Mark sighed, and answered not. Then, in a little while, they made inquiries about what had befallen either during the time past. Seated upon the marble, by which they had met, Mark briefly told his story.

"I bethink me, brother, many, many years have indeed passed over me since the sorrowful day when our grandire, dying, left us to seek our fortunes amid a wicked and seductive world."

"His last words, as thou doubtless dost remember, advised us against the snares that should beset our subsequent journeyings. He portrayed the dangers that lie in the path of love; he impressed on our minds the folly of placing confidence in human honor, and warned us to keep aloof from too close connection with our kind. He then died, but his instructions live, and have ever been present in my memory."

"Dear Nathan, why should I conceal from you that at that time I loved. My simple soul, ungifted with the wisdom of our aged relative, had yielded to the delicious folly, and the brown-eyed Eva was my young heart's choice. O, brother, even now—the feeble and withered thing I am—dim recollections, pleasant passages come forth around me like the joy of old dreams. A boy again, and in the confiding heart of a boy I walk with Eva by the river's banks. And the gentle creature at my protestations of love, leans her cheek upon my neck. The regal sun goes down in the west, and we gaze upon the glory of the clouds that attend its setting, and while we look at their fantastic changes, a laugh sounds out clear like a flute and merry as the jingling of silver bells. It is the laugh of Eva."

The eye of the old man glistened with unwonted brightness. He paused, sighed, the brightness faded away and he went on with his narration.

"As I said, the dying lessons of him whom we revered were treasured in my soul. I could not but feel their truth in my soul. I feared that if I again stood beside the object of my love, and looked upon her face and listened to her words, the wholesome axioms might be blotted from my thoughts; so I determined to act as became a man. From that hour I have never beheld the brown-eyed Eva."

I went amid the world. Acting upon the wise principles which our aged friend taught us I looked upon every thing with suspicious eyes. Alas! I found it but too true that iniquity and deceit were the ruling spirits of men. Some call me cold, calculating and unamiable; but it was their own unworthiness that made me appear so in their eyes. I am not—you know, my brother—I am not naturally of proud and repulsive manner, but I was determined never to give my friendship merely to be blown off again as it might chance, as a feather against the wind; nor interweave my course of life with those that very likely would gain all the advantage of the connection and leave me no better than before.

I engaged in traffic. Success attended me. Enemies said that my good fortune was the result of chance; but I knew it the fruit of the judicious system which governed me in matters of business as well as of social intercourse."

"My brother, thus have I lived my life. Your looks ask me if I have been happy. Dear brother, truth impels me to say no! Yet assuredly if few glittering pleasures ministered to me on my journey, equally few were the disappointments, the hopes blighted, the trust betrayed, the faintings of the soul caused by the delusions of those in whom I have laid up my treasures."

"Ah, my brother, the world is full of misery! The disciple of a wretched faith ceased his story, and there was silence awhile."

Then Nathan spoke:

"In early years," said he, "I, too, loved a beautiful woman. Whether my heart was more frail than thine, or affection had gained a mightier power over me, I could not part from her I loved without the satisfaction of a farewell kiss. We met—I had resolved to stay but a moment—for I had chalked out my future life after the fashion thou hast described thine."

"How it was, I knew not, but the moments rolled on to hours, and still we stood with our arms around each other."

"My brother, a maiden's tear washed my stern features away. The lure of a voice rolling quietly from between two soft lips, enticed me from remembrance of my good sire's wisdom. I forgot his teachings, and married the woman I loved."

"Ah! how sweetly sped the seasons! We were blessed. True, there came crossings and evils, but we withstood them all, and holding each other by the hand, forgot that such a thing as sorrow remained in the world."

"Children were born unto us—brave boys and fair girls. Oh, mark that—that is a pleasure—that swelling of tenderness for our offspring—which the rigorous doctrines of your course of life have withheld from you!"

"Like you, I bargained. Various fortune followed my path. I will not deny but that some in whom I thought virtue was strong, proved cunning hypocrites, and worthy no man's trust. Yet are there many I have known, spotless, as far as humanity may be spotless."

"Thus to me, life has been alternately false and fair. Have I lived happy? No, not complete—it is never for mortals to be. But I can lay my hands upon my heart, and thank the great master that the sunshine has been far oftener my attendant than the darkness of the clouds."

"Dear brother, the world has misery; but it is a world still, and affords much joy to the dwellers in."

As Nathan ceased his brother looked up into his face like a man unto whom a simple truth had been for the first time revealed.

BATHING.

Nothing tends more to the preservation of health as well as cleanliness, than frequent Bathing.

During the winter the pores of the skin have been more locked up than during summer, when spontaneous perspiration is more free and frequent and therefore have become more dry, hardened and less active. This is the case with all, but more especially with the sedentary, or those not engaged in hard manual labor.

Health cannot be preserved any length of time unless the numerous pores upon the surface of the body be kept clean and free to perform their several important duties. Frequent bathing the body all over in warm or cold water for some thirty minutes, will mainly effect this object.

Those persons of a temperament whose reaction is speedily procured, and can bear it, would be most benefited by the cold bath, those of a different or more delicate temperament, as the nervous, bilious, or those whose lungs or stomach are liable to be easily affected, may use the warm bath.

In fact using a common bathing tub with soft water a little warmer than the blood, a flesh brush and soap, thoroughly, while the body is entirely immersed, for half or three quarters of an hour, is the best means to cleanse, open and aid the action of the pores of the skin, and thereby equalize the circulation of the blood and all the functions—relieve the head—quiet the nerves—remove fatigue—aid digestion, and produce an agreeable and healthy state of both body and mind.

Not half the people of the world are aware of the material benefits resulting from this process, and none can be fully able to appreciate it unless they have been in the constant use of it for some time.

It should be used, if possible, every day, but at least twice a week if no more.

Every village should have a convenient bathing house or two. Indeed, every family should have a bathing apparatus, which could be procured for a trifling sum, and mayhap would be the means of saving a doctor's fee of five times the amount, and procuring health and comfort beyond the power of calculation.

Bathing at all seasons is conducive to the health of body and mind, but more especially in the spring.

How to SPOIL A CHILD. Above all mistakes, is that of supposing that the better nature of a child is to be drawn out and raised into strength, which we should desire to see in the man, by making him pass through a cold and cheerless youth. A system of petty restraints of privations, of severe looks and incessant chiding, only results in depraving the feelings, and perverting the reason of a young person. He is under such circumstances, entirely out of harmony with nature. He is like a flower, which requires light and warmth, placed in a cellar where it can never acquire its proper proportions, color or vigor. It is quite impossible that a child so treated can ever attain the proper characteristic of a well constituted man or woman.

THE PIETY OF THE WORLD HATES. It is not true that the world hates piety. The modest and unobtrusive piety which fills the heart with all human charities, and makes a man gentle to others and severe to himself, is an object of universal love and veneration. But mankind hate the lust of power, when it is veiled under the garb of piety; they hate canting and hypocrisy; they hate advertisers and quacks in piety; they do not choose to be insulted; they love to tear folly and impudence from the altar, which should only be a sanctuary for the wretched and the good.—Sidney Smith.

GEOLOGY.

Explorations of geologists have brought to light wonders scarcely exceeded by those of astronomy. While many fanciful theories have no doubt originated, the facts which are constantly developed, are adapted at once to gratify and stimulate the friends of science.

Mr. Lyell travelled across Sweden from the east to the west coast, on the summit-level, and found everywhere the same appearance as on the coast. The whole country affords incontestable upheaval, but varying in different districts, being greatest towards the north, where the rise has been from 600 to 700 feet, near Christina 400 feet, and at Uddevalla 200 feet. The elevation, however, has been neither uniform nor continuous; what is now rising was once sinking, interrupted by long intervals of rest.

Perhaps the most interesting fact noticed by Mr. Lyell, is the discovery of a wooden hut, at a depth of sixty feet beneath the surface of the soil, during the excavation for a canal to unite Lake Malar with an inlet of the Baltic. The structure was about eight feet square; the walls crumbled away on exposure to the air, but the floor timbers remained sound. There was a rude stone fireplace in the centre, with fragments of half-burnt wood, and outside a heap of wood, piled up for fuel. Not a particle of iron appeared to have been used in the construction of this singular building. It was compactly buried in fine sand, on which coarse gravel and large boulders in wavy strata were superimposed. It has been shown that the submergence, if caused by a sudden inundation, would have left the boulders, as the heaviest portion of the materials, at the bottom; instead of where they are now found at the surface—a position in which they have been deposited by floating ice. And we learn from this remarkable fact, that since the building of fishing huts in Sweden, the land where the canal is dug, has sunk during a period long enough for the deposition of strata sixty-four feet in thickness by the sea, and has subsequently been raised to its present elevation.

DON'T MAKE A FOOL OF YOURSELF. The best advice we can give the young man who is about to do business on his 'own hook,' as the phrase goes, is, don't make a fool of yourself. Do not imagine yourself rich, because you happen to handle more money from day to day than has been your practice during an apprenticeship. If you have paid for your stock in trade, bear in mind that it will soon become exhausted, and that your shelves drawers must be replenished; if that stock has been obtained on credit, remember that certain promissory notes will fall due anon, and that you must meet them promptly, or forfeit the confidence of others. Should you happen to realize a net profit of ten, fifteen, or twenty dollars on your sales for the week, do not order a horse and carriage and drive forth to places of dissipation; by so doing, you will not only make an infernal fool of yourself, but will probably imbibe habits, which, in nine cases out of ten, lead to utter ruin. Do not discard that very respectable friend—your old coat—too soon, because you happen to be a merchant. Let that hat be ironed over once or twice—it will do good service yet. Don't flirt with the girls too much; but bye and bye select some nice, tidy, industrious little maiden, who is not afraid to mop a floor or scour a sauce pan, and after a courtship of some two or three years, make her your wife. In brief, we enjoin it upon you to deal fairly and uprightly with all men—persevere—go ahead—and—don't make a fool of yourself.

NO TIME TO READ. How often do we hear—says a contemporary—men excuse themselves from subscribing to a good paper, by saying they have no time to read. When we hear a man thus excuse himself, we conclude he has never found time to confer any substantial advantage either upon his family, his country, or himself. To hear a freeman thus express himself is truly humiliating; and we can form no other opinion than that such a man is of little importance to society. Such men generally have time to attend public barbecues, meetings, sales and other gatherings, but they have 'no time to read.' They frequently spend whole days in gossiping, tipping and trading horses, they lose a day in asking advice of their neighbors, sometimes a day in picking up news, the prices current, and the exchanges—but these men never have any 'time to read.' They have time to hunt, to fish, to fiddle, to drink, to 'do nothing,' but 'no time to read.' Such men generally have uneducated children, unimproved farms and unhappy firesides. They have no energy, no spirit of improvement, no love of knowledge; they live 'unknown' and often die unwept and unregretted.

BEEF LAW IN MASSACHUSETTS. The following is an extract from a law in this State, in regard to beef:—All beef cattle, except bulls, sold in market by weight, shall, when slaughtered, be prepared for weighing in the following manner:—The legs shall be taken off at the knee and gambrel joint, the skin shall be taken from all other parts of the animal; the head shall be taken off at the second joint of the neck; the entrails taken out, and all the fat of the same be taken off and weighed as rough tallow, and every other part of the animal, excepting the hide and rough tallow, (the udder of cows excepted,) shall be weighed.

All beef shall be weighed upon the first week day succeeding that on which it may be slaughtered.

THE MANNER OF STUDY. It is of quite as much importance how we study, as what we study. Indeed I have thought that much of the difference among men could be traced to their different habits of study, formed in youth. A large portion of our scholars study for the sake of preparing to recite the lesson. They seem to have no idea of any object beyond recitation. The consequence is, they study mechanically. They endeavor to remember phraseology, rather than principles;—they study the book, not the subject. Let any one enter our schools and see the scholars engaged in preparing their lessons. Scarcely one will be seen who is not repeating over and over again the words of the text, as if there was a saving charm in repetition. Observe the same scholars at recitation, and it is a struggle of the memory to recall the forms of words. The vacant countenance too often indicates that they are words without meaning. This difficulty is very much increased, if the teacher is confined to the text book during recitation and particularly if he relies mainly upon the printed questions so often found at the bottom of the page. The scholars should be encouraged to study the subject, and his book should be held merely as the instrument.

A HAPPY WORLD. This is a happy world—who says to the contrary is a fool or something else. There is everything to make us happy. The land, sea and sky contribute to our enjoyment. The man who has a good heart, sees pleasure where a bad person beholds nothing but gloom. The secret, then, of being happy and enjoying this glorious world, is to possess a virtuous heart. Who is the most cheerful and contented man in your neighborhood? The man who is the most honored and possesses the greatest riches? No, it is he who has nothing but a kind heart? Nothing ruffles his temper or disturbs his repose. The morning sky—the evening cloud—the rolling waters—the blooming landscape—the teaming forest and the fields of snow, give him a pleasure that others never dream of. It is he whose mind is led from nature up to nature's God—and every day that he lives he is contented and happy as it is possible for a man to be. Depend upon it, the world is a beautiful one and contains a thousand sources of enjoyment, which they only can see and feel, whose hearts are pure and whose lives correspond with the word of eternal truth.

TO PREVENT WET FEET. I have only had three pairs of boots for six years (no shoes) and I think I shall not require any for the next six years to come. The reason is that I treat them in the following manner: I put a pound of tallow and half a pound of rosin in a pot on the fire; when melted and mixed I warm the boots, and apply the hot stuff with a painter's brush until neither the sole nor the upper leather will suck in any more. If it is desired that the boots should immediately take a polish, dissolve an ounce of wax in spirits of turpentine, to which add a teaspoonful of lamp black. A day after the boots have been treated with the tallow and rosin, rub over them the wax in turpentine, but not before the fire. Thus the exterior will have a coat of wax alone, and shine like a mirror. Tallow, or any other grease becomes rancid, and rots the stitching as well as the leather; but the rosin gives it an antiseptic quality which preserves the whole. Boots and shoes should be so large as to admit of wearing cork soles. Cork is so bad a conductor of heat that with it in the boots, the feet are always warm on the coldest stone floor.

HOW TO SAVE IN LITTLE MATTERS. Procure a book and keep an exact account of your expenditures. At the expiration of three months review the account and see how much you have expended in your four penny and nine penny items, which you could have done without as well as not. Then see to it that each ensuing quarter shall be minus just those things. In many cases the aggregate would be found more considerable than you would be aware of, unless you kept such an account.

SUNRISE. Grace Harkaway says:—The man that misses sunrise loses the sweetest part of his existence. I love to watch the first tear that glistens in the opening eye of the morning—the silent song—the flower's breath—the thrilling choir of the woodland minstrel's to which the modest brook trickles applause—these swelling out of the sweetest of creation's matins, seems to pour some glad and merry tale into delight's ear, as if the world had dreamed a happy thing, and now smiled o'er the telling of it.

MAN'S ABILITIES. No man knows what he can do, till he is fully resolved to do whatever he can. When men have thought themselves obliged to set about any business in good earnest, they have done that which their indolence made them suppose impossible. There are several abilities unknown to the possessor, which lie hid in the mind, for want of an occasion to call them forth.

TEA AND COFFEE. It appears by statistics published in London, that the consumption of coffee in the United States is greater than in England, and the consumption of tea in England greater than in the United States. The coffee consumption in England is 1 lb. 12 3/4 oz. per head. In the United States, 7 1/2 lb. per head per annum. The tea consumption, on the other hand, is, for England, 1 lb. 10 oz. per head, and for this country, 3-4 lb. per head.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, MAY 13, 1848.

For the Quincy Patriot.
A TESTIMONIAL.

Mr. Editor—Dr. J. S. Cunningham, late Agent of the Ohio State Temperance Society, having delivered two addresses on the subject of Temperance, and in defence of the Order of the Sons of Temperance, before the citizens of Quincy, the members of Quincy Division, No. 73, Sons of Temperance, at their regular meeting, Febd. That the undersigned be a Committee to offer a communication to the Patriot and other papers for publication, commendatory of Dr. C. as a temperance lecturer. He then prorogued the Legislature to the Tuesday next preceding the first Wednesday in January next.

ELLECTION IN BOSTON. Deacon Moses Grant was elected on Monday last, an Alderman in place of George E. Head resigned. He was supported by the whigs.

FROM MEXICO. A letter from a gentleman just arrived at New Orleans from Mexico, published in New York, says: "Our Commissioners arrived on the 14th and 17th, Mr. Clifford in advance. The treaty will be ratified with all the amendments, relying upon it." By an arrival from Brazos Santiago news is received that Gen. Price made an attack on Santa Cruz about the 14th of March and captured fourteen pieces of artillery, two thousand stand of arms, and some $800,000 worth of public property. The Mexican loss was one hundred and fifty killed, and as many more wounded. Our loss was five killed and twenty wounded, of whom two have since died.

CONGRESS. The Senate have been principally engaged on the bill for the occupation of Yucatan. A resolution calling on the President for the names of officers of the army whose nominations have been withheld has caused much discussion. In the House, the bill for the admission of Wisconsin into the Union has been under debate. On Thursday of last week Mr. Grinnell of Massachusetts reported a bill providing for the admission of certain articles of Canadian produce duty free into the United States on the reciprocity principle. Among the articles enumerated are, grain and breadstuffs of all kinds, vegetables, fruit, animals, hides, wool, tallow, horns, salted and fresh meats, ores of all kinds of metals, etc.

MASSACHUSETTS REGIMENT. The Boston Post publishes an official statement of the deaths, etc, that have taken place since this regiment arrived in Mexico, up to March 20th. The officers deceased are Maj. Webster, Capt. J. A. Felt, Lieut. E. B. Green, and 2d Lieut. G. F. Gardner. The number of privates deceased is seventy one, two of which are reported as killed by Mexicans. Seven officers have resigned, viz: Captains Ashley, Whiting and Nichols; Lieutenants Griswold, Roby, Myers and Thompson. Capt. George Walsh, and Lieutenants J. P. Caldwell and Amos Wood have been dismissed from the service by sentence of general court martial.

FIRE ON A RAILROAD. On Monday, the merchandise train on the Eastern Railroad took fire soon after leaving Rowley, and two cars containing about sixty boxes of fine cotton were consumed. The cotton was valued at three thousand six hundred dollars, and the two cars at two hundred, which loss falls on the railroad company.

SONGS FOR THE PEOPLE. The May number of this very elegant publication has been promptly received. It is every way worthy of a liberal public patronage.

THE UNION MAGAZINE FOR MAY. This number comes to us rich in its varied contributions and beautiful in embellishments and typography. It has a glorious mezzotint by Douey, and a superb line engraving by Osborne, besides six superior wood cuts, a magnificent colored fashion plate and two pages of original music. There are original papers by Mrs. Osgood, Mrs. Child, Mrs. Kirkland, Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. Butler, George W. Peck, J. H. Hopkins, and others of note.

PHRENOLOGY IN BOSTON. Messrs. O. S. & L. N. Fowler, somewhat celebrated as writers and lecturers on Phrenology and Physiology, are now lecturing at the Tremont Temple, Boston. The lectures are to be delivered every Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings through the month, admittance ten cents. Those of our friends who may visit the city, will have an opportunity to attend, and avail themselves of their professional services.

BRUTAL ASSAULT. An Irishman had a dispute on Wednesday morning with an overseer on the water works, in regard to half day's pay. After an altercation of a few moments, he assaulted and beat him in a most shocking manner. Had not an inspector on the works, (who was fortunately armed with a revolver,) come to his assistance, the villain would doubtless have killed the overseer.

DISINFECTING AGENT. Copperas, (sulphate of iron) one pound dissolved in water, say about four gallons, and poured two or three times into sinks, is a complete disinfectant, removing all unpleasant odor and preventing offensive effluvia when it becomes necessary to clean them. The cost is a mere trifle.

THE CAMPAIGN OPENED. Readers will see by our advertising columns that "Rough and Ready" (not old Zach.) is again in the field, prepared to clothe the million. There'll be a great rush to Savil's no doubt.

SAD ACCIDENT. On Wednesday last, Sullivan D. White, aged fourteen years, son of Mr. Levi White of Braintree, was instantly killed by the wheel of a heavy stone-wagon passing over his body. He was riding upon the tongue of the wagon and lost his balance, falling immediately from the wheel. The accident occurred in Hingham.

The bark Dana, of Boston, was abandoned at sea on the 23d of February. The crew were taken off and carried to Trieste. She was struck by a sea on the 12th of Feb., which carried off three men.

Gerrit Smith, of New York, has given five hundred dollars towards a fund for the defence of the men who carried off the slaves from Washington.

Great preparations are making at all the popular resorts and watering places to entertain visitors during the ensuing summer.

Five dead bodies have been found in Boston within a week. In no case, is the cause of death distinctly known. Besides, several infants have been either buried surreptitiously or found floating in the water.

Counterfeit ones and five, American Bank, Providence, (R. I.) have made their appearance.

The members of the Niagara Engine are requested to meet at their Hall, on MONDAY EVENING, at half past seven o'clock, as business of vital importance is to be transacted.

Mr. F. Brown, Dear Sir: I am much gratified in having an opportunity to announce to you, that, by the use of three bottles of your Sarsaparilla and Tomato Bitters, I have been, from a state of general debility and decline, and continual suffering, restored to the enjoyment of good health. For a number of years I have been troubled with the Liver Complaint, so badly at times, as to prevent my attending to business, and Dyspepsia followed, with the loss of appetite, weakness and debility, and a sinking and oppressive sensation at the stomach, most painful and distressing, which gradually decreased my strength, and led me into a decline, and debilitated me so much as to occasion fears for my recovery while in this situation I was induced, by the persuasion of a friend, to make a trial of your Bitters, and was most happily disappointed in finding an immediate relief; and before I had taken the contents of the first bottle, I had obtained a comfortable state of health, and before I had used three bottles, I enjoyed better health than for a number of years. This was about two years since, and my health has been in good till the present time. I must say that I have not much confidence in patent medicines, but I am satisfied, from the wonderful effects of your Bitters in my own case, and of friends whom I have induced to use it, that it is a valuable medicine, and I take much pleasure in recommending it to my friends and acquaintances, and indeed to all who are afflicted, as well worthy a trial.

I remain yours, PELEG SPRAGUE, Bath, Me., April 20, 1844.

From the Boston Chronotype, Oct. 1, 1847.

Consumption is the great curse of our Northern latitudes. It is the blight of domestic felicity and the despoiler of beauty. It robs the cheek of its healthful bloom, the mind of its serenity, and the eye of its brilliancy. It wastes the form, dims the intellect, and plunges its victim into an early grave. The young and the old, the serious and the gay, the city belle, the country lass, are alike its prey and its victims. Blessings on the man, then, whose genius and research furnished us with weapons to bid defiance to this "Dweller of the Threshold!" He merits the applause and gratitude of ages—he shall have ours at least.

One of the most important discoveries of modern science, for the cure pulmonary affections, is the Balsam of Wild Cherry. The credit of its discovery is due to the celebrated Dr. Wistar. This valuable compound has restored thousands of sufferers to health. It is expectorant, tonic, and demulcent, and is said to be a powerful vegetable emetic. Under its magic influence the most obstinate coughs, colds, and bronchial irritations disappear. We have used it and can recommend it with season, when the great cause of disease, East winds, are so prevalent.

POETRY.

OUR BULLY BOYS.

When Christ the Jewish children bless'd
And in his faithful arms enfold,
I think it plain appears
They were of quite a different mould
From those now raised in Yankee fold;
For our pugnacious dears,
If Christ into his arms should take,
Would kick and sprawl—wry faces make—
And midst their wrath and tears,
Our Bully Boys would raise such riot,
The Son of Man to make them quiet,
Would have to box their ears.

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

BREATHINGS OF SPRING.

Already the green budding birchen spray
Winnows the balm from the breath of May,
And the aspen thrills to a low sweet tone
To the mystic soul of the wood-nymphs known.
In the tangled coppice the dwarf-ork weaves
Its fringe-like blossoms and crimson leaves,
And the velvet buds of the willow unfold
Into downy feathers bedroped with gold;
While thick as the stars in the midnight sky,
In the dark, wet meadows the cowslips lie.

A love-tint flushes the wild-flower's cheek,
Rich melodies steal from the violet's throat,
In the riffs of the rock the wild columbines grow
Their heavy honey-cups bending low,
As a heart which vague, sweet thoughts oppress,
Droops 'neath its burden of happiness.

There the waters drip from the moss-fringed wells
With a sound like the tinkling of silver bells,
Or fall with a mellow and flute-like flow
Through the channelled clefts of the rocks below.

Soft music gushes in every tone
And perfume in every breeze is blown,
The flower in fragrance, the bird in song,
The glittering wave as it glides along,
All breathe the incense of boundless bliss,
The eloquent music of happiness.

TELL HIM I LOVE HIM YET.

Tell him I love him yet,
As in that joyous time,
Tell him I never forget,
Though memory now be crime.

Tell him when fades the light
Upon the earth and sea,
I will dream of him by night,
He must not dream of me.

Tell him to go where fame
Looks proudly on the brave,
And win a glorious name,
By deeds on land and wave.

Green, green upon his brow,
The laurel wreath shall be,
Although that laurel now,
Must not be shared with me.

Tell him to smile again,
In pleasure's dazzling throng,
To wear another's chain,
To praise another's song.

Before the loveliest there,
I'd have him bend the knee,
And breathe to her the prayer
He used to breathe to me.

Tell him that day by day
Life looks to me more dim,
I falter when I pray,
Although I pray for him.

And bid him when I die,
Come to my favorite tree;
I shall not hear him sigh,
Then let him sigh for me.

ANECDOTES.

At Churubusco, a young man of the Emerald Isle was shot in the head; on the arrival of the surgeon of the army, he was asked by a friend if the wound was dangerous, and answered that it was, as he could see the brains. "Ah! by my soul," replied the son of the green Isle, "please send a little to my father, for he often told me I never had any."

At a party, one of the guests observed her son Charles sitting rather more voraciously than the laws of even northern etiquette allowed. She watched for an opportunity, and gave him one of those significant looks which only mothers and sister can command; but instead of stopping Charles, he said to his mamma, "Oh, yes, needs't look and nod for me to stop. Ye know this was washing day, and I got no dinner."

A celebrated itinerant preacher of the present day, held forth recently in Pennsylvania, and on giving notice of his intention to preach, he requested the ladies not to bring their children when they came to hear him. He thought it was enough to hear one crying aloud in the wilderness at a time.

A gentleman walking through the streets of Mexico, saw a soldier sitting on the steps of a public gambling with dice. "Do you know it is wrong to gamble with dice?" said he. "How can I help it?" replied the man, "I am one of the skeleton regiment."

When, during the French Revolution, the bell of one of the Municipalities announced the rising of the people, and the summons to arms, Talliand is said to have burst forth with the exclamation—"The tocsin sounds—we triumph!" "Who triumphs—which side?" demanded his hearers. "I will tell you to-morrow," was the reply of the ambidextrous diplomatist.

A Chaplain at one of our State prisons, was asked by a friend how his parishioners were. "All under conviction," was the answer.

Colored ladies may be compared to many roses, says an exchange, because they were born to "blush unseen."

"You want a flogging, that's what you want," said a parent to his unruly son. "I know it, dad, but I'll try to get along without it," said the independent brat.

The Graefenberg Company,

OF NEW YORK.

HAVING established a Branch at No. 154 Washington Street, Boston, has appointed Mr. EDWIN C. BARNES, Secretary thereof, now offer to the people of New England their celebrated series of Medicines, in the fullest confidence that after a fair trial they will be found far superior, and will rapidly supersede all others now in use. The Company would first call attention to

THE GRAEFENBERG VEGETABLE PILLS. For the prevention and cure of the ordinary diseases of the bowels, (especially biliousness,) these Pills are infinitely superior to any the world has before seen. No language can describe their virtues. They are as different from all others before the public as light is from darkness. Every family in New England should try them. Price 25c a box, with full directions.

THE GRAEFENBERG SAKSAPARILLA COMPOUND in which the virtues of the noble and health giving Saksaparilla are highly concentrated; it is warranted to make two quarts of pure Saksaparilla from one ounce, and in the most powerful agent in the world to cleanse and purify the system. Price $1 per bottle.

THE GRAEFENBERG CHILDREN'S PANACEA, a medicine expressly adapted to the various diseases of children and youth, and also a cure for the most distressing of the kind ever offered to the public. It is composed of vegetables only, and may be used with perfect safety by infants. Price fifty cents per bottle.

THE GRAEFENBERG HEALTH BITTERS, a preventive of biliousness and other diseases, and a restorer of the strength, the appetite, and a healthy complexion. Price 25 cents a package.

THE GREEN MOUNTAIN VEGETABLE OINTMENT is prepared from an old Indian recipe, and cures with great rapidity, bruises or fresh cuts, wounds, burns, scalds, etc. Its virtues are too well known to need a more lengthy notice. Price 25 and 50 cents a box.

THE GRAEFENBERG EYE LOTION, an article which supplies a want long felt in this part of the country. It is an unfailing remedy for violent inflammation, weakness or foreign substances in the eyes, and for dimness and failing of the sight. It is compounded upon the most scientific principles, and has performed extraordinary cures. Price 25 cents per bottle.

THE GRAEFENBERG GAZETTE, published by the Company for gratuitous distribution, may be had on application to any one of their numerous Agents.

These medicines are for sale by Otis, Broaders & Co. 154 Washington Street, Boston, and by their Agents generally throughout New England. Application for Agents to be addressed to EDWIN C. BARNES, Secretary, N. E. Branch.

BOSTON.

PERFORM all Operations belonging to the DENTAL PROFESSION, and continue to Manufacture and insert the purest and best of MINERAL TEETH, upon the ARTIFICIAL and on all other principles as practised by the best Dentists in this country and Europe.

Every Tooth we extract, and every one we insert, we insure, according to circumstances; and all Dental Plate Work executed at our rooms is warranted to be equal to any that can be produced, and to give perfect satisfaction.

We are administering the CALORIFORM every day with success, and extracting Teeth by the dozen, without pain, and have never known it to affect the patient unfavorably, and yet we charge no more than when we do not give it.

The public will not forget that to us is due the credit of the great and important improvement recently made in the method of inserting Artificial Teeth, both on Gold Plate and Pivots, and also preserving diseased Teeth and stumps in a healthy condition.

Instruction given in relation to the New Method inserted by us, and whole sets inserted in the most difficult mouths, for country or traveling Dentists, on reasonable terms. Pivotal Teeth adapted to the mouth on our plan are far more durable and permanent than upon gold plate, secured in the common way, and will never wear resetting. When necessary to mount them on a plate of gold by our method, we extract no sound stumps, preserve the form of the mouth, and secure them so firmly that the patient can eat with them as well as if they were natural teeth, and they will last a whole life-time, and look perfectly natural.

To all who require the services of a Dentist, and particularly such as have been unskillfully served, we would "make our best bow," and say, don't wait for an introduction, but call and see us at 238 Washington St. corner of Central Court.

MISCELLANY.

GOING TO THE DOGS.

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

'I received your bill to-day, Mr. Leonard, said a customer, as he entered the shop of a master mechanic.

'We are sending out all our accounts at this season,' returned the mechanic, bowing.

'I want to pay you.'

'Very well, Mr. Baker, we're always glad to get money.'

'But you must throw off something. Let me see,'—and the customer drew out the bill,— 'twenty seven dollars and forty six cents. Twenty five will go. There, receipt the bill, and I'll pay you.'

But Leonard shook his head.

'I can't deduct a cent from that bill, Mr. Baker. Every article is charged at our regular price.'

'Oh, yes, you can. Just make it twenty five dollars, even money. Here it is.' And Baker counted out the cash.

'I am sorry, Mr. Baker, but I cannot afford to deduct anything. If you'd only owed me twenty five dollars, your bill would have been just that amount. I would not have added a cent beyond what is due, nor can I take anything less than my due.'

'Then you must deduct the odd money?'

'I cannot, indeed.'

'Very well.' The manner of the customer changed. He was evidently offended. 'The bill is too high by just the sum I asked to have stricken off. But, no matter, I can pay it.'

'Then you mean to insinuate,' said the mechanic, who was an independent sort of a man, 'that I am cheating you out of two dollars and forty six cents?'

'I didn't say so.'

'But it is plain that you think so, or you wouldn't have asked an abatement. If you considered my charges just, you wouldn't dispute them.'

'Oh, never mind, never mind! we'll not waste words about it. Here's your money,' said Mr. Baker, and he added another five dollar bill to the sum he had laid down. The mechanic receipted the account and gave the change, both of which his customer thrust into his pocket book with a petulant air, and then turned and left the shop without another word.

'It's the last bill he ever has against me,' muttered Baker to himself, as he walked away.

'If that's his manner of treating customers, he'll soon go to the dogs. He was downright insulting, and no gentleman will stand that from another, much less from a vulgar mechanic. Mean to insinuate! Humph! Yes, I did mean to insinuate.' And Mr. Baker involuntarily quickened his pace. 'He'll lose one good customer,' he continued to himself. 'I've paid him a great deal of money, but it's the last dollar of mine he ever handles.'

Baker was as good as his word. He withdrew his custom from that offending mechanic, and gave it to another.

'I've got one of your old customers, Leonard,' said a friend in the same business, to the mechanic, some six or eight months afterwards.

'Ah! who is it?'

'Baker.'

Leonard shrugged his shoulders.

'How came you to lose him?'

'I'll tell you how to keep him.'

'Well, how?'

'If your bill amounts to thirty dollars, make it thirty three and a few odd cents, by increasing some of the items. He will want this surplus knocked off, which you can afford to do; then he will pay it and think you just the man for him.'

'You lost him then, because you wouldn't abate anything from a true bill?'

'I did.'

'Thank you. But suppose my bill should be twenty six, or seven, or eight dollars; what then? I couldn't knock off the odd dollars for the purpose of making an even sum.'

'No. In that case you must add on until you get above thirty.'

'And fall back to that?'

'Yes. It will be knocking off the odd dollars, which he will think clear gain.'

'That would hardly be honest.'

'Hardly. But you must do it or lose his custom some day or other.'

'I shall have to accommodate him, I suppose. If he will be cheated, it can't be helped.'

On the very first bill that Baker paid to his new tradesman, he obtained an abatement of one dollar and ninety cents, odd money, but actually paid three dollars more than was justly due. Still, he was very well satisfied, imagining that he had made a saving of one dollar and ninety cents. The not over scrupulous tradesman laughed in his sleeve and kept his customer.

Having withdrawn his support from Leonard, it was the candid opinion of Mr. Baker that he was 'going to the dogs,' as he expressed it, about as fast as a man could go. He often passed the shop, but rarely saw a customer.

'No wonder,' he would say to himself. 'A man like him can't expect and don't deserve custom.'

In the eyes of Baker, the very grass seemed to grow upon the pavement before the door of the declining tradesman. Dust settled thickly in his window, and the old sign turned grayer and grayer in the bleaching air.

'Going to the dogs, and no wonder,' Baker would say to himself, as he went by. He appeared to take a strange interest in watching the gradual decay of the mechanic's fortunes. One day a mercantile friend said to him—

'Do you know anything about this Leonard?'

'Why?' asked Baker.

'Because, he wants to make a pretty large bill with me.'

'On time?'

'Yes, on the usual credit of six months.'

'Don't sell him. Why the man is going to the dogs, at railroad speed.'

'Indeed?'

'Yes. I'm looking every day to see him close up. He might have done well, for he understood his business. But he's so unaccommodating, and I might say, insulting to his customers, that he drives the best ones he has away. I used to make large bills with him, but haven't dealt at his shop now for some time.'

'Ah! I was not aware of that. I am glad I spoke to you, for I shouldn't like to lose six or seven hundred dollars.'

'Six or seven hundred! Is it possible he wants to buy so recklessly? Take my advice, and don't think of trusting him.'

'I certainly shall not.'

When Leonard ordered the goods, the merchant declined selling, except for cash.

'As you please,' returned the mechanic, indifferently, and went elsewhere and made his purchase.

It happened that Mr. Leonard had a very pretty and very interesting daughter, on whose education the mechanic had bestowed great pains; and it also happened that Baker had a son, who, in most things, was a chip of the old block. Particularly was he like his father in his great love of money; and scarcely had he reached his majority ere he began to look about him with a careful eye to a good matrimonial arrangement, by which plenty of money would be secured.

Adelaide Leonard, an account of her beauty and accomplishments, was much coaxed, and mingled freely in society. Young Baker had met her frequently, and could not help being struck with her beauty, intelligence and grace.

'There's a chance for you,' said a friend to him, one evening.

'In Miss Leonard?'

'Yes.'

'She's a charming girl,' replied the young man. 'I wonder if her father is worth anything?'

'People say so.'

'Indeed?'

'Yes. They say the old fellow has laid up something quite handsome; and, as Adelaide is his only child, she will of course get it all.'

'I was not aware of that.'

'It's all so I believe.'

After this young Baker was exceedingly attentive to Miss Leonard, and made perceptible inroads upon her heart. He even went so far as to visit pretty regularly at her house, and was meditating an avowal of his attachment, when his father said to him, one day—

'What young lady was that I saw with you in the street, yesterday afternoon?'

'Her name is Leonard.'

'The daughter of old Leonard in—street?'

'Yes, sir.'

Mr. Baker looked grave and shook his head.

'Do you know anything about her?'

'Nothing about her, but I know that her father is going to the dogs as fast as ever a man went.'

'Indeed! I thought he was very well off. Oh, no! I've been looking to see his shop shut up, or to hear of his being sold out by the Sheriff, every day for these two years past.'

'Miss Leonard is a very lovely girl.'

'She's the daughter of a poor, vulgar mechanic. If you see anything so lovely in that, Henry, you have a strange taste.'

'There is no gainsaying Adelaide's personal attractions,' replied the son, 'but if her father is in the condition that you allege, that settles the matter as far as she and I are concerned. I am glad you introduced the subject, for I might have committed myself, and, when too late, discovered my error.'

'And a sad error it would have been, Henry. In any future matters of this kind, I hope you will be perfectly frank with me. I have a much more accurate knowledge of the condition and standing of people than you can possibly have.'

The son promised to do as his father wished. From that time the visits to Miss Leonard were abated, and his attentions to her, when they met in society, became coldly formal. The sweet young girl, whose feelings had really been interested, felt the change, and was, for a time, unhappy; but in a few months she recovered herself, and was again as bright and cheerful as usual.

Time went steadily on, sweeping down one and setting up another, but still old Leonard didn't go to the dogs, much to the surprise of Baker, who could not imagine how the mechanic kept his head above water after having drove away his best customers, as he must long since have done, if all were treated as he had been. But he was satisfied of one thing, at least, and that was, that the mechanic must be miserably poor, and he, in fact, deserved to be, according to his idea of the matter.

One day, about a year after his timely caution to his son in regard to Miss Leonard, Baker happened to pass along a street where he had not been for some months. Just opposite a large, new and beautiful house, to which the painters were giving their last touches, he met a friend. As they passed, Baker said—

'That's an elegant house. It has been built since I was in this neighborhood.'

'Yes, it is a very fine house, and I suppose didn't cost less than ten thousand dollars.'

'No, I should think not. Who built it? Do you know?'

'Yes. It was built by Leonard.'

'By whom? Baker looked surprised.'

'By old Leonard. You know him.'

'Impossible! He's not able to build a house like that.'

'Oh, yes he is, and a half a dozen more like it, if necessary.'

'Leonard?'

'Certainly. Why he's worth, at least, seventy thousand dollars.'

'You must be in error.'

'No. His daughter is to be married next month to an excellent young man, and this house has been built, and is to be handsomely furnished, as a marriage present.'

'Incredible! I thought he was going, or had gone, to the dogs, long ago.'

'Leonard! The friend could not help laughing aloud. 'He goes to the dogs! He's the last one to go to the dogs. Oh, no! There isn't a man in his trade who does so good a business, as little show as he makes. Good work, good prices and punctuality, are the cardinal virtues of his establishment, and make all substantial. How in the world could you have taken such a notion.'

'I don't know, but such has been my impression for a long time,' replied Baker, who felt exceedingly cut down on account of the mistake he had made, and particularly so in view of the elegant house and seventy thousand dollars, which might all have belonged to his son, in time, if he had not fallen into such an egregious error about old Leonard.

Most persons are apt to make mistakes of this kind, and imagine that because from some slight offence they have withdrawn their custom from a man, that he must necessarily be going to the dogs. Probably in the matter of stopping subscriptions to newspapers and periodicals, people are more prone to fall into this error than in anything else. A man gets offended about something—perhaps, through some error of the clerk, his bill is sent to him after it has been paid; or, through the neglect of a carrier, or the purloining propensities of news-vending lads, his paper fails a few times, and in high indignation he orders a discontinuance. After that, he is firmly convinced that the paper must go down; and if he happen to meet with it a few months afterward by accident, will very likely say—

'Why, is this thing alive yet? I thought it had stopped long ago.'

So the world moves on. People are prone to think that what they smile on lives, and what they frown upon is blighted and must die.

THE WIDOW.

'Bless me? Are you here at this time of night? I turned, and as I live, there was the widow! How ridiculous,' she said; 'she did not know I was there, and had just come out to put out the light and see that the fire was safe. She had just thrown a shawl on, and to be seen in her night cap,—oh! it was shocking! Good night, it was time that I was in bed; I must make haste so that she could return and extinguish the light.'

You will be astonished at my boldness, (as I was afterwards,) but as she was retiring from the room, I took the candlestick from her hand, led her to a sofa, and insisted upon relating all the incidents of the day to her. She showed but very little reluctance to comply, and I sat down beside her.

'But goodness gracious, I cannot be sitting alone with you at this hour!'

'I don't know why she sank her voice to a whisper, as she said this, but she did, and her looks said as plain as looks can speak—'Oh, do detain me!'

'Why,' I replied, 'this is the most quiet, delightful hour of the twenty four—the silence gives a kind of sacred propriety to it; besides, it's only—I—there's no harm in sitting with me!'

'Well,' she answered, 'do let me take off this odious cap. Oh! how could I be caught with this horrid cap on!' and she raised her hands to untie its ribbons, but no, that 'horrid cap' added a new charm to her beautiful features. I insisted upon its remaining. I was peremptory—I clasped her fingers to prevent its removal, and she desisted. There was a magic in her fingers that prevented my releasing them. Did you ever sit at midnight with a pretty woman, wearing a pretty night cap, holding her hands? If so, you may imagine your feelings. You know how her touch thrills the blood cold and quivering, and how the heart leaps with a kind of tremulous exultation that almost takes away the breath and makes the throat feel hoarse and husky, and how the fingers of the disengaged hand will be beating upon the back of the sofa in spite of yourself. This was how I felt, who had never been in such a situation, and although I had detained the young widow with the intention of giving her a lively account of the day's and night's adventures, the power of speech had suddenly left me. 'Well,' she said, 'how did you enjoy yourself at the party?'

'Excellent!'

'I replied, 'we were very merry.' We were again silent for a full minute, and when our eyes met, I felt actually embarrassed, although I was conscious of doing no wrong.

The widow was the first to speak again; she looked in my face, and with a smile she whispered, 'I really think Mr. Sweep is—' she nodded her head and smiled.

'He is,' I answered, and beginning to feel more at ease, I felt my arm slide down the sofa, until it almost encircled—her waist! The widow gently tried to remove it, but I was obstinate and she desisted. Was not I growing bold?

What wonder if my arm clasped tighter as she proceeded to whisper a little anecdote (a queer secret) about Mr. Jopson and Miss Quince? What, when our looks were so expressive whenever our eyes met, if, in the abstraction attendant on relating the story, the ivory fingers of her hand fell upon mine, sweetly and unconsciously imprisoning it? All this was the natural result of our situation. But when we had continued thus for ten or fifteen minutes, and she lifted her white hand and gently put back a lock of hair that had fallen upon my forehead, it was too much for me and I clasped her to my bosom—and—kissed her!

She gave the prettiest little start in the world and recovering herself by administering a gentle box on the ear to me, which accompanied with a smile was intended, I could plainly see, for encouragement. But as she withdrew her eyes from mine, they turned upon some object in the room, which caused her to release my hand. I looked, and there was the portrait of her late husband, regarding us with an appearance, as it seemed to us both, of stern and melancholy rebuke. The lamp was expiring, and in the dim flickering of the light, one might have sworn that the portrait was shaking its head in sorrowful upbraiding! The widow looked for a moment, then she burst into tears, and snatching the candle hastily retired. I followed quickly with a beating heart, for, after this occurrence, I should as soon have remained alone with a ghost as with that portrait!

DOMESTIC ECONOMY.

The wetting of coals is very false economy, as, though they burn slower, a great deal of heat is wasted in drying, and carried off in steam. It is false economy, too, to purchase moist sugar, for half a pound of pure refined sugar gives more sweetness than one pound of raw; a slight trial in coffee will prove this. In airing rooms, both the upper and the lower parts of the window should be opened, as the bad and heated air, from its lightness, will pass out at the top, and the fresh cool air come in at the bottom. A blanket is a cooler covering than a sheet in summer because it allows the perspiration to escape. Sheets feel cooler at first, because they carry off the heat of the body quicker; but when they become as warm as the body, they feel warmer, by confining the perspiration. Roast meat is more nutritious than boiled, as in boiling the gelatine is extracted, and is dissolved in water. Coffee should never be boiled, as boiling extracts and dispels the fine aromatic oil which gives it flavor and strength. It should be made by pouring boiling water through coffee in a strainer. Writing paper dipped in brandy is often used in covering preserves and jams; but it has a bad effect, as the spirit soon evaporates, and the moisture which remains produces mouldiness. Measuring medicine by drops is very fallacious, as the size of the drops vary, both with the consistence of the fluid and the size of the lip of the vessel.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, MAY 20, 1848.

John A. Greer, Editor.

MURDER OF A WHOLE FAMILY. A shocking tragedy occurred in the village of Edgecomb, (Me.) on Friday of last week. A family named Pinkham, consisting of a mother, a father, and four children, were found all murdered in their own dwelling. It was the work of the father under the influence of the Miller delusion, nearly severing the heads of the mother and children with an axe and then cutting his own throat with a razor. From a paper found in the house, signed with the initials of the father, it appears to have been a mutual agreement between the husband and wife. He was a ship-carpenter worth from three to four thousand dollars.

HORRIBLE. A whale ship of Honolulu, in May last, fell in with a Japanese junk, dismantled and otherwise injured in a typhoon seven months previous. The original number of the crew was seventy-seven, but were reduced to four, and in a famishing condition. The crew had drawn lots as to who should be killed and eaten, the one on whom the lot fell, fighting for his life, and in some instances succeeding in killing one of the others, in which case the murdered man was eaten. The survivors were scorched with knife wounds, as if their lives had often been attempted. They were kept on board the whaler thirty days, and then put on board some fishing boats, close in shore.

SUPERIOR DENTISTRY. The New England Washingtonian says, "Of our own choice, and with peculiar satisfaction, we say publicly a few words on the dental workmanship of Dr. Grandin & Dudley, of Boston. Their new method of setting teeth is a discovery of great importance, having advantages in respect to durability, convenience, cleanliness and healthiness, above all others. It is a real improvement, not in the mere slight of hand in doing the work, but in the work itself. And then the style of their work is superior. They have recently done an important piece of work for a member of our family, which cannot, we think, be surpassed by art. The satisfaction with the work affords such pleasure as almost compensates for the misfortune which rendered it necessary. And then these gentlemen are so attentive to their patients as to render it agreeable to be a recipient of their service. Their words are their credentials."

Dr. Grandin, the senior partner of the firm, has his residence in this town.

FROM EUROPE. The steamer Cambria arrived at New York on Sunday morning, bringing one week later intelligence. There is a gradual improvement taking place in the general aspect of commercial affairs.

The agitation and distress in Ireland still continues.

The progress of the Revolution throughout Europe is marked by steadiness and determination. The prevailing topic in French affairs is the elections to the Assembly. Sufficient has transpired to indicate that the liberal party will triumph. Mr. Ruch, the Minister of the United States in Paris, has formally recognized the French Republic in the name of the American Union.

There is no further definite intelligence from the Continent.

A KEYSAKE. Mrs. J. Q. Adams has presented to Dr. William A. Newell of Washington, a splendid ring, in token of her appreciation of his services to her illustrious husband. It is of massive gold, having a valuable corundum for a signet. This gem turns upon a hinge and discloses a small band of the hair of the deceased placed under a glass, with the inscription, "J. Q. Adams, Feb. 28, 1845."

INSOLVENCY. The new insolvent law will go into effect in about three weeks. Under it, no man can be discharged who does not pay fifty cents on the dollar without the written consent of a majority of creditors, both in number and amount, nor without paying in full, all debts contracted for necessities for himself or family, within one year of the insolvency. Proceedings may be commenced under the old law till the new one goes into operation, and all proceedings commenced under the old law will be carried through by the Masters in Chancery, the same as if the new law had not been passed.

THE CHARTISTS. The Chartists are a great and fast augmenting party of the laboring poor of England, awakened from the lethargy of ages to a sense of their wrongs and a keen desire to learn and take possession of their rights, peaceably if they may, forcibly if they must. They are the poor radicals, the democracy of England; by which is not meant so distant republicans whose ideas of liberty and self offices are constantly and inseparably connected. Their wrongs are real, their claims right and reasonable, the cause just.

A CORIUS APPLE. Scions of an apple tree have been received in Boston from near Ticonderoga, (N. Y.) where alone it is propagated, bearing a kind of apple which has neither core nor seeds. The origin was as follows: the top of a young tree was bent over and covered with earth, which took root. The tree was then cut asunder, which stopped all connexion with the natural root of the tree, and by sprouts which sprung from the top portion of the body, a regular top was formed, which produces this fine fruit—a beautiful red, good size, pleasant apple in the fall.

The receipts of flour at Boston, last week, were 16,867 barrels.

From Mexico. The United States Steamship New Orleans arrived at New Orleans on the 7th from Vera Cruz. Gen. Scott and suit left the city of Mexico on the 22d ult., and arrived at Vera Cruz on Sunday, the 30th. He immediately embarked on the brig St. Petersburg for New York, under a salute from Fort Concepcion. Gen. Butler reviewed the troops in the city of Mexico, on the 23d April. The line was more than a mile long. The Hon. Messrs. Sevier and Clifford have been invited within a few days past to various entertainments.

Generals Cushing, Pillow and Towson have arrived at New Orleans. The impression that the treaty will be ratified receives confirmation. The Mexican papers say that Pena y Pena will assume the responsibility of the ratification. A despatch says, that should a quorum be obtained in season the treaty will be ratified, and probably at any rate.

Vera Cruz dates of the 3d, mention that a new revolutionary movement had broken out at San Luis. The insurgents attempted to surprise Guadalupe, but were repulsed. They then joined Bustamante's division. There had been an outbreak also at Sierra Gordo. The insurgents had been attacked near Terorangua, and nine killed and nineteen taken prisoners.

CONGRESS. On the 11th, in the Senate, Mr. Davis of this State, spoke upon the bill for the occupation of Yucatan. The bill for the admission of Wisconsin was passed in the House.

On the 12th, in the Senate, the bill for the admission of Wisconsin was read and referred. The House was engaged on private bills.

On the 13th, the Yucatan bill was before the Senate. There was a discussion on slavery in the House.

Monday, 15th inst., the Yucatan bill was the principal business before the Senate. In the House, the bill for refunding money advanced to volunteers was passed.

On the 16th, the Wisconsin bill and the Yucatan bill were before the Senate. In the House, the revolutionary pension bill was passed.

On the 17th, the Yucatan bill was before the Senate, and the whole subject was laid on the table. The Naval Pension bill and the Post Office bill were before the House.

BAYNE'S PANORAMA. This great painting is attracting good deal of notice in Boston, at the present time. For the convenience of the travelling public there are to be afternoon exhibitions twice a week. It will be seen by an advertisement in another column, that inducements are offered to parties and schools, and that an agency for the sale of tickets has been established in this place.

THE RIGHTS OF SLAVE OWNERS. A bill has been reported in the United States Senate, by Mr. Butler of South Carolina, to aid slave owners in catching their runaway servants in the Free States. This bill provides, that when a slave escapes into another State, the owner or his agent shall have the right to go before any Judge of the United States Court, or any Clerk of the same, or any United States Collector or Postmaster, and make oath that such person is his slave, and shall thereupon receive certificate of the fact, which shall be a warrant to the United States Marshal to restore said slave to his owner. Any person who shall aid in hindering the execution of the warrant, or remove or conceal a slave so arrested, is subject to a fine of one thousand dollars.

FIRE IN ROXBURY. A large building known as the "steam bakery" and a large barn were destroyed by fire in Roxbury, on Thursday morning.

BOYS' AND GIRLS' MAGAZINE. The fifth number of this pleasing miscellany for youth contains its usual variety of interesting matter. Bradbury & Guild, Boston, publishers.

YUCATAN. A treaty had been arranged between the Government of Yucatan and the Indians through Jacinto Pat. Pat is to be Governor for life of the Indians, and Barbachano Governor for life of the whites. Other Yucatan chiefs deny the right of Jacinto Pat to make a treaty. His troops were leaving him and committing great excesses.

MANUFACTURING INDUSTRY OF NEW ENGLAND. The six states of New England, containing one-eighth of the population of the United States, produce two-thirds of its cotton fabrics, three-fifths of its woollens, nearly half its leather, and other articles in the same proportion. The single state of Massachusetts owns one-sixth of the manufacturing capital of the nation.

IOWA AND WISCONSIN. The growth of these two territories is astonishing. In 1840, Iowa had a population of 43,112; now it contains 116,200. Then Wisconsin had 30,645; now it contains 213,000!

DEA. GRANT'S QUICK STEP. E. H. Wade, music publisher, Boston, has issued a quick step ornamented with a very good likeness of this distinguished supporter of the Temperance cause.

LITERATURE ANALYZED. Poetry, says somebody, is the flower of literature; prose is the corn, potatoes, and meat; satire is the aquafortis; wit is the spice and pepper; love-letters are the honey and sugar; dunning letters are the emetics; letters containing remittances are apple-dumplings.

Quincy, March 11.

Mr. F. Brown, Dear Sir: I am much gratified in having an opportunity to announce to you, that, by the use of three bottles of your Sarsaparilla and Tomato Bitters, I have been, from a state of general debility and decline, and continual suffering, restored to the enjoyment of good health.

I was induced, by the recommendation of a friend, to try your Bitters, and was most happily disappointed, in that, as to prevent my attending to business, and Dyspepsia followed, with the loss of appetite, weakness and debility, and a sinking and oppressive sensation at the stomach, most painful and distressing, which gradually decreased my strength, and led me into a decline, and debilitated me so much as to occasion tears for my recovery; THE Perseverence and Energy requisite to enable an invalid to OBTAIN THE MEANS of cure, are pained and destroyed by the myriad of those fallacious signs of hope, displayed before his glowing eyes. Science has scarce done ought but ENCOURAGE the medicinal art; and if we wish to seek simply and surely a cure of any complaint we must resort to NATURAL PREPARATIONS, evidently designed by PROVIDENCE for our use and relief. We discountenance, utterly, all pretensions to

CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC.
Be particular and ask for Doct. Wood's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Bitters, and receive no other. This is the first preparation of these articles combined, ever offered to the public, and the great success attending its use has induced the unprincipled to counterfeit and imitate. Thornton, Jr., New Bedford.

NORFOLK S.S. At a meeting of the County Commissioners at Dedham, April 18th, 1848.

ON the Petition of Judah Loring and others, setting forth that "common conveniences and necessity require that the highway from a point near the store of Benjamin Newcomb, on the Braintree and Weymouth Turnpike, called Howard Street, to a point in said Street near the house of Nathaniel Hayward, in said town of Braintree, be straightened, widened, and certain specific repairs made thereon; and that said Street passes through land of Jonathan Hayward and others." And the Commissioners having examined due notice of said Petition to be given to all parties interested, and having met said parties, viewed said route, and fully heard them concerning the prayer of said Petition, do adjudge that common convenience and necessity do require that said road should be widened and straightened as prayed for. # QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, MAY 27, 1848.

John A. Green, Editor.

ARRIVAL OF THE CALEDONIA. The steamer Caledonia arrived at Boston on Sunday, having left Liverpool on the 6th inst. She brings seven days later European news.

The most important news is that of the complete triumph of the friends of good order, in the French elections, and the quiet meeting of the National Assembly. This body met and was inaugurated on the 6th, to the cry of "Vive la Republique." The opinion seems to be prevalent that the first act of the Assembly will be to name Lamartine as "First President of the Republic of France." The Provisional Government of course have yielded up their functions. The most important of the acts of that body is the decree abolishing slavery in all the colonies and possessions of France. Every Frenchman, even when in a foreign country, is interdicted from possessing, purchasing, or selling slaves, and from participating, directly or indirectly, in any traffic or dealing of this nature.

In England, matters both of politics and business appear to be very quiet. The commercial intelligence from Great Britain is of an improved and encouraging nature. Large Reform meetings have been held in all the large towns in the kingdom.

Some disturbances have taken place in Ireland, but were principally quarrels among the Irish leaders themselves.

The news from Venice and Lombardy is very contradictory. All supplies to the island city have been cut off, and the city was in a state of anarchy and distress.

The King of Naples has declared war against Sicily.

The King of Denmark has been unsuccessful in attempts to reunite his revolting German Duchies. It is supposed that England would intervene to stop the petty warfare.

A treaty offensive and defensive between Russia, Sweden and Denmark, is arranged, and will be ratified in the event of the entry of German troops in Schleswig, in which case Denmark will be supported by the other two powers.

The draft of the new fundamental law for the German Empire has been laid before the Diet, and if carried, will form a government more similar, in practice, to that of this country, than any which can be formed. The head of the government is to be a hereditary emperor.

The most frightful excesses continue to occur in Poland.

The news from India is not important. Mahomet Ali, of Egypt, was at the point of death.

CONGRESS. On the 16th inst., the Vice President laid before the Senate a report in relation to the quantity of sugar imported into the United States within four years. The resolution relative to the deferred nominations was taken up. The Post Office bill was before the House.

In the Senate, on the 19th, a bill to permit Spanish steamers to land passengers and mails at our ports without paying tonnage duties, was passed. A bill making appropriations for the support of West Point Academy, was amended by appropriating two thousand dollars for the Board of Visitors, and passed, also the Wisconsin bill was passed. The Senate adjourned to Monday. In the House, there was no business of importance.

On the 20th, the House passed the bill for purchase of the Madison papers. Mr. Palfrey of this State made a speech in favor of the bill. The Senate was not in session.

RELIEF FOR THE ASTHMA. Mr. William Mansfield of Gloucester, (Mass.) states in the Lynn Pioneer that he has been cured of a severe, inveterate, hereditary asthma, of more than forty five years standing, not having for thirty years slept in a bed, by the following means:—Apply a very coarse towel, perfectly wet, to the whole surface of the body and extremities, and then a dry one, equally coarse, with as much friction as possible. Sea water is preferable, but if not at hand, make your spring water about as salt. The best time for the purpose is at the evening hour, and will not occupy more than fifteen minutes.

MEALS AND LODGING. The accommodation afforded to persons visiting Boston for partaking of meals, at any hour they choose, in a quiet, central, and pleasant place, at MILLIKEN'S TEMPERANCE RESTAURANT, head of Norfolk Avenue, rear of 185 1-2 Washington Street, is highly appreciated by those who are fond of good living and value the economy of time and money. Separate eating Saloons are provided for Ladies, which renders his establishment particularly attractive to families.

Lodgings may also be had, in clean beds and comfortable apartments, for only 25 cents.

A Branch of this celebrated Eating House is located in the rear of 318 Washington Street—south part of the city.

The approbation manifested by the Temperance Public for the efforts of Mr. MILLIKEN, in catering to their appetites, has elicited from him the most grateful acknowledgements, and encouraged him to leave no reasonable means untaken to deserve their good opinion. Visit him when you go to Boston.

BAYNE'S VOYAGE TO EUROPE. This Panorama is exhibited Wednesday and Saturday afternoons, and every evening except Sunday, in Amory Hall, 323 Washington Street, Boston.

Eljah L. Hamlin, of Bangor, has been selected by the whigs of Maine as their candidate for Governor.

Mexico. The late arrivals bring nothing definite. The speculations as to the final result of the treaty are of the most opposite and conflicting character.

Gen. Cushing, and other officers of the army, arrived at Washington on the 23d inst.

NATIONAL CONVENTION. The Democratic National Convention for the nomination of candidates for President and Vice President of the United States, assembled at Baltimore, last Monday. Hon. Andrew Stevenson, of Virginia, was chosen President. A committee was appointed to examine and report the number of delegates entitled to seats and the validity of their credentials. There are some preliminary difficulties to settle, and days may elapse before a nomination is made.

INDIAN WAR IN OREGON. Late and exciting news has been received from Oregon. Four powerful tribes of Indians have commenced a bloody war against the settlers. Four battles had already been fought in January. Five hundred whites kept up a continued fight with two thousand Indians for an entire day, at the close of which the Indians retired. On the 29th of November, a horrible massacre was perpetrated by the Cuswa Indians, at the Presbyterian Mission. Dr. White and his wife and eighteen others were killed, and sixty or seventy persons were taken prisoners. The prisoners were ransomed and restored.

IMPORTANT INVENTION. A machinist of Hartford, Conn., has recently invented a process by which cast-iron can be converted, almost instantly, and with slight expense and labor, into steel. Twenty minutes only is necessary to convert a ton of iron into steel of the best quality, a process usually requiring from six to ten days. The inventor has been offered $12,000 for the patent right by the State of Pennsylvania.

FROM YUCATAN. The ratification of the Treaty between Gen. Berhachela and Jacinto Pat, is officially announced. It is looked upon as terminating the war between the Indians and the whites. Emigrants from the vicinity of New Mexico were continually arriving. The treatment of the whites by the Indians, especially the females, is said to be horrible.

THE FALCON FAMILY; OR, YOUNG IRELAND. A novelette with this title has been published by T. Wiley, Jr., Boston, a copy of which we have received. It is from the pen of the author of "The Bachelor of the Albany," and is for sale at the store of C. Gill & Co. The Messrs. Gill have upon their counters a great variety of "cheap literature"—in fancy colored covers and with attractive titles—among which we notice one entitled "When to Marry and how to get Married," by "one who has refused twenty excellent offers at least," (think of that.) All who like such intellectual food can here find a supply.

COLONIZATION. The Secretary of the American Colonization Society states that no less than four expeditions are now afloat, bearing nearly five hundred emancipated emigrants to Liberia. An equal number await the ability of the Society to send them. The estimated expense of the voyage to and settlement in Liberia of each emigrant is fifty dollars.

PAINFUL COINCIDENCE. The widow of Hon. Alexander H. Everett, United States Commissioner to China, and also the widow of Rev. S. C. Clifton, a missionary of the southern baptist board, recently arrived from Canton. Both families went to China in the same ship, and the widows returned home together, equally bereaved.

DAMAGE BY RAILROAD. A Mr. Temple, who was injured by a collision of trains on the Fall River Railroad in February, 1847, has got a verdict of three thousand two hundred dollars. The damages claimed were fifteen thousand dollars.

CONNECTICUT. Ex-Governor Roger Sherman Baldwin, and Truman Smith, a member of the present House of Representatives, have been elected United States Senators from Connecticut. The one to take the place of Hon. John N. Niles, whose term expires next March,—and the other to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Hon. J. W. Huntington.

A later account says a question has arisen in the House, as to the accuracy of the count of the vote, and the resolutions declaring Messrs. Baldwin and Smith elected, have been recalled from the Senate.

THE LIQUOR CASES. About twenty persons were sentenced on Tuesday in the Municipal Court, Boston, for violations of the License Law, the sentences varying from $100 fine and twenty days in Jail, to $20 and five days on each count. One was sentenced on five indictments to $170 and one hundred and thirty days imprisonment. Some paid their fines, and others found it more convenient to go to jail.

STEAMBOAT EXPLOSION. The Steamboat Halifax, a small boat running from Waterville to Hallowell, on the Kennebec, with passengers for the larger boats plying between Hallowell and Boston, burst her boiler on Tuesday, while passing through the lock at Augusta dam. There were about twenty persons on board; six were killed, and others are missing. The boat was rendered a complete wreck and sunk immediately. The Halifax had been racing with the steamer Balloon, and, on entering the lock, held on her steam. The explosion occurred at the first revolution of the engine, as she started to come out. She was a new boat and designed to navigate the shoal waters of the Kennebec.

WISTAR'S BALM OF WILD CHERRY, the great remedy for CROUP, BRONCHITIS, AND ALL AFFECTIONS OF THE THROAT.

PULMONARY ORGANS. A very important disease over which this "Balm" exerts a very powerful influence, is that of a DISEASED LIVER.

In this complaint, which is undoubtedly proved more efficacious than any remedy hitherto employed, and in numerous instances when patients had endured long and severe suffering from the disease, without receiving the least benefit from various remedies, and when MERCURY has been resorted to in vain, the use of this Balm has restored the LIVER to a healthy action, and in many instances effected

PERMANENT CURES! After every known remedy had failed to produce this desired effect.

Besides its astonishing efficacy in the diseases above mentioned, we also find it a very effectual remedy in ASTHMA, a complaint in which it has been extensively used, with decided success, even in cases of years standing.

It not only emanates from a regular physician, but has also been well tested in all the complaints for which it is recommended. It is not my intention, therefore, either to cloak it in mystery, or in any way deceive the public by overrating its virtues; on the contrary, I shall simply endeavor to give a brief statement of its usefulness, and flatter myself that its surprising efficacy will enable me to furnish such proofs of its virtues, as will satisfy the most incredulous, that Consumption may and "CAN BE CURED" if this Medicine be resorted to in time.

CAUTION! The public are particularly cautioned against purchasing imitation of articles pretending to have the same effect as Brown's Sarsaparilla and Tomato Bitters. Never buy the Sarsaparilla and Dandelion Panacea, Kitteridge's Tomato Bitters, or any other preparation, with the exception of getting the genuine BROWN'S SARSAPARILLA AND TOMATO BITTERS, which are prepared at his Medicine Store, No. 68 Washington Street, Boston. These Bitters are the first preparation of the kind that was ever sold, and they are the only genuine article of the kind now in the market. Always ask that the direction is signed FREDERICK BROWN, in his own hand writing. Who ever heard of a man's counterfeiting a bad bank note, or one that would not pass? Just so it is with medicine; they always counterfeit that which sells.

All orders for Brown's Sarsaparilla and Tomato Bitters, Directed to FREDERICK BROWN, the proprietor, No. 68 Washington Street, Boston, will be attended to punctually.—But the goods are packed for shipping. None genuine unless signed FREDERICK BROWN, on the wrapper.

still we are in hopes, by perseverance and strict attention to business, in the course of years to make some few acquaintance in this our NATIVE TOWN, and to be person or persons some one knows of. But as the proof of the Pudding is in the eating thereof, and as our Pudding, i. e. Ready-Made Clothing, has been in pretty general use the last year among the natives, and like cakes (viz. LOW PRICES) produce like effects, we are in hopes that

POETRY.

THE SLEEP.

Of all the thoughts of God that are Borne inward unto souls after,
Along the Psalmist's music deep—
Now tell me if that any is,
For gift or grace surpassing this—
"He giveth his beloved sleep."

What would we give to our beloved?
The hero's heart, to be unmoved—
The poet's star-tuned harp, to sweep—
The senate's eloquent patriot voice—
The monarch's crown, to light the brows?
"He giveth his beloved sleep."

What do we give to our beloved?
A little faith, all undisproved—
A little dust, to overweep—
And bitter memories, to make
The whole earth blasted for our sake!
"He giveth his beloved sleep."

"Sleep, beloved," we sometimes say,
But have no time to charm away
Sad dreams that through the eye lids creep:
But never doleful dream again
Shall break the happy slumber, when
"He giveth his beloved sleep."

O earth, so full of dreary noises!
O men, with waiting in your voices!
O deluded gold, the waiters heap!
O strife, O curse, that o'er it fall!
God makes a silence through you all,
And "giveth his beloved sleep."

His dew drops mutely on the hill;
His cloud above it softly still,
Tho' on its slope men toil and reap!
More softly than the dew is shed,
Or cloud is floated over head,
"He giveth his beloved sleep."

Ha! men may wonder while they scan
A living, thinking, feeling man,
In such a rest his heart to keep;
But angels sang—and through the world,
I ween their blessed smile is heard—
"He giveth his beloved sleep."

For me my heart that erst did go,
Most like a tired child at a show,
That sees through tears the juggler's leap—
Would now its wearied vision close,
Would child-like on its lava repose,
Who "giveth his beloved sleep."

And friends—dear friends!—when it shall be
That this low breath has gone from me—
And round my bier ye come to weep—
Let me, most loving of you all,
Say, not a tear must o'er her fall,
"He giveth his beloved sleep."

THE GIRL FOR ME.
Gay girls in satin shining,
I do not wish to see;
In luxury reclining,
They're not the girls for me.

Give me the joyous maidens
Brimsful of mirth and glee,
Their hearts with laughter laden,
They are the girls for me.

Their eyes are ever sparkling,
Their cheeks like roses glow,
Their lips like rose-buds parting,
Their cheerful smiles bestow.

They gather health and beauty
From morning's early breath,
They greet, as 'twere a duty,
The sunrise on the heath.

Tis they who drink, with pleasure,
The warbler's early song;
They ramble at their leisure,
The dewy flowers among.

A charm around them lingers,
A charm that blooms and speaks,
Painted by angels' fingers
Upon their glowing cheeks.

A maiden gay and gladsome,
Let my companion be,
A smile for all a frown for none,
That is the girl for me.

ANECDOTES.

"My dear sir," said a vegetable doctor to his patron, whom on entering his house he was surprised to find a widower, "did your wife suffer at all in the dying struggle?"
"Why, no, I rather guess not," said the bereaved, with apparent resignation.
"Thank Heaven!" exclaimed the Botanist, "for the light that science imparts!" throwing back his head and turning his eyes towards the concave horizon, at the same time thrusting his hands into his breeches pockets; "this is truly an age of discourses! I knew she could not suffer; for I had given her the proper medicine to make her die easy. I always do that for my patients. It is a discovery of my own—it is purely vegetable!"

A sick person who had not slept for many nights, was asked if he did not wish for a clergyman to attend him. He replied, "Yes, send for Mr. D—." He came. The sick man requested a sermon. Mr. D— started with surprise, and desired to know the reason why. The invalid answered, "I never heard you preach but three or four times, and then I invariably fell asleep; so I thought that a short discourse might enable me to take a nap—which I much need, not having slept any for several nights."

"How long have you known Bill Bushwhack?"
"Ever since he was born."
"What is his general character?"
"Latter A. No. 1—'bore par a very great way.'"
"Would you believe him on oath?"
"Yes, sir, on or off, or any other way."
"What are his qualifications to good character?"
"He's the best shot on the prairie or in the woods; he can shave the eye-winkers off a wolf as far as shooting iron'll carry a ball—he can drink a quart of grog any day, and he chews tobacco like a boss."

The Graefenberg Company,

OF NEW YORK,
HAVING established a Branch at No. 154 Washington Street, Boston, has appointed Mr. Edwin C. Barnes, Secretary thereof, now offer to the people of New England their celebrated series of Medicines, in the fullest confidence that after a fair trial they will be found far superior, and will rapidly supersede all others now in use. The Company would first call attention to

THE GRAEFENBERG VEGETABLE PILLS.
For the prevention and cure of the ordinary diseases which afflict humanity, (especially bilious,) these Pills are infinitely superior to any the world has before seen. No language can describe their virtues. They are as different from all others before the public as light is from darkness. Every family in New England should try them. Price 25c a box, with full directions. The Graefenberg SARSAPARILLA COMPOUND in which the virtues of the noble and health giving Sarsaparilla are highly concentrated; it is warranted to make two quarts superior to any other manufactured, and in the most powerful agent in the world to cleanse and purify the system. Price $1 per bottle.

The Graefenberg CHILDREN'S PANACEA, a medicine expressly adapted to the case of children and young people, and the only one of the kind ever before offered to the public. It is composed of vegetables only, and may be used with perfect safety by infants. Price fifty cents per bottle.

The Graefenberg HEALTH BITTERS, a preventive of bilious and other diseases, and a restorer of the strength, the appetite, and a healthy complexion. Price 25c a package.

The Green Mountain VEGETABLE OINTMENT is prepared from an old Indian recipe, and cures with great rapidity bruises or fresh cut wounds, burns, scalds, &c. Its virtues are too well known to need a more lengthy notice. Price 25c and 50c a box.

The Graefenberg EYE LOTION, an article which supplies a want long felt in this part of the country. It is an unfailing remedy for violent inflammation, weakness or foreign substances in the eyes, and for dimness and failing of the sight. It is compounded upon the most scientific principles, and has performed extraordinary cures. Price 25c a bottle.

The Graefenberg GAZETTE, published by the Company for gratuitous distribution, may be had on application by any one who desires to receive it. Every Town we visit, and every one we respect, we insure, according to circumstances; and all Dental Plate Work executed at our rooms is warranted to be equal to any that can be produced, and to give perfect satisfaction.

IF We are administering the CHLORODYNE every day with success, and extracting Teeth by the dozen, without pain, and have never known it to affect the patient unfavorably, and yet we charge no more than when we do not give it.

The public will not forget that to us is due the credit of the great and important improvement recently made in the method of inserting Artificial Teeth, both on Gold Plate and Ivory, and also preserving diseased Teeth and stumps in a healthy condition.

Instruction given in relation to the New Method invented by us, and whole sets inserted in the most difficult mouths, for country or travelling Dentists, on reasonable terms. First Teeth adapted to the mouth on our plan are far more durable and permanent than upon gold plate, secured in the common way, and will never want resetting. When necessary to mount them on a plate of gold by our method, we extract no sound stumps, preserve the form of the mouth, and secure them so firmly that the patient can eat with them as well as if they were natural teeth, and they will last a whole life-time, and look perfectly natural. To all who require the services of a Dentist, and particularly such as have been unsuccessfully served, we would "make our best bow," and say, don't wait for an introduction, but call and see us at 238 Washington St. corner of Central Court.

BY KATE SUTHERLAND.
In a village not a hundred miles from Philadelphia, resided a Rev. Mr. Manlius, who had the pastoral charge of a very respectable congregation, and was highly esteemed by them; but there was one thing in which he did not give general satisfaction, and in consequence of which many excellent members of his church felt seriously scandalized. He would neither join a temperance society, nor omit his glass of wine when he felt inclined to take it. It is only fair to say, however, that such spiritual indulgences were not of frequent occurrence. It was more the principle of the thing, as he said, that he stood upon, than anything else, that prevented his signing a temperance pledge. Sandy were the attacks, both open and secret, to which the Reverend Mr. Manlius was subjected, and many were the discussions into which he was drawn by the advocates of total abstinence. His mode of argument was very summary.

"I would no more sign a pledge not to drink brandy than I would sign a pledge not to steal," was the position that he took. "I wish to be free to choose good or evil, and to act right because it is wrong to do otherwise. I do not find fault with others for signing the pledge, nor for abstaining from wine. If they think it is right, it is right for them. But as for myself, I would cut off my right hand before I would bind myself by mere external restraints. My bonds are internal principles. I am temperate because intemperance is sin. For men who have abused their freedom, and so far lost all rational control over themselves that they cannot resist the insane spirit of intemperance, the pledge is all important. Sign it, I say, in the name of Heaven; but do not because this, that or the other temperance man has signed it, but because you feel it to be your only hope. Do it for yourself, and do it if you are the only man in the world who acts thus. To sign because another whom you think more respectable, has signed, will give you little or no strength. You must do it for yourself, and because it is right."

The parson was pretty ready with his tongue, and rarely came off second best when his opponents dragged him into a controversy, although his arguments were called by them, when he was not present, "mere fastidious."

His love for wine and brandy is at the bottom of all this hostility to the temperance cause, was boldly said of him by individuals in and out of the church. But especially were the members of other churches severe upon him.

"He'll turn out a drunkard," said one.
"I shouldn't be surprised to see him staggering in the street before two years," said another.

"He does more harm to the temperance cause than ten drunkards," alleged the third.
While others said—Isn't it scandalous?
"He pretends to have religion!"
"A minister, indeed!"
And so the charges ran.

All this time Mr. Manlius firmly maintained his ground, taking his glass of wine whenever he suited him. At last, after the occurrence of a dinner party given by a family of some note in the place, at which the minister was present, and at which wine was circulated freely, a rather scandalous report got abroad, and soon went buzzing all over the village. A young man who made no secret of being fond of his glass, and who was at the dinner party, met, on the day after, a very warm advocate of temperance, and a member of a different denomination from that in which Mr. Manlius was a minister, and said to him, with mock gravity, "We had a rare case at our dinner party yesterday, Perkins."

THE TIPSYPARSON.

BY KATE SUTHERLAND.

In a village not a hundred miles from Philadelphia, resided a Rev. Mr. Manlius, who had the pastoral charge of a very respectable congregation, and was highly esteemed by them; but there was one thing in which he did not give general satisfaction, and in consequence of which many excellent members of his church felt seriously scandalized. He would neither join a temperance society, nor omit his glass of wine when he felt inclined to take it. It is only fair to say, however, that such spiritual indulgences were not of frequent occurrence. It was more the principle of the thing, as he said, that he stood upon, than anything else, that prevented his signing a temperance pledge.

Sundry were the attacks, both open and secret, to which the Reverend Mr. Manlius was subjected, and many were the discussions into which he was drawn by the advocates of total abstinence. His mode of argument was very summary.

'I would no more sign a pledge not to drink brandy than I would sign a pledge not to steal,' was the position that he took. 'I wish to be free to choose good or evil, and to act right because it is right to do otherwise. I do not find fault with others for signing the pledge, nor for abstaining from wine. If they think it is right, it is right for them. But as for myself, I would cut off my right hand before I would bind myself by mere external restraints. My bonds are internal principles. Do it for yourself, and do it if you are the only man in the world who acts thus. To sign because another whom you think more respectable, has signed, will give you little or no strength. You must do it for yourself, and because it is right.'

The parson was pretty ready with his tongue, and rarely came off second best when his opponents dragged him into a controversy, although his arguments were called by them, when he was not present, 'mere fustian.'

'His love for wine and brandy is at the bottom of all this hostility to the temperance cause,' was boldly said of him by individuals in and out of the church. But especially were the members of other churches severe upon him.

'He'll turn out a drunkard,' said one. 'I shouldn't be surprised to see him staggering in the street before two years,' said another.

'He does more harm to the temperance cause than ten drunkards,' alleged the third. While others said—'Isn't it scandalous?' 'He pretends to have religion!' 'A minister, indeed!'

And so the charges rang. All this time Mr. Manlius firmly maintained his ground, taking his glass of wine whenever it suited him. At last, after the occurrence of a dinner party given by a family of some note in the place, at which the minister was present, and at which wine was circulated freely, a rather scandalous report got abroad, and soon went buzzing all over the village. A young man, who made no secret of being fond of his glass, and who was at the dinner party, met, on the day after, a very warm advocate of temperance, and a member of a different denomination from that in which Mr. Manlius was a minister, and said to him, with mock gravity, 'We had a rare row at our dinner party yesterday, Perkins.'

'Indeed. What wonderful thing was that?' 'A tipsy parson.'

'A what?' 'A tipsy parson.'

The man's eyes became instantly almost as big as saucers.

'Was it Mr. Manlius?' 'I didn't say so. I call no names.'

'He was present, I know, and drank wine. I am told, like a fish.'

'I wasn't aware before that fishes drank wine,' said the man, gravely.

'It was Manlius, wasn't it?' urged the other.

'I call no names,' was repeated. 'All I said was, that we had a tipsy parson—and so we had. I'll prove it before a jury of a thousand, if necessary.'

'It's no more than I expected,' said the temperance man. 'He's a mere wine-bibber at best. He pretends to preach the Gospel! I wonder he isn't struck dead in the pulpit.'

The moment his informant had left him, Perkins started forth to communicate the astounding intelligence that Mr. Manlius had been drunk on the day before, at Mr. Reedsides' dinner party. From lip to lip the scandal flew, with little less than electric quickness. Some doubted, some denied, but the majority believed the story—it was so likely to happen.

This occurred near the close of the week, and Sunday arrived before the powers that be in the church were able to confer upon the subject, and cite the minister to appear and answer for himself on the scandalous charge of drunkenness. There was an unusual number of vacant pews during service, both morning and afternoon.

Monday came, and early in the day a committee of two deacons waited upon Mr. Manlius, and informed him of the report in circulation, and of their wish that he would appear before them on the next afternoon to give account of himself, as the church deemed the matter far too serious to be passed lightly over. The minister was evidently a good deal surprised and startled at this, but he neither denied nor attempted to palliate, merely saying that he would attend of course.

'It's plain that he is guilty,' said Deacon Jones to Deacon Todd, as they walked with sober faces away from the minister's dwelling.

'Plain? Yes, it's written in his face,' returned Deacon Todd. 'So much for opposing temperance reforms and drinking wine. It's a judgment upon him.'

'But what a scandal to our church,' said Deacon Jones.

'Yes—think of that. He must be suspended, and not restored until he signs the pledge.'

'I don't believe he'll ever do that.'

'Why not?' 'He says he would cut off his right hand first.'

'People are fond of cutting off their right hand, you know. My word for it, this will do the business for him. He will be glad enough to get the matter hushed up so easily.'

'I shall go for suspending him until he signs the pledge.'

'I don't know but that I will go with you. If he signs the pledge, he is safe.'

And so the two deacons settled the matter. On the next day, in grave council assembled, were all the deacons of the church, besides sundry individuals who had come as the minister's friends or accusers. Perkins, who had put the report in circulation, was there at the special request of one of the deacons, who had ascertained that he had as much, or a little more to say in the matter than any one.

Perkins was called upon, rather unexpectedly, to answer one or two questions, immediately on the opening of the meeting, but as he was a staunch temperance man, and cordially despised the minister, he was bold to reply.

'Mr. Perkins,' said the presiding deacon, 'as far as we can learn, this scandalous charge originated with you; I will, therefore, ask you—did you say that the Rev. Mr. Manlius was drunk at Mr. Reedsides' dinner party?'

'I did,' was the unhesitating answer.

'Were you present at Mr. Reedsides'?' 'No, sir.'

'Did you see Mr. Manlius coming from the house intoxicated?'

'No.'

'What evidence, then, have you of the truth of your charge? We have conversed this morning with several that were present, and all say they observed nothing out of the way in Mr. Manlius on the occasion of which you speak. This is a serious matter, and we should like to have your authority for a statement so injurious to the reputation of the minister and the cause of religion.'

'My authority is Mr. Burton, who was present.'

'Did he tell you that Mr. Manlius was intoxicated?'

'He said there was a drunken minister there, and Mr. Manlius, I have ascertained, was the only clergyman present.'

'Was that so?' asked the deacon of an individual who was at Mr. Reedsides'.

'Mr. Manlius was the only clergyman there,' was replied.

'Then,' said Perkins, 'if there was a drunken minister there, it must have been Mr. Manlius. I can draw no other inference.'

'Can Mr. Burton be found,' was now asked. An individual immediately volunteered to go in search of him. In half an hour he was produced. As he entered the grave assembly, he looked around with great composure upon the array of solemn faces and eyes intently fixed upon him. He did not appear in the least abashed.

'You were at Mr. Reedsides' last week, at a dinner party, I believe?' said the presiding deacon.

'I was.'

'Did you see Mr. Manlius intoxicated on that occasion?'

'Mr. Manlius! Good heavens! no! I can testify, upon oath, that he was as solemn as a judge. Who says that I made so scandalous an allegation?'

Burton appeared to grow strongly excited. 'I say so,' cried Perkins in a loud voice.

'You say so? And pray upon what authority?'

'Upon the authority of your own words.'

'Never.'

'But you did tell me so.'

Perkins was much excited. 'When?'

'On the day after the dinner party. Don't you remember what you said to me?'

'Oh, yes—perfectly.'

'That you had a drunken minister at dinner?'

'No, I never said that.'

'But you did; I can be qualified to it.'

'I said we had a tipsy parson.'

'And, pray, what is the difference?'

At the words 'tipsy parson' the minister burst into a loud laugh, and so did two or three others who had been at Mr. Reedsides'.

The grave deacon in the chair looked around with frowning wonder at such indecorum, and felt that especially ill-timed was the levity of the minister.

'I do not understand this,' he said, with great gravity.

'I can explain it,' remarked an individual, rising, 'as I happened to be at Mr. Reedsides' and know all about the tipsy parson.'

The cook of our kind hostess, in her culinary ingenuity, furnished the table with a desert which she called 'tipsy parson'—made, I believe, by soaking sponge cake in brandy, and pouring a custard over it. It is therefore true, as our friend Burton has said, that there was a tipsy parson at the table, but as to the drunken minister of Mr. Perkins, I know nothing.'

Never before, in a grave and solemn assembly of deacons, was there such a sudden and universal burst of laughter, such a holding of sides and vibration of bodies, as followed this unexpected speech. In the midst of the confusion and noise, Perkins retired. He has been known, ever since, in the village, much to his chagrin and scandalization, being still a warm temperance man, as the tipsy parson.'

'There goes the tipsy parson,' he hears said as he passes along the street, a dozen times in a week, and he is now inclined to leave the village in order to escape the ridicule his over zealous efforts to blast the minister's reputation has called into existence.

As for the Rev. Mr. Manlius, he often tells the story, and laughs over it as heartily as any one.

SOCIAL INTERCOURSE.

There is a false necessity with which we indifferently surround ourselves; a circle that never expands; whose iron never changes to ductile gold. This is the presence of public opinion, the intolerable restraint of conventionalism. Under this despotic influence, men and women check their best impulses, suppress their highest thoughts. Each longs for full communion with the other souls, but dares not give utterance to its yearnings. What hinders?

The fear of what Mr. Smith or Miss Clark will say, or the frown of sect; or the anathema of some synod; or the fashion of some clique; or the laugh of some club, or the misrepresentation of some political party.

Thou art afraid of thy neighbor, and knowest not that he is equally afraid of thee. He has bound thy hands, and thou hast fettered his feet. It were wiser for both to snap the imaginary bond and walk onward unshackled. If thy heart yearns for love, be loving; if thou wouldst have a brother frank to thee, be frank with him.

But what will all the people say? What does it concern thee what they say?—thy life is not in their hands. They can give thee nothing of real value, nor take from thee anything of real value. Satan may promise thee all the kingdoms on earth, but he has not one acre of it to give.

He may offer much as the price of his worship, but there is a flaw in all his titles. Eternal and sure is the promise: 'Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth.'

But I shall be misunderstood, misrepresented. And what if thou art? They who throw stones at what is above them receive the missiles back again by the law of gravity; and lucky are they who do not bruise their own faces. Would that I could persuade all who read, to be truthful and free; to say what they think and act what they feel; to cast from them like ropes of sand, all fear of sects and parties, of clans and classes.

What is there of joyful freedom in our social intercourse? We meet to see each other, and not a peep do we get under the veil which each carries about him. We visit to enjoy our selves, and the host takes away our freedom while we destroy his own. If the host wishes to walk or ride, he dare not lest it should seem impolite to the guest. If the guest wishes to read or sleep, he dare not lest it seem impolite to the host; so they remain slaves; and feel it a relief to part company. A few individuals, mostly in foreign lands, arrange this matter with wiser freedom. If a visitor arrive, they say, I'm busy to-day, if you wish to ride, there are horses and saddles in the stable; if you want to read there are books in the parlor; if you want to work, the men are raking hay in the field; if you want to romp, the children are at play in the court; if you want to talk to me, I can be with you at such an hour. Go where you please, and while you are here do as you please.

At some houses in Florence, large parties meet without the slightest preparation. It is understood that on some particular evening of the week, a lady or gentleman always receive their friends. In one room are books and flowers; in another, pictures and engravings; and in a third, music. Groups are ensconced in some shady alcove, or groups dotted about the room, in mirthful or serious conversation. No one is required to speak to his host, either entering or departing. Lemonade and baskets of fruit stand here and there on the side table, that all may take who like; but eating, which constitutes so large a part of American entertainments, is a slight and almost unnoticed incident in these festivals of intellect and taste. Wouldst thou like to see such social freedom introduced here? Then do it.

But the first step must be complete indifference to Mrs. Smith's assertion, that you were mean enough to offer only one kind of cake to your company, and to put less shortening in the under crust of your pies, than the upper. Let Mrs. Smith talk according to her gifts; be thou assured that all living souls love freedom better than cakes and undercrust.—Mrs. Child.

HOW DO YOU SPELL BOOTS?

A New York writer tells an amusing story of a wealthy Wall Street broker, who lives in great style in the fashionable quarter, and ranks as one of the 'upper ten.' It appears that he recently purchased a splendid fire proof safe, in which to secure his valuables against the devouring element, to which he had affixed that new invention for protection against thieves, called the 'Combination Lock.'

Those beautiful pieces of mechanism are so extremely complicated that you may lock them, hand the key to the manufacturer even, and the chances are as one to ten thousand that he will not be able to open them. The wards and interior arrangements of these locks are alphabetically arranged, and you select a word in the language, take the letters and lock the wards answering these letters one by one. Thus take the word Chair—you lock c, then h, then a, then i, then r. Now it must be unlocked in the same way, and unless you hit upon the exact word, you will never be able to unlock it. Well, the broker in question locked his new safe according to the word 'boots,' but after working at it for an hour or more the next morning, he could not unlock it, and gave it up in despair. As his funds were all locked up (says the letter,) he had no money with which to pay notes and carry on his business that day, but as his credit was good, he raised sufficient for the purpose by borrowing of the banks.

The next morning the manufacturer of the lock, according to request, called to ascertain the difficulty. He said he had no doubt he could unlock the safe, if the gentleman would tell him the word to which he locked it.

'Boots' was the word, and to work he went to unlock it to 'boots.' Well, he tried, sanguine of success, but 'boots' would not unlock the safe. He tried an hour, two hours, and three hours with no success. Finally, a happy thought struck him. He wiped the perspiration from his face, took a drink of water, examined the key again, and looking at the broker straight in the eye, said—'Sir, allow me to ask you how you spell boots?'

'How do I spell boots?' said the broker; 'why I spell it right; how do you spell it?'

'Oh, never mind,' said the man of combination locks, 'how I spell it; how do you spell it?'

'Boots,' to be sure,' said the broker. 'The d— you do,' said the lock-maker; 'and if you spell boots but, I will unlock the safe buts,' and he unlocked it in the twinkling of an eye.

WHAT PRINTING HAS DONE. During the first thirteen centuries of the Christian Era, there was hardly any improvement of mankind, in their social, political or intellectual systems. The liberation of the public mind from its depressing tendencies, by the invention of printing, has produced the last few centuries in noble inventions and discoveries, running through the whole circle of art, science and literature. With the wings of the morning, it has gone to the uttermost parts of the earth; it has grasped the highest truths of the sky above, and sought out the profound depths below; and in every place, and over all subjects, mind is asserting its mastery and achieving its conquests.

MIGRATION OF BIRDS. The tendency to migration is a powerful instinct in many animals. Buffon says that 'young quails kept in cages almost from birth, and which could neither know nor regret liberty, experienced regularly, twice in a year for four years, a singular agitation and anxiety at the customary times of migration, that is, in the months of April and September. This uneasiness lasted about thirty days each time, and recommenced every day at an hour before sunset.'

MARRIED & UNMARRIED WOMEN.

Why are so many single women of middle age morose or mischief making? Because, having abandoned in youth, as tails, those resources which would have proved pleasures, when the hey-day of life was passed, their minds have become a barren soil, and weeds have sprung up where flowers might have flourished.

The situation of a married and unmarried female, it must be confessed is very unequal; the former having greatly the advantage in the scale of earthly happiness; and the world makes the distinction still more unequal than nature intended it.

At thirty five the married woman is considered in the noon of life; while the single one is looked upon as passed. Again, the wife has less necessity to depend upon intellectual pleasures as resources from the lassitude of ennui. She has duties to perform, let her station in life be what it may, to which the single woman cannot turn to vary the monotony of her existence. The matron, if she be a mother, will find sufficient stimulus to keep up or revive, in the early instruction, which is one of woman's sweetest privileges to give her offspring, the knowledge and accomplishments she has learned in her own youth.

What pleasure can be higher, or more unalloyed to the bestower, what sight more endearing to the beholder, than a matron, o'er whose brow the shadow of time, like that on the dial, has passed, yet left much of the sunny light of life behind, leading her daughter to emulate the graces of which she herself is so fair a pattern? Or to mark a son, in all the pride of youthful manhood, paying back with love, little short of adoration, the cares of her whose gentle instructions first lured him to seek the wider paths of knowledge, and at whose knee his infant prayer was first breathed.

Other feelings grow cold—other memories pass away; but the gentle image of the mother who has watched our childhood—her love, her tenderness, her unwearied devotion, will forever be mirrored on the human heart.

SPRING. Why, my friends, Spring can start fresh and vigorous plants from the ostensibly barren soil of an over-tilled mind—twine a flowery wreath of hope round the pale brow of Despair—give strength, new life and activity to the pinion of frost bitten Fancy, and make an old man feel as if the hour-hand to the clock of existence had been set back one quarter, at least, of its little circle. In fact, Spring can do almost anything in the way of favoring humanity, except dyeing grey hairs in the whiskers of an old bachelor, taking out the superfluous curls and mortifying wrinkles of an elderly maiden, transfiguring decrepit Age into buoyant Youth, and mending old shoes.

My hearers—while you behold sweet Spring waving her magic wand, and awakening dull earth into life, pristine beauty and loveliness, you cannot but hope that you will vegetate for another year—that new flowers will start up along the pathway of life—and that all your prospects will be crowned with success, even as the blossoms of promise put forth by May are fulfilled by the golden fruits of Autumn. And you also behold a general resurrection of bugs and vegetation around you; you may go to your mortal beds at last in full confidence that after having taken a short nap in the cold, wintry grave, you will start up and flourish again, like pig-weeds in an unmolested garden. So mote it be!—Don, Jr.

CAN'T UNDERSTAND IT. We cannot understand how it is that delicate young ladies, too delicate to run up and down stairs in their own house, are able to dance down the strongest men in a ball room. 'Tis a phenomenon of nature of which no one seems capable of giving an explanation. What young girl ever refused a handsome partner at five o'clock in the morning on the score of being 'so tired?'

TO BUSINESS MEN. If you would pursue your business profitably, no matter what you are—dry goods men, grocer, hatter, tailor, boot maker, teachers, book-sellers, no matter what—if you would obtain business and make money, you must put your sign in the newspaper. This is the way, the easiest, cheapest and the best way to make your business known. Every one should advertise—not simply once or twice a year, but constantly, systematically, and thoroughly; should continually be spreading before the eager gaze and inquiring eye of the public, the advantages his establishment offers, and the benefits that would accrue to his customers.—Merchants' Ledger.

GOOD AND TRUE. Dr. Franklin remarks that a man as often gets two dollars for one he spends in informing his mind, as he does for a dollar he lays out in any other way. A man eats up a pound of sugar and it is gone, and the pleasure he has enjoyed is ended; but the information he gets from a newspaper is treasured up to be enjoyed anew, and to be used whenever occasion or inclination calls for it. A newspaper is not the wisdom of one man or of two men; it is the wisdom of the age, and of past ages too. A family without a newspaper is always half an age behind the times in general information; besides they can never think much nor find much to talk about. And then there are the little ones growing up in ignorance, without any taste for reading.—Who, then, would be without a newspaper?

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, JUNE 3, 1848.

John A. Green, Editor.

THE EDITOR IN NEW YORK.

THURSDAY EVENING, JUNE 1st.

Here I am in the great commercial emporium of the nation, the second commercial city of the world, and were it not for the comforts I highly enjoy, in the pleasant residence of my husband, who resides in the beautiful city of Brooklyn on the other side of the East River, some two miles from the "great metropolis," I should be stunned with the everlasting jostling and noise of its busy, bustling, crowded streets. After arranging my affairs for a short absence from the scene of my editorial and other duties and labors, we took the cars of the Fall River route—reaching that place in rapid time, where we found the Day State in waiting at her usual moorings, and in a few minutes thereafter, as a nautical man would say, we "got under weigh," and after partaking of a bountiful repast, which is ever provided with an unsparring liberality by the boats of this line, we retired to rest and soon found ourselves wrapped in the arms of "Morpheus," the beloved of all weary, care-worn souls. Time in this way passed rapidly, and at early dawn we were awakened by the announcement of the landing in New York. The "Day State" is one of the best boats afloat, and her accommodations have not to my knowledge been surpassed. The state rooms we occupied were supplied with every convenience, and you would scarcely know the difference between the best city hotels. Capt. Brown, her first officer, who, by the way, is a native of Fall River, is familiar with every inch of water in Long Island Sound, having navigated it for many years previous to his entrance upon the duties of a steamer. In a word, he understands all the minutia of his station, and performs the trust wisely reposed in him by the company, with the utmost alacrity and fidelity.

On my arrival at New York, I found my kinsman, the editor of the Merchants Magazine, deeply immersed in the matter of bringing out his work for June; but like most industrious men, with sufficient leisure to extend to us his accustomed hospitality. At this time of writing, the June number of his Merchants Magazine is out, with its well known punctuality. There are some features in the progress of this periodical, like its design, quite unique. I allude to the circumstance of its having received from the first year of its existence a degree of patronage which has not diminished in the least, although its eighteenth semi-annual volume was completed with the June issue. Indeed it has steadily increased in circulation and influence. The North American Review, in the capital of my native state, for nearly fifty years and which within my recollection reached a circulation of some three or four thousand has since dwindled down to fifteen or sixteen hundred, although an able, but somewhat conservative work. The Knickerbocker Magazine, published in this city, and one of the best miscellaneous monthlies, at one time counted nearly five thousand names on its list, has not at this time two thousand all told; and a similar fate seems to have attended every one of the first class Magazines and Reviews—to say nothing of the dumpy that have started up, flourished for a time, and finally descended to the "tombs of the capulets." The fact is, in literature, the American people, unlike the Europeans, particularly those of mother England, are changeable in their tastes and habits—they get tired of old friends, and imagine that they are not as interesting or valuable as they were in the vigor of their youth. Nothing can succeed in this country for any length of time that does not come home to the "business," as well as the "fashions" of the Yankee. The influence of all I have said on this subject is, that the Merchants Magazine has not only sustained its high character from the beginning, but it supplies a want (possessing in itself the elements of a perpetuity) that no other Magazine has yet succeeded in doing, if we except Silliman's Journal of Science, and the class who appreciate that work is quite limited. The Merchants Magazine occupies entirely new ground—it was the first purely commercial Magazine ever published in this or any other country, and its editor has adhered to the original plan, occasionally enlarging and making such improvements as increasing means and experience suggested, from its projection in 1839—that of giving it the commercial character, broad and liberal, but still confining its scope to the audience subject, directly bearing on the interests of trade and commerce, including of course banking, finance, and manufactures, and indeed every industrial occupation of man and society.

Last year on my visit I made mention of the Lo-Rillard House, kept by W. P. Esle. This hotel is very pleasantly located in Park Row, nearly opposite the "Fountain," and directly in front of the Astor House. This "home of the traveler" has been enlarged and otherwise improved with the "progress of the age." Its individuality blends the essentials of an agreeable "mine host" with the suavity of a polished gentleman. As the truth is in the trial, let travellers give him a visit, and they will not regret it.

The Presidential question engrosses much of general conversation. It seems admitted that the democrats have made a strong selection, much more popular than some of the ultra opposition are willing to allow. After the other nomination has been made, more reliable conclusions can certainly be made. Demonstrative meetings to confirm and others to forward particular aspirants for the Presidency, are to be held every day within a few days. On this subject I will write more particularly in my next.

The weather has been very pleasant, rather cold however, but still the markets abound with peaches, strawberries, and other luxuries. Vegetation appears to be quite in advance, and indeed every thing wears the aspect of renewed vigor so peculiarly characteristic of this renewing season of the year.

I am in hopes to meet friends in Philadelphia the ensuing week, and in the meantime the readers of the Patriot will please accept of this sketch from their ever devoted servant.

J. A. G.

YECATAN. Hostilities have again commenced in this ill-fated country; the Indians murdering the inhabitants and committing the grossest outrages.

Mexico. Nothing certain is known concerning the treaty. The peace prospects were not favorable at the last accounts.

CAPITAL TRIAL. The trial of a girl about fourteen years of age, for the murder of her mother, came on before the Supreme Court at Boston, on Wednesday. The principal ground of defence is moral insanity.

SEVEN DAYS LATER. The steamer Hibernia arrived at New York on Saturday, from Liverpool on the 13th of May. There is nothing of special importance from England. There is a slight improvement in trade and money is plentiful. Ireland has become more tranquil.

The details of the proceedings of the French Assembly are of no interest. An intermediate executive authority is appointed, which body will nominate the administrative government. An order has been issued to put the line of coast in the district of Boulogne in a state of defence.

The warlike aspect of affairs on the Continent has not undergone any material change. The hostilities in Lombardy have received a new impulse from the accession of the Pope to the Italian confederacy against Austria. Accounts from the duchy of Posen announce nothing but insurrection and bloodshed. The Austrians are in a most critical position. The whole of Germany continues in an agitated state. Prussia seems to be in a deplorable condition. An unsuccessful insurrection has been attempted in Madrid.

Mrs. Panny Kenble Butler came in the Hibernia.

THE NOMINATION. The democratic convention at Baltimore, on the 25th, proceeded to ballot for a candidate for President of the United States, and upon the fourth balloting Gen. Lewis Cass of Michigan, was chosen, having received 179 votes. The number necessary was 170, by the two-thirds rule. On the second balloting for a candidate for Vice President, Gen. William O. Butler of Kentucky, received 355 votes and was declared nominated. The New York delegation did not vote. A vote was passed limiting the number of delegates to future conventions to the number each State is entitled to in the electoral college. The Convention adjourned on Friday, 26th, after passing resolutions reported by Mr. Hallitt of this State.

PEAKS OF FORTUNE. Twenty five years ago, Mr. Holt of New York, commenced business in that city, by opening an eating house. He was successful, and in a short time amassed a large property and built the celebrated hotel, known as "Holt's Hotel." Fortune now frowned upon him, and in a few years he became bankrupt and the hotel passed into other hands. Not discouraged, Mr. Holt commenced business again, where he first started, in an eating house. By untiring industry he again acquired some wealth though far below his former resources. Recently, a relation in England died leaving him by will eight hundred thousand dollars, so that he is now richer than before. It is said that he intends to purchase his former hotel, and once more display the old sign.

STRANGE SEICHE. A week or two since, a man living near Cincinnati, (Ohio), committed suicide in the following manner:—He went to the churchyard and dug his grave beside his wife, who had been buried sixteen months before. Having procured a coffin under some pretence, he conveyed it to its destination unobserved. He then took off his clothes except his shirt, put on a night cap, and laid himself in the coffin which he had previously placed in the newly made grave with a loaded pistol in it. He now drew on the cover of the coffin and then placing the pistol to his right temple, fired it. It is supposed he died instantly. He had been partially insane since his wife's death.

POPOCATAPETL. An officer of the army in Mexico has written a detailed account of the ascent of this great volcano by a party of six, including himself. Their sufferings were very severe but they succeeded in reaching the summit—a feat which has not been accomplished since the time of Cortez. This mountain is the highest point in North America. The Spanish officer who, in 1519, was the first human being that reached the summit, was rewarded by the crown of Spain for his courage and perseverance, by being permitted to assume for his coat of arms, the figure of a burning mountain.

FOURTH OF JULY PICTORIAL BROTHER JONATHAN. Wilson & Co. of New York, have sent us a copy of their Jubilee Brother Jonathan, just issued in commemoration of the glorious fourth. It is a sheet of the largest dimensions and filled with magnificent engravings; some of the most prominent of which are a Mexican Battle Scene, covering a surface of seven square feet, executed with taste and spirit from an original design,—four portraits the size of life of distinguished American Statesmen,—eleven original designs by the great French artist GAVARNE, illustrating the Marquede Ball in Paris,—a fac simile of the original draft of the Declaration of Independence with all the alterations made in committee, in the hand writing of each. These together with forty or fifty other spirited engravings of the finest description, Tales, Poems, Sketches, etc., make one of the most valuable of the Brother Jonathan yet issued. Every body should have a copy. The price is only 12-2 cents, or ten copies are sent by mail for one dollar.

FIRE AT DORCHESTER LOWER MILLS. On the night of the 25th ult., Baker's Extensive Chocolate Mills were entirely destroyed, with valuable fixtures, machinery, etc., and a large quantity of chocolate and cocoa. Kennedy's Grist mill, adjoining, was much injured, but most of its stock of corn, etc., was saved in a damaged state.

MAINE SENATOR. Hon. Hannibal Hamlin has been elected Senator in Congress in place of Hon. W. S. B. Moor, who since the death of Gov. Fairfield, filled the place by appointment from the Governor. The term expires in March, 1851.

WHIG CONVENTION. Whig delegates will meet at Philadelphia on the 7th, to nominate candidates for President and Vice President.

CONGRESS. In consequence of the Baltimore Convention, both Houses of Congress adjourned over on the 23d to the 25th. The Senate, on that day, transacted but little business. A resolution calling for information as to whether public interest had been paid in any thing but specie was passed and the Senate adjourned to Monday. In the House, a bill prohibiting the importation of slaves in the District of Columbia was read twice.

The proceedings of the House on the 26th and 27th are unimportant.

On the 29th, the Vice President laid before the Senate a communication from Gen. Cass, resigning his seat as a Senator from Michigan. A message in writing was received from the President of the United States, transmitting a memorial from the Government of the Legislature of Oregon, asking aid from the United States Government against the Indians, and recommending that aid be given to them, which was referred. Mr. Butler, of South Carolina, reported a bill in favor of punishing violations of the secret proceedings of Congress. In the House, Mr. Ashmun of Massachusetts, moved to suspend the rules in order that he might offer a resolution in favor of the adjournment of Congress on the 10th of July. Decided in the negative. The Post Office bill was then taken up.

On the 30th, in the Senate, a resolution was introduced for closing the session on the first Monday in July, and holding an extra session in October. In the House, the Post Office bill was passed; also, the bill in favor of West Point Academy.

On the 31st, in the Senate, the resolution for closing the session was made the order of the day, for Monday. The Oregon bill was then taken up. In the House, a debate arose concerning the salaries of clerks in the executive departments, and on the Oregon bill.

LATER ARRIVAL. The steamer United States arrived at New York on Wednesday, fourteen days from Liverpool. The news is four days later than by the Hibernia.

Lord Ashburton died on the 14th of May. The ferment in Ireland is not allayed and the opponents of the government are as violent as ever. The editor of the "United Irishmen" had been arrested for a daring article published in his paper.

There have been fresh disturbances in Paris. The people forcibly entered the National Assembly and proclaimed its dissolution. The rabble were beaten and the leaders arrested. The National Guard had possession of the Hall of the National Assembly.

ANNIVERSARY WEEK. The Massachusetts Bible Society—American Tract Society—American Education Society—the Seaman's Friend Society and the American Peace Society, with quite a number of other Societies, held their anniversaries in Boston the past week.

COULD NOT AGREE. In the case of Jewell, who has been upon trial in the Supreme Court at Boston, for rape, the jury could not agree and were discharged. They stood eleven for acquittal and one for conviction.

BAYNE'S PANORAMA. This interesting exhibition will shortly close. The picture affords one a most vivid idea of the scenes represented. Go and witness it by all means. The panorama will start this afternoon at three o'clock.

MAY TRAINING. Wednesday was training day throughout this Commonwealth. A portion of the New England Guards, of Boston, visited this town in the afternoon, for target practice. They partook of a supper at the Hancock House, and returned to the city, in the evening, delighted with their entertainment.

NEW ENTERPRISE. We learn that an expedition has been fitted out from this place to search for property lost in vessels wrecked on the coast in this vicinity. They have a sub-marine apparatus of their own constructing to enable them to carry on their operations under the water.

SUCCESSFUL DENTAL OPERATION. We were shown a piece of Dental Plate work a few days since which, for ingenuity and mechanical skill in design and manufacture, we never saw equalled. The work was done for Mr. Horace Bancroft, of St. Charles, Kane Co., Ill. About fourteen years ago he was thrown from a wagon and had most of his teeth knocked out, together with a large piece of the superior maxillary and a part of the incisive fossa. He applied to the most skillful Dentists in Illinois, but was informed that nothing could be done for him without first taking out three remaining sound teeth and removing all the old stumps. To such an operation he was unwilling to submit, and he gave up all hopes of relief. At length he chanced to see a notice of Grandin & Dudley's improvement in preparing old stumps for the reception of pivot and plate work, in the Scientific American, and came on to Boston immediately to have them try their skill in his case.

Mr. Bancroft called in at our office after the work was done, and he certainly looked like a new man. The sunken cheek was again filled out, his speech was clear and distinct, and he assured us that the work exceeded his most sanguine expectations. The teeth set firm upon the jaw, and in every respect were strong and substantial. We mention this case because we deem it one worthy of notice; and we do not hesitate to recommend Messrs. Grandin & Dudley as standing at the head of their profession.—Christian Freeman.

In this complaint it has undoubtedly proved more efficacious than any remedy hitherto employed, and in numerous instances when patients had endured long and severe suffering from the disease, without receiving the least benefit from various remedies, and when MERCURY has been resorted to in vain, the use of this Balsam has restored the LIVER to a healthy action, and in many instances effected after every known remedy had failed to produce this desired effect.

The astonishing efficacy in the diseases above mentioned, we also find it a very efficient remedy in ASTHMA, a complaint in which it has been extensively used with decided success, even in cases of years standing.

It not only emanates from a regular physician, but has also been well tested in all the complaints for which it is recommended. It is not my intention, therefore, either to cloak it in mystery, or in any way deceive the public by overrating its virtues; on the contrary, I shall simply endeavor to give a brief statement of its usefulness, and flatter myself that its surprising efficacy will enable me to furnish such proofs of its virtues, as will satisfy the most incredulous, that Consumption may and CAN BE CURED! if this medicine be resorted to in time.

New Work By Rev. E.

SUCCESSFUL DENTAL OPERATION. We were shown a piece of Dental Plate work a few days since which, for ingenuity and mechanical skill in design and manufacture, we never saw equalled. The work was done for Mr. Horace Bancroft, of St. Charles, Kane Co., Ill. About fourteen years ago he was thrown from a wagon and had most of his teeth knocked out, together with a large piece of the superior maxillary and a part of the inferior fossa. He applied to the most skillful Dentists in Illinois, but was informed that nothing could be done for him without first taking out three remaining sound teeth and removing all the old stumps. To such an operation he was unwilling to submit, and he gave up all hopes of relief. At length he learned to see a notice of Grandin & Dudley's improvement in preparing old stumps for the reception of pivot and plate work, in the Scientific American, and came on to Boston immediately to have them try their skill in his case.

Mr. Bancroft called in at our office after the work was done, and he certainly looked like a new man. The muffled clock was again filled out, his speech was clear and distinct, and he assured us that the work exceeded his most sanguine expectations. The teeth set firm upon the jaw, and in every respect were strong and substantial.

We mention this case because we deem it one worthy of notice; and we do not hesitate to recommend Messrs. Grandin & Dudley as standing at the head of their profession.—Christian Freeman.

During the month of May one thousand vessels arrived at Boston. During the same time there were 652 clearances.

WINTER'S BALM OF WILD CHERRY,
the great remedy for CONSUMPTION.
And the best medicine known to man for Asthma of every stage, Liver Complaints, Bronchitis, Influenza, Coughs, Colds, Bleeding of the Lungs, Shortness of Breath, pains and weakness in the side, breast, etc., and all other diseases of the PULMONARY ORGANS.
A very important disease over which this "Balm" exerts a very powerful influence, is that of a
DISEASED LIVER.

In this complaint it has undoubtedly proved more efficacious than any remedy hitherto employed, and in numerous instances where the most had expired long and severely suffering from the disease, without receiving the least benefit from various remedies, and when MERCURY has been resorted to in vain, the use of this Balm has restored the LIVER to a healthy action, in many instances affording
PERMANENT CURES!
After every known remedy had failed to produce this desired effect.

Besides its astonishing efficacy in the diseases above mentioned, we also find it a very effective remedy in ASTHMA, a complaint in which it has been extensively used with decided success, even in cases of years standing.

It not only emanates from a regular physician, but has also been well tested in all the complaints for which it is recommended. It is not my intention, therefore, either to cloak it in mystery, or in any way deceive the public by operating its virtues; on the contrary, I shall simply endeavor to give a brief statement of its usefulness, and flatter myself that its surpassing efficacy will enable me to furnish such proofs of its virtues, as will satisfy the most incredulous, that Consumption may and CAN BE CURED! if this medicine be resorted to in time.

POETRY.

THE TEMPLE OF NATURE.
Men can build nothing worthy of his Maker:
From royal Solomon's stupendous fane
Down to the humble chapel of the Quaker,
All, all are vain.

The wondrous world which He himself created,
Is the fit temple of Creation's Lord;
There may his worship best be celebrated,
And praises poured.

Its altar, earth; its roof, the sky, unstained;
Sun, moon, and stars the lamps that give it light;
And clouds, by the celestial artist painted,
Its pictures bright.

Its choir, all vocal things, whose glad devotion
In one united hymn is heaven-kind and sped;
The thunder peal, the winds, the deep-moaned ocean,
Its organ dread.

The face of nature its God-written Bible,
Which all mankind may study and explore,
While none can write, interpret or label
Its living lore.

Hence learn we that our Maker—whose affliction
Knows no distinction, suffers no recoil—
Sheds his imperial favor and protection
Alike on all.

Thus by Divine example do we gather,
That every race should love alike all others;
Christian, Jew, Pagan, children of one Father—
All, all are brethren.

O thou most visible but unseen teacher,
Whose finger writes its lessons on our sphere!
O thou most audible but unheard preacher,
Whose sermons clear.

Are seen and read in all that thou performest,
With thou look down and bless, if when I kneel
Apart from men built fane, I feel the warmest
And purest zeal?

If in the temple Thine own hand had fashioned,
"Nenth the bright sky, by lonely stream or wood,
I pour to Thee, with willing heart impetioned,
My gratitude?

If, fearing Thee, I love thy whole creation,
Keeping my bosom undefiled by guilt,
With thou receive and bless mine adoration?
Thou wilt! Thou wilt!

YOU REMEMBER IT—DON'T YOU.
You remember the time when I first sought your home,
When a smile, not a word, was the summons to come,
When you called me a friend, till you found with surprise,
That our friendship turned out to be love in disguise.

You remember it—don't you?
You will think of it—won't you?
Yes, yes, of all this the remembrance will last,
Long after the present fades in the past.

You remember the grief that grew lighter when shared,
With the bliss, you remember, could not be compared;
You remember how fond was my earliest vow,
Not fonder than that which I braved to this hour.

You remember it—don't you?
You will think of it—won't you?
Yes, yes, of all this the remembrance will last,
Long after the present fades into the past.

A HINT.

While walking out the other day,
To spend my lonely hours,
And see the merry, small birds play
Amid the woodland bowers,
Methought I heard a little bird,
Sing sweet, and sweeter still,
And as the song I plainer heard,
"Twas my printer's bill.
Nice bird, that.

ANECDOTES.

"Husband, what remarkable children we do have!"
"Oh yes, wife; it seems like a judgment from Providence." They will run me all out in buying books, such is their appetite for learning."
"Yes, husband, and their spending for pork is prodigious. Did you ever see Ephraim eat?"
"No; but I have heard the joints of pork fall into his bread basket when I have been out in the field, at work."

A fellow was relating the "saw" from the whooping cough, when it was in his family. "There were twelve of us," said he, "and the other eleven had it; but I got clear of it." "But how came you to escape?" was asked. "Why you see," he replied, "there was so many that had it, that there wasn't whooping cough enough to go all round it."

"Sambo, what is the meaning of all this?"
"Well, Pore, dat's a question I can't make come out of my mind, but I tink it's good to eat ain't it?"
"No, you uncomprehending nigger, you is disem-powered to brack a bout. De meanin' is de ting, dat thing and ebery oder ting fetched into one piece, in my ting; dat's it remember de next time I see ye."

An old Methodist preacher, some time ago, while going to one of his appointments, met an old acquaintance who was one of the magistrates of the county. He asked the preacher why he didn't do as his Savior did—ride on an ass. "Because," said the divine, "the people have taken them all to make magistrates of."

"A place for every thing and every thing in its place," said an old lady, when she showed the broom, bellows, balls of yarn, cards, eggs, curriebags, three cats, and a gridiron in an old oven.

"The ladies always like to change their condition," said a leader who wanted to be married. "Very true," said his wife, "I wanted to change mine before marriage; and since marriage, I have wanted to change it more than ever."

When a Kentucky judge, some years since, was asked by an attorney, upon some strange ruling,—"Is the law, your honor?" he replied—"If the court understand herself, and she think she do, it is."

QUINCY PATRIOT.

THE Perseverence and Energy, requisite to enable an invalid to OBTAIN THE MEANS of cure, are pained and destroyed by the myriad of those fallacious agents of hope displayed before the suffering eye. Science has scarce done aught but ENCOURAGE the medicinal art; and if we wish to seek simply and surely a cure of any complaint we must resort to NATIVE PRODUCTIONS, evidently designed by PROVIDENCE for our use and relief. We discountenance, utterly, all pretensions to such aid as is offered under the PSEUDONYM MALADIES OF CONSUMPTION, SCROFULA, and all.

UNIVERSAL CURE,
and give the recommendation of these remedies only to such invalids as are suffering under the PSEUDONYM MALADIES OF CONSUMPTION, SCROFULA, and all.

Pectoral and Eruptive Diseases, for which they were originally prepared. The most experienced of NATURAL PHYSICIANS have been the Chief of the Six Nations, and their leading preparations are now compounded under appropriate distinguishing names, as follows:

BRANT'S
Indian Pulmonary Balsam, is prepared expressly for the cure of CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, COLIC, BRONCHITIS, SPITTING OF BLOOD, PAINS IN THE CHEST, SIDE, OR BACK, and LIVER COMPLAINTS, and all.

BRANT'S
Indian Purifying Extract, is the Chief's Great Purifier of the Blood, and has never failed to cure SCROFULA, ERYSIPELAS, LECERATED and NERVOUS SORE THROAT, BUBO, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, RHEUMATISM, SALT RHEUM, and all.

Eruptive and Skin Diseases, which is extraordinary power in regulating and equalizing the circulation.

DYSPEPSIA, PILES AND COSTIVENESS.
BY JOHN A. CLISS-MAN, General Agent. Office at Cedar Street, New York, who has appointed as Agents J. P. GEORGE, Jamaica Plains, & MRS. E. HAYDEN, Quincy.

Spring Medicines.
TO THE PUBLIC.
BEWARE OF IMITATIONS, in Massachusetts and New York, of the Compound Fluid Extract of Sarsaparilla and Dock Root.

The original and genuine article is prepared only by EMERY SOUTHER, and is highly recommended as a safe and speedy cure for all.

Diseases of the Blood,
such as Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, all eruptions on the surface of the body, and Scrofula, in all its forms. This medicine will stand the test of all other Sarsaparillas. It is recommended and used by Boston Physicians of the highest respectability, and by many who testify to its power and efficacy in curing the various diseases of the blood, and to prevent fraud it has been entered according to Act of Congress in the Clerk's Office of the District Court of the District of Massachusetts.

Also—Prepared as above, the celebrated Dandelion Panacea, an excellent Spring Medicine, and has been long used with great success in the treatment of Dyspepsia, Headache, Dropsy, and general Debility of the System, and for many years known as the best antiscorbutic remedy on record.

Oleum Jecoris Aselli,
Or Purified Cod Liver Oil,
For Coughs, Bronchitis, etc., and all diseases of the Lungs, for the purity and efficacy of which I would refer to the Boston MEDICAL AND SURGICAL JOURNAL of February, 1835.

The afflicted may have great confidence in these articles as they are prepared with great care by the subscriber, who is a regular established apothecary in Boston, and has had long experience in compounding various medicinal preparations.

The Graefenberg EYE LOTION, an article which supplies a want long felt in this part of the country. It is an unalloying remedy for violent inflammation, weakness or foreign substance in the eyes, and for dimness and fading of the sight. ### HOW MRS. PANDAVACK LED JOHN PANDAVACK BY THE NOSE.

Mr. Pandavack releases his grievances as follows:

His wife, it seems, was a little given to 'exclusiveness.'

I am a plain man, was brought up in a plain way in a plain little town down East, and although at the present time I should probably be taken by the undiscerning for one of the aristocracy, there is not a man walking the public streets who cherishes a deeper degree of fellow feeling with the mass about him. I sympathize with the struggling poor, and would fain shake the hand of every honest man who is fighting his way through the world's adversity and chances. Notwithstanding my interior nature, (as the transcendentalists would term it) is thus imbued with the most tender emotions which can fill the human breast, I find there is none of that cordial affection of my character which the heart so fondly looks for, and in searching the cause I am sometimes reluctantly compelled to admit that my dress and exterior deportment so dreadfully belie the inner and hidden man, that the genus to which I belong is erroneously decided by my borrowed feathers and jackdaw imitations of the peacock.

To speak no longer in enigmas, I proceed to enumerate some of the difficulties I have labored under, which I can do in no better way than by briefly relating a portion of my history.

It was my fortune (whether good or ill is matter of opinion,) to marry a lady belonging to the higher circles, whose private property, combined with the prosperous state of my business, gave me the ability to take our station among the celebrated and much talked of 'upper ten thousand.' As my personal taste is decidedly averse to ostentation and extravagance, I should have been content with a plain and comfortable style of living, but my lady was not a person to forego the advantages which fortune had thrown in her way, and we forth with commenced a course of fashionable house-keeping, fashionable visit-making, fashionable company-entertaining, fashionable airs and manners, lies and grimaces, which summed up give a grand total of fashionable misery. The beginning of this routine opened a sad chapter in my history, and had I not striven manfully against its consequences and cherished a deep and abiding veneration for the sober virtues of my pious ancestry, I should, no doubt, ere this, have concluded that mankind in general were made for my use in particular, and that the utterance of truthful sentiments only betrayed the highest degree of veridancy. Among the many minor requirements made of me by my lady was that of grading my notice of persons we met in society entirely by the caste they belonged to, rather than by their intrinsic merits and the excellencies of their character.

This requirement, I am sorry to say, was made to extend to my own relatives as well as hers, and has resulted in the entire estrangement from us of many estimable connections, and leading them to regard us as despicable, purse-proud aristocrats. I had been married about three months, when cousin Thomas, the crony of my boyhood, to whom I had become indebted for the most hospitable treatment in after years, at his residence in the country, came to the city, and calling on me at my place of business, was induced at my solicitation to have his baggage transported to my splendid and fashionable abode up town. Not dreaming that my wife would be gratified by this plan, I started for home at night, anticipating a right jolly time with cousin Tom in recounting some of the scrapes and exploits of our early days, and in living over again in imagination some of the blithesome scenes of youth. What my chagrin was, when I reached home and found that cousin Tom was 'none of the inventus,' can only be imagined by those who happen to be the husbands of fashionable ladies. 'Why! how is this, Mrs. Pandavack?' I immediately required, 'basest cousin Tom been here?' 'Mr. Pandavack,' she replied, giving the name a French twang, which she always persisted in doing, 'I wish you would not be at the pains of sending every cled-hopping countryman you meet up here to take board with us; there is no scarcity of rooms, I believe, down at the hotels, and I do not choose to have my house made a tavern of.'

'Well! but what of cousin Tom?' I again asked; 'he's here, I suppose, of course; gone to lie down, awhile, perhaps?'

'To lie down? No, Mr. Pandavack, not here; I invited him to stay to tea with us, and he, possessing sense enough to perceive that the invitation was meant to extend no farther, took umbrage at it and decamped quite abruptly.'

'Why, Mrs. Pandavack,' I replied, 'cousin Tom is the friend of my early days. I had rather sacrifice a thousand dollars than misuse him. I shall go immediately in pursuit of him.'

At this, Mrs. Pandavack, apprehensive that I would be as good as my word, fairly bullied me into the belief that, as Alderman Crabstick and his lady, and some others of the codfish aristocracy were to pay us several visits during the week, cousin Tom would be 'out of his element,' or in other words would feel like 'a cat in a strange garret' in the presence of the distinguished Crabstick, and so I acquiesced in her very kind and very hospitable arrangements.

I afterwards had to make up in extra attention to cousin Tom out of doors, what I lacked giving him in prog and house-room, and this course I subsequently pursued with nearly all our country relatives who came to town.

On another occasion, some five or six years after our marriage, Mrs. Pandavack had employed a dressmaker to come to the house, and when I reached home at the dinner hour on that day, I went to the nursery, as was frequently my custom, to have a short frolic with the children. Here I found the various dismembered fragments of female toggery, such as dress bodies, skirts, strips of whalebone, calico and the like, all strewn around in beautiful confusion, and a neat, tidy young woman in the midst of the scattered elements, plying her needle and scissors as for dear life. Her face, however, was averted from the door, and it being entirely out of Mrs. Pandavack's line to regard a dressmaker as any thing but a menial, and of course not worthy of an introduction to any one, I immediately withdrew my attention from her to give it to the juveniles, who had now commenced clambering about me. As soon, however, as I had spoke the dressmaker, recognizing my voice, instantaneously turned her head, and 'Why, John Pandavack! is this you?' and 'My dear friend, Mary Wilson!' were the words that as quick as thought passed between us, and then followed mutual inquiries after each other's health, and the expression of surprise on her part that the name of 'Pandavack,' which stood by itself in aristocratic style on the door plate, was the 'John Pandavack' with whom she had romped and played in her girlhood.

I leave it for the reader to imagine the consternation of my worthy spouse on finding how matters stood. The scene was truly dramatic; Mary and I unaffectedly delighted to see each other and interchanging the kindest civilities in our allusions to former times, while Mrs. Pandavack, angrily looking on, was highly incensed that I made so free with a sewing woman. I had not heard of the Wilson family for some years, but their history is brief. Shortly after I left my native village, where they then resided, Mr. Wilson, the father of Mary, signed bonds for a newly elected sheriff for several thousand dollars, and the said sheriff afterward absconding with a considerable amount of funds in possession, Mr. Wilson was compelled, in order to meet his liabilities, to dispossess himself of his farm, and having no other dependence, was thereby reduced to positive penury.

After many hardships endured in the country, he came to the metropolis, and had since subsisted, rather than lived, by the precarious support obtained as subscription solicitor to various periodicals and magazines. All this I elicited from Mary, and I truly felt pained to hear of the various straits to which her family had been subjected. Our conversation was now interrupted by the ringing of the dinner bell, which I had dreaded to hear as I knew it would be the signal for an unpleasant altercation between Mrs. Pandavack and myself. I had determined that at all hazards Miss Wilson should dine with us, and kindly signifying the same to her, Mrs. P. remarked that Miss Wilson would dine with the children, as she was desirous to have the body part of her dress put in such a shape that she could get through trying it on in time to make some early afternoon calls.

At once perceiving the drift of this plea of female ingenuity, I observed that as dinner had already been protracted until a late hour, it was probable Miss Wilson felt the need of her meal, and that she had of course better proceed at once to the table with us. At this point my wife drew me a little aside and in a low tone assured me that she somewhat expected Lieut. Redtop would drop in upon us to dinner, as she had invited him and had moreover ordered a plate set for him—and 'Mr. Pandavack,' she exclaimed, 'what opinion would the lieutenant form of us, should he see a seamstress seated at the table with us?' 'Any opinion that the son of old Redtop the tallow chandler should form of us, Mrs. Pandavack,' I replied, in an elevated tone, for I had got somewhat angrily excited, 'its a matter of far greater indifference to me than would be the ill treatment of a young lady of as good birth as yourself, Mrs. Pandavack.' By this time my wife was fairly convinced that I was in earnest, and made no more objection. Mary, it is true, begged to be allowed to eat after we had finished, but as I would not in the least hearken to it, Mrs. Pandavack was compelled to bow her neck to the unaristocratic degradation of dining with a dress maker.

This was but a single specimen of what I had to undergo! For the sake of peace I often submitted to having those whom Mrs. Pandavack deemed her inferiors subjected to the most haughty and repulsive treatment, while at times, in a spirit of righteous indignation, I have felt called on to take matters in hand and compel the performance of justice, as much to my own satisfaction as to the mortification of my haughty spouse. I am now some thirty-five years of age, and the cares of my business and family pressing upon me, I am quite willing to dress becomingly and to be thought as old as I am, but such is not the will of Mrs. Pandavack. The fashion in hats changes no more frequently than I buy a new one, so that a hat scarcely gets warmed to my head before I am obliged, through the despotic sovereignty of Mrs. P. (which I allow her to exercise in such matters) to throw it aside for one of the latest ton.

In 1845, when the styles of gentlemen's hats varied so frequently, Mr. Leary's bill against me for seventeen of his imperial first quality was one hundred and nineteen dollars. In the other departments of dress I fare no better; I am an exceedingly thin, spare man, weighing no more than about eight stone, yet in spite of my affirmations that a sack coat would exhibit my slender proportion to disadvantage, Mrs. Pandavack insisted on my wearing one the very first week in which they came into fashion. About the same time, the large massive canes were also brought into use, and one of these of some ten pound weight, I was compelled to lug up and down town every day, much I believe to the detriment of my health, and the rounding of my shoulders. I do not remember any foppish appendage, that came nearer being an affliction and a curse than those horrible mammoth walking sticks. They were generally assumed by delicate, slendery young gentlemen who would rather have paid a negro some twenty-five cents each time to carry the clumsy beam, than have sweated under its ponderous weight themselves, had not fashion demanded it.

Even now I am thrown into a fit of nervousness when I reflect upon the dreaded burdens I staggered under, and the forlorn figure I presented in my peregrinations through the streets during the era of the sack coats and weaver's beams. Of a truth, the flapping of that aforesaid garment of elegance around my bony back on a windy day, was as the flapping of a shirt hung upon a beanpole—although, such an appropriation of a shirt I have never beheld, and can only judge of the resemblance from conjecture. In my anteconubial condition, I rejoiced in a smooth clean physiognomy, and was wont to stroke my chin each day at about 7 o'clock, A. M., with that peculiar self-complacency which none but a shaved man can entertain. But alas! where was once the smooth and level plain, is now, to mar and disfigure, a forest of coarse, reddish, scrubby beard and whiskers.

To say nothing, however, of its appearance, the smothering, prickling sensation it gives me in hot weather, is almost beyond endurance, but in order to keep peace in the family, I contrived somehow to stand under it. There are not wanting those, (and Mrs. Pandavack is one of the number,) who make some show of resort to the Scriptures in defence of this hideous fashion, and appeal with an air of triumph to the practice, in this respect, of the patriarchs, apostles and prophets. Never was there a more unhappy application of Scripture. The venerable worthies, referred to, it is true, wore their beards, but they wore them whole and entire; no razor was suffered to carve out certain little plots and patches in that fanciful manner so much in vogue at the present day.

THE LORD SENT IT, IF THE DEVIL BROUGHT IT.

In my younger days I was what people called a 'wild chap,' and I rather think I was something of a high boy. Anything like fun stirred me from the bottom, and the way I 'went it,' sometimes, when I was stirred up, people said was rather curious.

I believe my respect for religious people was not quite as high as it is now. This grew out of two things—a defective education and thoughtlessness. Ten or fifteen years added to my mortal life has sobered me somewhat, and at this present writing, I own to a profound respect for religion. I state this that neither the gay nor thoughtful reader may misunderstand me, if the story I am going to relate should seem to peal with some levity in matters held sacred. I think the rebuke I got, often as I have laughed at it since, put the laugh completely on me and my companion.

There resided in my neighborhood a poor widow, whose means of support were exceedingly limited. Between nursing herself for rheumatism, and spinning and knitting, most of her lonely time was passed. I am ashamed to say, that, on one or two occasions I joined some wild young chaps in playing off tricks upon her, such as making unusual noises about the house at night, smoking her almost to death by putting a board over the top of her low mud-built chimney, and such like doings, that we thought rare sport, but for which we deserved a little wholesome chastisement, if there had been any one authorized to administer it.

One night, soon after dark, it happened that I was returning home in company with a merry fellow about my own age, and had to go by old Granny Bender's cottage. I had been in the town, and was bringing home a couple of 'Baker's loaves,' of which some of our folks were as fond as city people are of getting now and then a good taste of country 'home made.'

'Tom,' said I, as the old woman's cottage came in sight at a turn of the road, 'suppose we have a little fun with Granny Bender.'

'Agreed,' was Tom's answer, for he was always ready for sport. We had not fully decided upon what we would do when we came up to the cottage, and paused to settle our mode of annoyance. The only light within was the dim flickering of a few small sticks burning on the hearth. As we stood near the window, listening to what was going on inside, we found that Granny was praying, and a little to our surprise, asking for food.

'As she expects to get food from heaven,' said I, irreverently, 'I suppose she will have to be accommodated.'

And turning from the window, clambered up noiselessly, to the top of her chimney—a feat of no great difficulty, and tumbled my two loaves down.

When I reached the window again, in order to see what effect this mode of supply would have upon Granny Bender, I found the good old creature on her knees, piously thanking God for having answered her prayer.

'That's cool,' said I to Tom, 'now isn't it?'

'I rather think it is,' replied Tom.

'And is the old woman really such a fool as to think that the Lord answered her prayer, and sent her well baked loaves of bread down the chimney?'

'No doubt of it.'

'It won't do to let her labor under this mistake; no, never in the world,' said I.

'Hallo, Granny!' and I threw open the window, and pushed my laughing face into the room.

She had risen from her knees, and was about putting a piece of bread into her mouth.

'Now, Granny Bender!' said I, 'it isn't possible that you believed that bread came from heaven? Why, you old sinner, you, I threw it down the chimney.'

By this time the old woman's countenance was turned fully towards me, and by the dim light of the feeble fire, I could see that there were tears of thankfulness upon her faded and withered face. The expression of that face did not in the least change, though there was a deep rebuke in the tones of her voice, as well as in the words she uttered, and said—

'The Lord sent it, if the devil brought it!'

You may be sure that I vanished instantly, while Tom clapped his hands, and shouted,

'Good! good! Too good! oh dear! but the old lady was too much for you that time!'

With sundry other expressions of like tenor, I tried to laugh with him as he went home, and did laugh, perhaps, as loud as he did, but somehow or other, the laugh didn't appear to do me any good.

After that I let Granny Bender alone.

MAXIM ON MONEY. The art of living easily as to money, is to pitch your scale of living below your means. Comfort and enjoyment are more dependent upon easiness in the detail of expenditure than upon one degree's difference in the scale. Guard against false associations of pleasure with expenditure—the notion that, because pleasure can be purchased with money, therefore money cannot be spent without enjoyment. What a thing costs a man is no true measure of what it is worth to him; and yet how often is his appreciation governed by no other standard; as if there was a pleasure in mere expenditure itself. Let yourself feel a want before you provide against it. You are more assured that it is a real want; and it is worth while to feel it a little, in order to feel the relief from it. When you are undecided as to which of two courses you would like best, choose the cheapest. This rule will not only save money, but save also a good deal of trifling indecision. Too much leisure leads to expense; because when a man is in want of objects, it occurs to him that they are to be had for money; and he invents expenditures in order to pass the time.

TO TRANSFER ENGRAVINGS ON WHITE PAPER. Place the engravings for a few seconds over iodine vapor. Dip a slip of white paper in a weak solution of oil of vitrol. When dry, lay the slip upon the engraving, and place there a few minutes under a press. The engraving will thus be reproduced in all its delicacy and finish. The iodine has the property of fixing on the black parts or ink of the engraving, and not on the white. This important discovery is yet in its infancy.

OLD SCRAPS FOR YOUNG HOUSEKEEPERS. Do not have carpets swept any oftener than is absolutely necessary. After dinner sweep the crumbs into a dusting pan with your hearth brush; and if you have been sewing, pick up the shreds by hand. A carpet can be kept very neat in this way and a broom wears it very much.

If you happen to live in a house which has marble fire places, never wash them with soda; this destroys the polish in time. They should be dusted; the spots taken off with a nice oiled cloth, and then rubbed with a dry soft rag.

If you have a stip of land, do not throw away soda. Both ashes and soda are good manure for bushes and young plants.

After the last of May or the first of June, the little millers which lay moth eggs begin to appear. Therefore brush all your woollens and pack them away in a dark place covered with linen. Pepper, red cedar chips, tobacco—indeed almost any strong spicy smell is good to keep moths out of your chests and drawers. But nothing is as good as camphor. Sprinkle your woollens with camphorated spirit, and scatter pieces of camphor gum among them, and you will never be troubled with moths.

RELIGIOUS OPINIONS OF THE PRESIDENTS. The following table showing the respective denominations for which the Presidents of the United States have evinced a preference, is probably correct:—

Geo. Washington,	Virginia,	Episcopalian.
John Adams,	Mass.	Unitarian.
Thos. Jefferson,	Virginia,	Philosopher.
James Madison,	Virginia,	Episcopalian.
James Monroe,	Virginia,	Unitarian.
John Q. Adams,	Mass.	Unitarian.
Andrew Jackson,	Tennessee,	Presbyterian.
Martin Van Buren,	N. York,	Congregationalist.
Wm. H. Harrison,	Ohio,	Episcopalian.
John Tyler,	Virginia,	Unitarian.
James K. Polk,	Tennessee,	Presbyterian.

It would perhaps be rather difficult to express the religious character and connections of Mr. Jefferson in a single word. He appears to have been a philosophic infidel of the Voltaire school, and moreover a Materialist. He was a very zealous anti-Episcopalian upon the question between episcopacy and congregationalism. He is said to have attended a Baptist Church meeting in Virginia once, and thereupon to have declared that a Baptist Church presented the best specimen of a pure democracy which he had seen.

THE CLIMATE OF MEXICO. The climate of Mexico is peculiar; beautiful, calm and serene, but the atmosphere has so much less oxygen in it than ours that the whole economy of life is changed. The pulsation is increased almost double in frequency and there is a want of that vigor and robust feeling which our climate affords a healthy man, and once reduced by disease there, it is almost impossible to regain health and strength. The mornings are cool, too cool, for a man in a relaxed state of health to exercise without danger of taking cold which is almost as bad as any other disease there, and the days are so hot that the rays of the sun cannot be borne without producing fever. The natives wrap up in cloaks in the morning and retire at noon.

WHAT IS NECESSARY. There are many things that are not necessary. It is not necessary that we should be rich or great in this world; or that we should be gay and gaudy in our dress; or that we should enjoy sensual pleasures. It will not be a pin, to choose, ere long, what part we have acted here; when the sceptre and the spade shall have one common grave, and royal dust shall be blended with the beggar's ashes. But it is necessary that we should be born again; it is necessary that we should be acquainted with God, and make him our portion; it is necessary that we should submit to the yoke of Christ, and own his commands, and live to the Lord; there is nothing necessary but this.

GOOD BOOKS. A young man who has a fondness for books, or taste for the works of nature and art, is not only preparing to appear with honor and usefulness as a member of society, but is secured from a thousand temptations and evils to which he would otherwise be exposed. He knows what to do with his leisure time. It does not hang heavily on his hands. He has no inducement to resort to bad company, or the haunts of dissipation and vice; he has higher and nobler sources of enjoyment in himself. At pleasure he can call around him the best of company—the wisest and the greatest men of every age and country—and rest his mind with the rich stores of knowledge which they spread before him. A lover of good books can never be in want of good society, nor in much danger of seeking enjoyment in the low pleasures of sensuality and vice.

THE TWO HEAVS. 'I see in this world,' said Rev. John Newton, 'two heavs—one of human happiness and one of misery; now, if I can take but the smallest bit from the second heav, and add to the first, I carry a point. If, as I go home, a child has dropped a half penny, and by giving it another, I can wipe away its tears, I feel that I have done something. I should be glad indeed, to do great things, but I will not neglect such little ones as these.'

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, JUNE 10, 1848.

John A. Green, Editor.

THE EDITOR IN NEW YORK.

New York, Thursday 2 1/2 P. M. 1848.

Owing to a disappointment in procuring a steamboat for a direct passage to Philadelphia, I have been disappointed with reference to attending the Whig National Convention. Arrangements had been made for a boat, tickets sold, but after all the steamer was otherwise engaged. Much feeling is manifested in this city by the Whigs—many of whom openly and fervently avow that they will support Taylor for availability sake, but had rather sink with the statesman Clay as their nominee. The rumor this morning that Gen. Taylor had been nominated started the friends of Mr. Clay and preparations were being made to call a meeting to reject the doings of the national convention in this particular.

I had the pleasure of meeting a few days since, Thomas Hart Hayatt, Esq., the newly appointed Consul from the United States to Tangiers, in the Empire of Morocco. No man has labored more ardently for the democratic cause for the last fifteen years, as the editor of the Rochester Daily Advertiser and the New York Globe until it fell to the hands of the "Barbarians." Mr. Hayatt is a practical printer, a gentleman of intelligence, and in private life of the most impeccable manners. He sailed on Wednesday last.

On Tuesday last, the new and large, (indeed commodious and magnificent steamer,) the Empire State, commenced on the regular line between New York and Boston, via Fall River, under the command of the oldest in the service, and most accomplished captain now navigating Long Island Sound, J. J. Comstock, Esq. This boat is admitted to be a masterpiece of beauty and mechanical ingenuity—literally speaking a "floating palace." She has four hundred permanent berths on board, and can furnish sleeping accommodations for six hundred persons. The massive engine is seen through two immense plates of French glass, set in gilt frames, and has an index which registers every revolution of the wheel. Every department of the vessel is furnished in the most sumptuous style, and nothing has been neglected that could in any manner contribute to the comfort and convenience of the passengers. A band of music was on board the "Empire State" with a very large number of passengers. The "Battery" seemed thronged with people to witness her departure, and she onward moved through the water with a grandeur and speed that elicited applause and marked her as the model steamer navigating from the great "commercial emporium."

This afternoon, Gen. Lewis Cass is to be received by the City authorities and citizens generally, and escorted through the principal streets to his "stopping place." Flags are displayed in abundance—much enthusiasm is manifested, and multitudes are collecting to greet his arrival at Castle Garden. A few months since, and he passed to the seat of government, so recently noticed, now he visits on his homeward journey as the guest of the city.—Such are the mutations of time.

The barnburners' meeting, or bolters from the democratic party, was well attended, but from indications I imagine that the "leaders" at the November election will alone constitute the now barnburners or Whig democratic party.

It is generally believed that "Old Rough and Ready" will receive the nomination of the whig convention, and if so he will triumph as he has ever been victorious on the battlefield. A faithful public servant demands and will always receive from the ballots of the American public a token of united and grateful hearts in an elevation to the highest office in their gift.

I mentioned in my last letter, that the weather was cold but that vegetation flourished. I notice in the market cherries, new potatoes, string beans, etc. The Epicurean Society of Quincy, consigned me to "good keeping" and warm-hearted friends.

MEXICO. Despatches have been received at Washington that the treaty had been ratified by one branch of the Mexican Congress and undoubtedly would be by the other branch. A private letter dated the 23d ult, says, "The Treaty has been certainly ratified, and the American troops have commenced their homeward march." General Worth's division, it is reported, will be ordered to California.

COMMISSIONER OF INSOLVENCY. Francis Hilliard, Esq., of Roxbury, has been appointed by the Governor, Commissioner of Insolvency for Norfolk County. The new Insolvency law goes into operation to-day.

"GRAND RALLY." The democrats of Boston and vicinity are to have a meeting in Faneuil Hall, Boston, on Monday evening next, to respond to and ratify the doings of the Baltimore Convention. We notice the names of Wm. S. Morton and Joseph W. Robertson, of this town, among the Committee of Arrangements.

BANNER PRESENTATION. The Grand Lodge of colored Free Masons, of Boston, paraded last day with a band of music and marched to Faneuil Hall, where a banner was presented to them by Mrs. Maria Ambush, who made an address in behalf of an association of colored ladies.

FIRE. A blacksmith's shop, near the Lodge of Mr. Lysander Richards, in this place, was destroyed by fire on Friday night of last week. There was a quantity of charcoal in the premises which was also destroyed, making the loss not far from a hundred dollars. It is not known how the fire originated.

THE "COMET." Another number of this semi-occasional publication came to us one day the past week. It hails from Dedham, and has for its sponsor Herman Mann, Esq.

SONGS FOR THE PEOPLE. The June number of this work has been received, which completes the first volume. It contains fourteen popular songs, set to music, and upwards of twenty illustrations. Now is a good time to subscribe for the new volume. Money cannot be invested more satisfactorily, we will venture to say. The price is only three dollars a year, for which you get two large octavo volumes of three hundred pages each. Address George B. Zieber & Co. Philadelphia.

BEYNE'S PANORAMA. Such is the attraction of this beautiful panorama—that Mr. Beyne finds it necessary to give extra exhibitions, to accommodate the large parties from the surrounding towns. There will be an exhibition at three o'clock this afternoon.

FIREMEN'S FESTIVAL. Niagara Engine Company, No. 1, of this place, contemplate having a grand parade and entertainment, (providing the weather is propitious,) next Monday, on the occasion of receiving the splendid new Engine recently completed for them under the superintendence of Mr. Gilbert of Milton. The Company have furnished themselves with a new and beautiful uniform, and will be attended, on this occasion, by the Woburn Brass Band. After marching through several streets of the village in the morning, they will take the cars for Dorchester and Milton Mills where a trial of the new tub will be made. They will return to this place in the afternoon, in procession, bringing their new Engine with them, and again parade our streets to the music of the band. A collation will be served at the Hancock House at five o'clock, of which the Company, with invited guests, will partake. The Niagara Company now musters full ranks, and with their new uniform and new Engine, will be able to do justice to themselves and credit to the town in battling the fiery element; and it is well known that the Quincy boys are not slow in demolishing good things in the shape of eatables—such as oysters, clam-chowder, etc.—which will doubtless be bountifully provided to refresh them after the fatigues of the day. We wish them much success, and hope they will ever be true to their motto—"Always Ready."

BOSTON MUSEUM. An advertisement of this magnificent establishment will be seen in our columns this week. Mr. Kimball, the gentlemanly proprietor, has spared no pains or expense in making the Museum every way worthy of public patronage, and it has become, in point of interest, the chief attraction to any one visiting the metropolis of New England. Not to know it argues oneself unknown. The instruction and entertainment, to say nothing of the magnificence of this superb edifice, never fails to interest the intellectual visitor. The aged and the youth, male and female of all classes, conditions and denominations, and from all parts of the habitable globe delight to survey the wonderful works of nature and art in this grand, beautiful and gigantic establishment.

FOSTER'S SHOE STORE. Persons in want of any thing in the Shoe line, ladies particularly, should call at Foster's, where they are sure to get suited. Mr. F. has recently added another attraction to his establishment—a Confectionary department, where may be found almost every variety of candies, looking so inviting that one can hardly resist the temptation to buy. Hold your purse strings tight when you enter his place if you do not want to purchase.

HELD TO ANSWER. The two rogues who were arrested a few days since for robbing the store of A. Lewis in Randolph, were examined, and in default of bail, in the sum of $500 each, were committed to Dedham jail to await their trial in September next. A considerable portion of the property stolen has been recovered.

TESTIMONY OF THE DOCTORS IN FAVOR OF WISTAR'S BALM OF WILD CHERRY.

This certifies that I have recommended the use of Dr. Wistar's Balm of Wild Cherry for diseases of the Lungs, for two years past, and many bottles to my knowledge have been used by my patients, all with beneficial results. In two cases, where it was thought confirmed consumption had taken place, the Wild Cherry effected a cure.

Dr. Bradford Knapp, of Crown Point, N. Y., in a letter dated August 3d, 1845, says: "In the course of my practice in this vicinity, I have tested in some of the Lung disease the good qualities of Wistar's Balm of Wild Cherry in Pulmonary Complaints, and I now wish to procure a supply of the medicine."

Dr. A. H. Mann, of Tarboro, N. C., writes on the 1st of Feb. 11, 1847, that he has used Dr. Wistar's Balm of Wild Cherry in the last twelve months, and considers it the best preparation of the kind he ever saw, and knows of none so deserving the public patronage.

Dr. W. A. Washington, N. C., writes, under date of May 1, 1846, as follows: "I have heard of many cases of decided beneficial effects from its use, especially in Asthma and chronic cough of spasmodic character. I have used Wild Cherry a great deal in practice, and with much success in those cases of great nervous mobility, and irritability to which phthical patients are subject. The combination of these principles in Wistar's Balm of Wild Cherry is ingenious and judicious. Medical men are justly distrustful of Patent Medicines in general, but candor must discriminate between outrageous humbugs and nostrums and those medicines which have proved salutary, and in many well attested cases curative."

Dr. Hoffman, Huntington, Pa., cured a child of Asthma with it, after he could do no more with his medicine, and the child most die.

Dr. Freleigh, of Saugerties, N. Y., says he cured Liver Complaint of four years standing, that would not yield to the usual remedies.

Abraham Skillman, M. D., of Boundbrook, N. J., says it is the best medicine for consumption, in every stage, that he has ever known. We might refer you to hundreds of cases, had we room, that would convince all of its great virtue.

MISCELLANY.

COURTSHIP OF THE ELDER ADAMS.

Some years since I spent a college vacation in the town of Weymouth, Norfolk County, Mass. While there, I attended church one Sunday morning at what was called the old Weymouth meeting house, and heard a sermon from the venerable pastor, Rev. Jacob Norton. About the same time, I made Mr. Norton a visit, and became much interested in the old gentleman. I mentioned my agreeable visits to an aged lady of the parish, whose acquaintance I had made. She informed me that Mr. Norton was ordained their pastor when he was about twenty-one years of age, and that he had been with them nearly forty years. She observed that most of his parishioners could remember no other pastor; but that she could well remember his predecessor, the Rev. Mr. Smith, and that he and Mr. Norton had filled the same pulpit for the better part of the last eighty years.

"Mr. Smith," said she, "was an excellent man, and a very fine preacher; but he had high notions of himself and family—in other words, he was something of an aristocrat." One day, said she to me, "to illustrate to you a little the character of old parson Smith, I will tell you an anecdote that relates to himself and some other persons of distinction."

Mr. Smith had two charming daughters, (the eldest of these daughters was Mary, the other's name I have forgotten,) who was the admiration of all the beaux, and the envy of all the belles of the country around. But while two careful guardians of the parson's family were holding consultations on the subject, it was rumored that two young lawyers (I think both of the neighboring town of Quincy,) a Mr. Cranch and a Mr. Adams, were paying to her addresses to the Miss Smiths. As every man, woman and child of a country parish in New England, is acquainted with whatever takes place in the parson's family, all the circumstances of the courtship soon transpired. Mr. Cranch was of a respectable family of some note, was considered a young man of promise, and altogether worthy of the alliance he sought. He was very acceptable to Mr. Smith and was greeted by him and his family with great respect and cordiality. He was received by the eldest daughter as a lover; and was in fact a young man of much respectability. He afterwards rose to the dignity of Judge of the Court of Common Pleas in Massachusetts, and was the father of the Hon. Judge Cranch, of the District of Columbia.

The suitor of the other daughter was John Adams, who afterwards became President of the United States. But at that time in the opinion of Mr. Smith and family, he gave but slender promise of the distinction to which he afterwards arrived. His pretensions were scorned by all the family, excepting the young lady to whom his addresses were especially directed. Mr. Smith showed him none of the ordinary civilities of the house, he was not asked to partake of the hospitalities of the table; and it is reported that his horse was doomed to share with his master, the neglect and mortification to which he was subject, for he was frequently seen shivering in the cold, and gnawing the post at the pastor's door, of long winter evenings. In fine it was reported that Mr. Smith had intimated to him that his visits were unacceptable, and he would do him a favor by discontinuing them; he told his daughter that John Adams was not worthy of her, that his father was an honest tradesman and farmer; who had tried to initiate John in the arts of husbandry and shoe-making, but without success; and that he had sent him to college as a last resort. He in fine, begged his daughter not to think of making an alliance with one so much beneath her.

Miss Smith was among the most dutiful of Proclaim the presence of their Queen.

Ah! could she check that heartless glee,
Ringing the echo—"She is free!"

Like summer clouds, are floating light
Proud banners in the air;
And many a tried, true-hearted Knight
Now clasps his trusty spear,
And welcomes, as she moves along,
Queen Mary to that armed throng.

But vainly turns from face to face,
Her grateful, anxious eye;
It finds in each some valued trace
Of days long gone by;
Sweet memories come with all she sees,
But he—why is not he with these?

"This must not be!"—she said, and more—
From that bright band away!
"Douglas!"—she cried—"my best, my prov'd,
Why shun us thus to day?
Hast thou forgotten we are free?
Come join our Lords—this must not be!"

Quick as the lightning flash that plays
O'er the storm fraught sky,
The sudden start his joy betrays,
And kindles in his eye.
The thought that she—But where is now
The radiance of that noble brow?

Alas! that melancholy look,
Those faded armor's gleam
He bears—(the thought he may not brook.)
A new dishonor'd name?
And he, the bravest of them all,
He dare not seek that people's hall.

"A Douglas still, I may not meet
In friendly greeting, those Whom taught from childhood's ear to treat
As foes—my household foes!
Nor can I bring a friendless man—
To aid my Queen, what others can."

"One heart alone one blade is mine,
These, and my life remain;
Oh Lady! but to make them thine,
All, all I'd lose again;
Ten thousand times each tie I'd break,
Not for the Queen—but Mary's sake!"

He bow'd, and at her light command,
Soon mingled with the noble host
Which form'd, that day, in Scotland's land,
His truest, proudest host,
Yet are one little month had fled,
The Douglas rested with the dead!

ALL ABOUT SUSAN.

Yes she was lovely, she was fair;
As mild as summer even;
An angel form, a spirit bright,
A star that dropped from Heaven,
"Well, she was."

And O, those bright and lovely orbs,
That beamed with holy fire;
Those azure curls, that lovely brown,
None, none but could admire.
Well they could not.

I knelt before her, and declared
I'd have one burning kiss;
She said, "until you wash your face,
You can't enjoy such bliss.
Well she did."

I swore she was an angel too
Who'd fallen from the sky.
She cried, "O for a pair of wings
To soar again on high."
Indeed she did.

"What, what?" I cried, and would you thus
A lover true desert?
O heavens! she cried, "the clothes line's broke,
There goes my brother's shirt."
Well, she did too.

I felt just then as if I'd dropt
From Chimborazo's summit;
I felt my budding passion crop—
"Twas plain I couldn't come it.
No Sirs!"

And did I quickly snatch my hat,
Without a thought of kissing!
And did I ever after that,
Come up among the missing?
I didn't do "nothing shorter."

ANECDOTES.

During the Protectorate, a Church of England clergyman, warmly attached to the house of Stuart, was wont to use the following prayer which by proper emphasis was rendered significant enough—"Oh, Lord who hast put a sword into the hand of thy servant Oliver, put it into his heart also—to do thy will."

"First class in Natural History came up. Where does the sun set?" "He sets in the west, sir." "What does he set in the west for?" "To hatch out another day." "Smart boy—go pump on your head to keep your nose from bleeding."

"My gracious, capt'ing," said Mrs. Darby, "won't that big gun go off?" "Madam," said the captain, "it has no place to go to."

"Are you fond of flowers, child?" "Oh, yes, ma'am. I'm wonderful fond of it." "Which kind do you like best, my dear?" "Oh, that flower of blinestones which mother gives me, all mixed with 'lasses!"

"Why do you set your cup of coffee upon the chair, Mr. Jones?" said a worthy landlady at breakfast. "It is so very weak, ma'am replied he demurely, 'I thought I would let it rest."

"My dear, you snore," said a lady to her worse half. "I do so," was the laconic reply.

MISCELLANY.

COURTSHIP OF THE ELDER ADAMS.

Some years since I spent a college vacation in the town of Weymouth, Norfolk County, Mass. While there, I attended church one Sunday morning at what was called the old Weymouth meeting house, and heard a sermon from the venerable pastor, Rev Jacob Norton. About the same time, I made Mr. Norton a visit, and became much interested in the old gentleman. I mentioned my agreeable visits to an aged lady of the parish, whose acquaintance I had made. She informed me that Mr. Norton was ordained their pastor when he was about twenty-one years of age, and that he had been with them nearly forty years. She observed that most of his parishioners could remember no other pastor; but that she could well remember his predecessor, the Rev. Mr. Smith, and that he and Mr. Norton had filled the same pulpit for the better part of the last eighty years.

Mr. Smith, said she, 'was an excellent man, and a very fine preacher; but he had high notions of himself and family—in other words, he was something of an aristocrat.'—One day, said she to me, 'to illustrate to you a little the character of old parson Smith, I will tell you an anecdote that relates to himself and some other persons of distinction. Mr. Smith had two charming daughters, (the eldest of these daughters was Mary, the other's name I have forgotten,) who was the admiration of all the beaux, and the envy of all the belles of the country around. But while two careful guardians of the parson's family were holding consultations on the subject, it was rumored that two young lawyers (I think both of the neighboring town of Quincy,) a Mr. Cranch and a Mr. Adams, were paying their addresses to the Miss Smiths. As every man, woman and child of a country parish in New England, is acquainted with whatever takes place in the parson's family, all the circumstances of the courtship soon transpired. Mr. Cranch was of a respectable family of some note, was considered a young man of promise, and altogether worthy of the alliance he sought. He was very acceptable to Mr. Smith and was greeted by him and his family with great respect and cordiality. He was received by the eldest daughter as a lover; and was in fact a young man of much respectability. He afterwards rose to the dignity of Judge of the Court of Common Pleas in Massachusetts, and was the father of the Hon. Judge Cranch, of the District of Columbia.

The suitor of the other daughter was John Adams, who afterwards became President of the United States. But at that time in the opinion of Mr. Smith and family, he gave but slender promise of the distinction to which he afterwards arrived. His pretensions were scorned by all the family, excepting the young lady to whom his addresses were especially directed. Mr. Smith showed him none of the ordinary civilities of the house, he was not asked to partake of the hospitalities of the table; and it is reported that his horse was doomed to share with his master, the neglect and mortification to which he was subject, for he was frequently seen shivering in the cold, and gnawing the post at the pastor's door, of long winter evenings. In fine it was reported that Mr. Smith had intimated to him that his visits were unacceptable, and he would do him a favor by discontinuing them; he told his daughter that John Adams was not worthy of her, that his father was an honest tradesman and farmer; who had tried to initiate John in the arts of husbandry and shoe-making, but without success; and that he had sent him to college as a last resort. He in fine, begged his daughter not to think of making an alliance with one so much beneath her.

Miss Smith was among the most dutiful of daughters, but she saw Mr. Adams through a medium very different from that which her father viewed him. She would not for the world offend or disobey her father, but still John saw something in her eye and manner which seemed to say, 'persecute,' and on that hint he acted.

Mr. Smith, like a good parson, and an affectionate father, had told his daughters if they married with his approbation, he would preach each of them a sermon on the Sabbath after the joyful occasion; and that they should have the privilege of choosing the text.

The espousal of the eldest daughter, Mary, arrived, and she was united to Mr. Cranch in the holy bonds, with the approval, the blessings and benedictions of her parents and her friends. Mr. Smith then said, 'my dutiful child, I am now ready to prepare your sermon for next Sunday; what do you select for your text?' 'My dear father,' said Mary, 'I have selected the latter part of the 42d verse of the 10th chapter of Luke.

'Mary hath chosen that good part which shall never be taken from her.'

'Very good, my daughter,' said the father; and so a sermon was preached.

Mr. Adams persevered in his suit in defiance of all opposition. It was many years after, and on a very different occasion, and in resistance of very different opposition, that he uttered those memorable words, 'sink or swim, live or die, survive or perish, I give my heart and hand to this measure.' But though the measures were different the spirit was the same. Besides he had already carried the main point of attack, the heart of the young lady—and he knew that the surrender of the citadel must soon follow. After the usual hesitation and delay that attend such an unpleasant affair, Mr. Smith seeing that resistance was fruitless, yielded the contested point with as much grace as possible, as many a prudent father has done, before and since that time. Mr. Adams was united to that lovely Miss Smith. After the marriage was over, and all things were settled in quiet, Mrs. Adams remarked to her father, 'You preached sister Mary a sermon on the occasion of her marriage—would you preach me one likewise?' 'Yes, my dear girl,' said Mr. Smith, 'choose your text, and you shall have your sermon.' 'Well,' said the daughter, 'I have chosen the 33d verse of the 7th chapter of Luke.

'For John came neither eating bread nor drinking wine, and ye say he hath a devil.'

The old lady, my informant, looked me very archly in the face when she repeated this passage and observed, 'if Mary was the most dutiful daughter, I guess the other had the most wit.'

I could not ascertain whether the last sermon was ever preached.

It may not be inappropriate to remark, how well these ladies justified the preference of the distinguished individuals who had sought them in marriage. Of them it will hardly be extravagant to say they were respectively an honor to their husbands, the boast of their sex, and the pride of New England. Mrs. Adams in particular, who from the elevated position in which her husband was placed before the world, was brought before the public eye, was supposed to hold the same elevated rank with the gentle sex, that Mr. Adams did among men, and she is reported to have rendered her husband much assistance in his multiplied labors of the pen.—Cincinnati Chronicle.

THE WAY THEY GET MARRIED IN THE EAST.

Among the Katties. A Katie, to become a husband, must be a ravisher; he must attack with his friends and followers the village where his betrothed resides, and carry her off by force. In ancient times this was no less a trial of strength than of courage; stones and clubs were used without reserve both to force and repel; and the disappointed lover was not unfrequently compelled to retire, covered with bruises, and wait for a more favorable occasion. The bride had the liberty of assisting her lover by all the means in her power, and the opposition ceased when her dwelling was once gained by the assailants, and the lady then bravely won submitted willingly to be carried off by her champion.

Marriage of the Goands. It is said that the bride is brought home in the evening, when, in an assembly of the people, the bridegroom applies the frontal mark made with vermilion, throws a garland of flowers round her neck, and then retires and conceals himself in the thickets. The relations of the bride arm themselves and go in quest of him, and if he is found during the night, the marriage is void; if not discovered, he appears in the morning, takes the bride by the hand, removes the veil from her face, and they dance together in the centre of a ring formed by the assistants, who also dance around them. The ceremony is thus completed, and the rest of the day is devoted to festivity and mirth.

Among the Sirmoris. Is the custom of polyandry, or of one woman having two or more husbands. This latitude of female indulgence prevails also among the happy dames of several other Indian tribes. Among the Todirs of the Nilgiri mountains, the brothers of a family have usually only one wife between them, who makes her election of which of them she is disposed to drop the handkerchief to. She is, moreover, allowed to do so to a lover, without the slightest objection or jealousy on the part of her proper lords. In other parts of India females have had less deference paid to them; and in Malwa it has been said they were, till very recently, accounted witches; that is to say, after a certain age. They were then, according to a statement published in the Calcutta Journal, 1821, put into a sack and thrown into a tank; if they swam they were certainly witches, and suffered death; if they sank they were drowned, and it may be supposed not witches. Many hundreds, adds the writer, have in some seasons been doomed to this cruel death. The Rajah Zalim Singh, of Kotah, sentenced four hundred to die in this manner, because the death of his favorite wife was attributed to witchcraft. Through the laudable and humane interference of the British political agent, this barbarous custom has, it is said, ceased; and the benevolent author of the change became so popular among the old ladies, that it is supposed he might have married them all, had he been so disposed.

With the Garrows—Marriage is in general settled amongst the parties themselves, though sometimes by their parents. If it has been settled by the parties themselves, and the parents of either refuse their assent, the friends of the opposite party, and even others unconnected, go and by force compel the dissenters to comply; it being a rule among the Garrows to assist those that want their help on these occasions, let the disparity of age or rank be ever so great. If the parents do not accede to the wish of their child, they are well beaten till they acquiesce in the marriage. The reader may be curious to know what sort of people they are among whom so laudable a custom prevails.

A Garrow is a stout, well-shaped man; hardy, and able to do much work; of a surly look; flat café-like nose; small eyes, generally blue or brown; forehead wrinkled, and over-hanging eyebrow; with large mouth, thick lips, and face round and short; their color is of a light or deep brown. The women are the ugliest creatures I ever beheld, short and squat in their stature, with masculine faces; in the features they differ little from the men.

The dress of these people corresponds with their persons. They eat all manner of food, even dogs, frogs, snakes, and the blood of all animals. The last is baked over a slow fire, in hollow green bamboo, till it becomes of a nasty dirty green color. They are fond of drinking to an excess.

Among the Kookies—When a young man has fixed his affections upon a young woman, either of his own or some neighboring parish, his father visits her father, and demands her in marriage for his son. Her father on this inquires what are the merits of the young man to entitle him to her favor, and how many he can afford to entertain at the wedding feast; to which the father of the young man replies, that his son is a brave warrior, a good hunter, an expert thief; for that he can produce so many heads of the enemies he has slain, and of the game he has killed; that in his house are such and such stolen goods, and that he can feast so many (mentioning the number) at his marriage.

The Tribe of Daya of Bornes. The more heads a man has cut off the more he is respected; and a young man cannot marry until he can produce heads procured by himself; nor can the corps of a person of rank be inhumed until a fresh head be acquired by his nearest of kin. Should he be of high rank, great rejoicings take place on his return from a successful expedition; the heads, which probably still bleed, are seized by the women, who rush into the water, dip the heads, and anoint themselves with the ensanguined stream which drops from the skulls. A man of great consideration may have fifty or sixty skulls suspended in his premises. It has been known that two years have expired before a young man could be married, or, in other words, before he could procure a skull.

INSECTS ABOUT FRUIT TREES. It is of the greatest importance that all insects about fruit trees should be destroyed. This desirable end is effected in a variety of ways, one of which I will mention. As soon as your trees begin to cast their fruit, turn in your swine—no matter how many, if your orchard is of considerable size, and permit them to remain there till the fruit attains its full size. By examination you will find that almost invariably every apple, pear or other fruit that falls prematurely, contains one or more worms. These the hogs will destroy, and thus prevent injury from the same source in succeeding years. Where this method cannot be adopted, all the fruit that drops early from the boughs, should be carefully and frequently picked up, and fed to the swine in their styes. Lime and ashes, applied in considerable quantities, operate both as a stimulant to the trees, and as a remedial agent in checking the ravages of the curculios and other insectivorous depredators. Salt, also, in small quantities is decidedly beneficial to most plants, and many are benefited by it when the quantity applied is large. By experiments which I have made with salt, writes a friend long distinguished for his enterprise and intelligence in the pursuit of agricultural improvement—I find that many plants flourish well with so much salt, as would immediately prove fatal to others—thus the quantity I accord to a few roots of asparagus would destroy an oak. I am of opinion that those plants which do not receive immediate injury from the application of this substance, will derive great benefit.

ENCOURAGE YOUR OWN.

Having been absent for several years, on returning, my first enquiry was for my old employers. I called at the shop where I had spent many happy days of full employment, and lo, it was closed and silent as the tomb. I looked in at the window, I saw my former location, but all else how changed.

I turned around, and near me was passing a worthy aged citizen, whom I recognized, but to whom myself seemed a stranger,—the enquiry was natural enough, where is the owner? Oh, he has gone away for work, was the reply. Has he not attended to his business here? Yes. Was not his price reasonable? Yes. Was he desirous to stay at home? Oh, yes, he was. Has his family removed? No, but I am told they have in contemplation to remove soon. He waited for months, but received scarcely work enough to keep soul and body together,—while some of the citizens were bringing in mechanics from abroad to do their work—men who feel no interest in the prosperity of our village, and contribute nothing to the support of our town by taxes, or our religious societies and schools. Truly thought I, the remarks of this worthy citizen are too true. Here is a man respected, driven away to seek employment abroad—away from his family—one who formerly employed scores, and never failed to pay them,—whose trade in the village during one year exceeded two thousand dollars—and one who lent a helping hand to all the objects worthy to receive aid—and that to this very day, more than twenty persons of the same occupation not one of which I did recognize as a citizen five years, employed by those who should have adopted the motto, 'Our country against the world—Our town before any other in the Union—Our town before any other in the State—Our village first—our village last, and away.'

This may seem selfish, but we are fully convinced that is the true policy to ensure prosperity.

Mr. C. has all his coats made in a neighboring city. No tailor of his own place can even make a coat that will fit. They are only convenient to call upon when a button gets off, or the elbow gets out. He handed in an old coat to one of our established tailors with a high commendation upon the workmanship, and a wonder that none of the town tailors could do so well.

Who made that coat, sir, enquired the tailor, as he cast his eye over the work. A Mr.—

Oh yes! he is a very good workman—he served his time with me, and has just established himself in business. I see, however, that he has not paid quite the attention to stitching the collar I used to require of him—but I suppose a pressure of work has compelled him to make a longer stitch than I used to let pass—however he will no doubt improve.

'Encourage your own,' thought I, if you wish to save yourself from the chagrin that was manifest in this patron's countenance. Even if you pay a little more it would be better for the general prosperity of the town that its own citizens should be patronized—as it gives them the means to extend the wave until every little circle in the lake of prosperity unites and sets the whole community in motion. 'Encourage your own.'

SELLING DRY GOODS.

People generally think that it is a very easy matter to stand behind a counter and retail dry goods; but a week's experience in the business would convince the cleverest man that it is much more difficult and laborious than the task of turning a grindstone twelve hours per diem. The office of a salesman embodies, in its duties, necessity for the shrewdness of a politician, the persuasion of a lover, the politeness of a Chamberlain, the patience of Job, and the impudence of a pickpocket. There are salesmen who make it a point never to lose a customer. One of these gentlemen who is in a store in Chatham street, not long since was called to show to a very fastidious and fashionable lady, who 'dropped in while going to Stewart's' some rich silk cloaking. Every article of the kind was exposed to her view—the whole store was ransacked—nothing suited. The costly material was stigmatized as 'trash,'—everything was common, not fit for a lady. 'She guessed she would go to Stewart's.' The salesman pretended to be indignant.

'Madam,' said he, in a tone of injured innocence, 'I have a very beautiful and rare piece of goods—a case of which I divided with Mr. Stewart, who is my brother-in-law; but it would be useless to show it to you. It is the only piece left in the city.'

'Oh! allow me to see it,' she asked, in an anxious tone, and continued, 'I had no intention of annoying you, or of disparaging the merits of your wares.'

The salesman, who was now watched in breathless silence by his fellow clerks, proceeded as if with much reluctance, and with expressions of fear that it would be injured by getting tumbled, to display an ancient piece of vesting, which had been lying in the store five years, and was considered to be unsaleable. The lady examined and liked it much. That was a piece of goods worthy to be worn. How much was it a yard?

'Twenty-two shillings.'

'Oh! that is very high.'

'There!' exclaimed he, beginning to fold it up, 'I knew you would say that.'

'Stay! stay! don't be in so great a hurry!' she cried—'I'll give you twenty shillings.'

'Madam, you insult me again.'

'Cut me off—yards, and you can make up the deduction on some velvet which I require for trimmings,' almost entreated the fair shopper.

The salesman, after much persuasion, sold the lady the vesting, for which they had in vain sought to get five shillings per yard, at the price above indicated. The profits of the sale on vesting and velvet, amounted to thirty-three dollars, out of which the clerks were permitted to pay for a supper of oysters. The best of this brief tale of dry goods, is to be told. The lady had her cloak made, and one or two of her friends, delighted with it, bought the rest of the velvet at the same price.

There is a moral in this anecdote, which we leave to be discovered by the ingenuity of all our lady readers, who occasionally go shopping.

A PLEASANT HOME.

Some parents seem to be cursed with a fatal facility for rearing bad children, and sending forth upon the world, recruits to all vices, and adepts in all crime. They cannot keep them under their control, try all they will to the contrary; the boys are forever in the streets, and the girls are stealing away at all times for scenes of excitement and indulgence. Every good habit is therefore broken down, every counsel is unheeded, and the children are as really educated in evil, as if they had been directly taught in its school.

Now we venture an opinion that all the fault lies at the parents' doors, in not making home attractive. The fact is children must be amused, excited and attended to; otherwise their natural buoyancy and volatility of soul will drive them to seek gratification in a questionable way, out from under their parents' eye and influence, and when the taste and habits are once formed, is a very difficult matter to break them up. We have no question at all, that if the social circle, universally, were to be made happy, joyous, mirthful, and attractive, by means of games, feasts, exercises, and amusements, originated and controlled by the parents themselves, and partaken of by them with their children, intermingled with mental and moral instruction,—home would become most enchanting; its influences permanent; and parental power, perfectly regenerating. We are firm believers in the doctrine 'Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it.'

SUCH IS LIFE. Life is a budget, in which our fortunes are placed. We thrust in our hands, and sometimes pluck a rose, sometimes a thorn; but the thorn, though it pricks us, only enhances the value of the rose, and teaches us the wisdom of reaching into the budget with care. And over the budget hangs such an excitement of hopes and fears, that the pursuit of life is ever new, absorbing and full of delight. Anticipation is always on hand, inspiring us to dive deeper, as children seek for the bottom of the pudding, and however uneven the measure we draw from day to day, no stoicism can drive us from the budget until death comes to bear it away for repairs, and to re-fill it in another world with roses unmingled with thorns.

POPULATION AND PROPERTY. According to the Patent Office Report, the population of the United States is 20,756,000; and the aggregate of real and personal property is estimated at $8,191,566,000. The property of Massachusetts is estimated at $340,000,000, and of New York at $1,112,000,000. Indiana is set down at $384,000,100—which must furnish pretty good security for her public debt.

A THOUGHT. There are two lives to each of us—gliding on at the same time scarcely connected with each other; the life of our actions—the life of our minds; the external and the inward history, the movements of the frame—the deep and ever restless workings of the heart. History reveals men's deeds, men's outward characters, but not themselves. There is a secret self that hath its own life, 'rounded by a dream,' unpermeated, unguessed.

MISCHIEFS OF 'SIDING UP.' There are persons who are never easy unless they are putting your books and papers in order, that is, according to their notions of the matter; and hide things lest they should be lost, where neither the owner nor any body else can find them. This is a sort of magpie faculty. If any thing is left where you want it, it is called making a litter. There is a pedantry in housewifery as in the gravest concerns. Abraham Tucker complained that whenever his maid servant had been in his library, he could not sit comfortably to work again for several days.

PRUNING TREES. It is now a well established truth, that, when a young tree is in a vigorous state of growth, and the wood full of sap, just previous to its having made any hard wood, (say in June or July, in most parts of the United States,) any branch may be taken off, without injury. Therefore, at this stage of existence of the tree, pruning may be safely performed, giving its top that shape it is intended to assume when it attains its full size.

Genius is cradled in poverty, and nurtured and reared among the stern and rugged scenes of existence. She could not bear the pampering of luxury: she thrives best on the coarse fare of industry.

The public will not forget that to us is due the credit of the great and important improvement recently made in the method of inserting Artificial Teeth, both on Gold Plate and Porcel, and also preserving diseased Teeth and stumps in a healthy condition.

Instruction given in relation to the New Method invented by us, and whole sets inserted in the most difficult mouths, for country or travelling Dentists, on our plan, are far more durable and permanent than upon gold plate, secured in the common way, and will never wear resetting. When necessary to mount them on a plate of gold by our method, we extract the sound stumps, preserve the form of the mouth, and secure them so firmly that the patient can eat with them as well as if they were natural teeth, and they will last a whole life-time, and look perfectly natural. SIZE OF THE FEMALE WAIST. Women ought to measure from twenty-seven to twenty-nine inches round the waist, but most females do not permit themselves to grow beyond twenty-four. Thousands are laced to twenty-two—some of them less than twenty—and thus by whalebone, wood and steel, the chest is reduced to half its proper size.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, JUNE 17, 1848.

John A. Green, Editor.

THE TREATY. The ratification of the treaty has been confirmed. An official order has been given for the withdrawal of the volunteer forces of the American army from Mexico, and measures adopted for transporting them to points as near their homes as circumstances will permit. The Massachusetts Regiment will embark at Vera Cruz for Boston direct. Arrangements are also made for their prompt payment and honorable discharge.

The old regiment of the regular army will next leave after the embarkation of the volunteers.

CONGRESS. But little business was transacted in either branch on the 9th and 10th. On the 12th inst., in the Senate, Mr. Hamblin of Maine, took his seat. The business was not important. The House passed resolutions for removing the mast and lantern from the dome of the House and discussed the navy bill.

On the 13th, in the Senate, Mr. Hale presented a petition from people of Ohio, asking for the removal of the seat of Government to Cincinnati, in consequence of the slave trade being carried on at Washington. Mr. Webster reported a resolution to amend the naturalization laws, so that children of American parents, born abroad, may be citizens of the United States. Under a strict construction of the present law, they are not citizens. No business of importance was transacted in the House.

On the 14th, the Senate were engaged on the Indian appropriation bill. The House passed a bill for the payment for horses and property lost in the military service. The navy bill was under discussion.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. Among the acts of the late Legislature, is one directing the Treasurer to provide for every town and city in the Commonwealth, the usual series of standard weights and measures, according to an established model now in the Treasurer's office. By former acts, the towns and cities were required to provide themselves with these standards of weight and measurement. The cost of providing by the State will amount to about $50,000.

NIGHT SETTING. The "Friend of Virtue" is down on what it calls "night setting," or courting by the pale rays of the moon, the twinkling of the stars, candle light, etc., as being a means by which the adversary of souls entraps the unwary in his net. All courting, says the "Friend," should be done by broad daylight, like any other clever and reputable business.

TAKE NOTICE. A change has been made in the time of running of the South Braintree afternoon train. See Old Colony Railroad advertisement.

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS. A paper printed at St. Johns says, "we learn from different parts of the country, that the grass is looking uncommonly well, and that potatoes are very forward for the season, and quite free of disease. So far the weather has been highly favorable to the farmer, whose prospects are encouraging."

THE WASHINGTON LIBRARY. A collection of books and pamphlets, once forming a portion of General Washington's Library, has been purchased by some of the citizens of Boston and is to be presented to the Athenaeum.

SHAMEFUL. A company of young men caught a young girl in an out-house, in Xenia, (Ohio,) procured a tub of tar and a bag of feathers, made warm the filthy mixture, and applied it to the female from head to foot, after divesting her of her clothing, and then covered her form with feathers. The poor creature was so roughly handled that death ensued.

FROM MEXICO. Dates from Vera Cruz to the 1st inst. have been received. Gen. Smith had arrived there to superintend the embarkation of troops. The volunteers that had reached there were volunteering to go to Yucatan.

MEALS AND LODGING. The accommodation afforded to persons visiting Boston for partaking of meals, at any hour they choose, in a quiet, central, and pleasant place, at MILLIKEN'S TEMPERANCE RESTAURANT, head of Norfolk Avenue, near of 355 1-2 Washington Street, is highly appreciated by those who are fond of good living and value the economy of time and money. Separate eating saloons are provided for Ladies, which renders his establishment particularly attractive to families.

Lodgings may also be had, in clean Beds and comfortable apartments, for only 25 cents.

A Branch of this celebrated Eating House is located in the rear of 318 Washington Street—south part of the city.

The approbation manifested by the Temperance Public for the efforts of Mr. MILLIKEN, in catering to their appetites, has elicited from him the most grateful acknowledgements, and encouraged him to leave no reasonable means untaken to deserve their good opinion. Visit him when you go to Boston.

THE FESTIVAL. The trial and dedication of the new Niagara Engine passed off very agreeably, last Monday. The Company presented a fine appearance, their new uniform being in good taste—handsome and appropriate. They marched through several streets of this place, with the band of music, and partook of a collation at the store of Mr. Henry A. Ransom, in Franklin Street, previous to taking the cars for Dorchester.

On the arrival of the Company at Dorchester, the Fountain Engine Company of that place gave them a hearty reception and entertainment at their engine house, and after a short time spent in enjoyment of the good things there provided, the new "tub" was taken to the bank of the river, where a series of trials took place which resulted very satisfactory to all concerned—good judges pronouncing her to be "the smartest machine out." We will not speak particularly of the Engine as our citizens will have opportunity to examine her for themselves, but we think her appearance will do credit to both the workmen and the person who superintended the work. The Company then returned to this town in procession, the toils of the march being relieved by the enlivening music of the Band. A collation was served at the Hancock House in Major French's best style—bountiful in supply and unsurpassed in epicurean skill—of which the Company with a large number of guests partook with keen appetites. A letter from Hon. Charles F. Adams, in reply to an invitation to be present, was read by the Clerk, and the following sentiment read by Abraham Bartlett, Esq., which was loudly applauded:

The Engine Companies of Quincy—Powerful, like the waters of Niagara; strong and agile as Tigers; invincible as Granite, and ferocious as Vulcans, may they prove successful in subduing the devouring element.

During the absence of the Company, the ladies of the Centre District had most beautifully decorated the Engine House with evergreen and flowers, and, on repairing thither after the repast, many were the exclamations of admiration and delight at the good taste and beauty of the arrangements elicited from the assembled throng.

The Company separated in good spirits after giving the old tub an honorable discharge, and placing her in a safe keeping.

The Band, on their arrival in town, visited the tomb of the lamented statesman and patriot, John Quincy Adams, and performed a dirge—a heart-felt tribute to the memory of departed worth.

FOREIGN NEWS. The Acadia arrived at Halifax on the 7th and her news was expressed to Boston on Saturday. An insurrection has taken place at Madrid—the British Ambassador has been ordered out of the country. Austria is in utter tumult—the Emperor has fled. In France affairs remain somewhat firm—the National Convention is proceeding with its deliberations—a commission is preparing a constitution. Negotiations for peace are going on between Prussia and Denmark. The cholera has appeared at Moscow and Constantinople. The Poles have experienced serious defeats—the whole continent seems to be politically breaking up.

The British steamer America, Capt. Judkins, arrived at Boston on Wednesday night, having left Liverpool on the 30th ult., making the unprecedented short passage of ten days and eight hours.

The news from the Continent is of a less warlike character.

The most important news from Ireland is, the conviction and transportation of Mr. John Mitchell for the term of fourteen years. His destination is Bermuda, where he is to be placed on the Thames convict hulk and undergo the sentence.

There is not much change in the affairs of France. Louis Napoleon has been ordered to quit Paris. The Committee appointed to draw up the constitution, have decided unanimously upon the expediency of having but one Chamber and a single President, both the result of direct popular election by universal suffrage. Whether the duration of the Chamber and the President is to be three or four years is not determined.

In England, the money market was easy, and the rate of interest moderate.

The cotton market was dull, but easy.

HORRIBLE DEVELOPMENTS. Miss Sarah H. Furber, a factory girl of Manchester, (N. H.) recently disappeared from that place, and it now appears that she was the victim of seduction, and was under the treatment of Dr. McNabb, of Manchester, who performed an operation which caused her death. The body was then placed in a box while warm, brought to Boston by the Doctor himself, and sold to a physician with an assurance that all was right. When the body was taken to a dissecting-room, it was ascertained that there was foul play in the matter, and McNabb was ordered to take it away immediately. He then went to the porter of the Hospital and offered him five dollars to dispose of the body, and suggested the expediency of doing it by cutting it to pieces and throwing it into the vault. To this the porter pretended to consent, but embalmed the body and informed the Police. Dr. McNabb, Horace McNabb, and a portrait painter named Ingalls, were arrested as implicated in the affair. The body was packed in a box, two and a half feet square, and sold for seven dollars.

The examination of the persons charged with the murder was brought to a close on Wednesday. Dr. McNabb was fully committed for trial; Ingalls, the portrait painter, was admitted to bail in the sum of $1500, and Horace McNabb was acquitted.

DRS. WOOD AND BACHE,

Publishers of the United States Dispensary, in Philadelphia, and Professors of Materia Medica and Pharmacy in the University of Pennsylvania, say, experience among regular practitioners would seem to have placed the efficacy of the Sarsaparilla beyond a reasonable doubt. Its most extensive and useful application is to the treatment of secondary diseases, and shattered state of the system which sometimes follows the imprudent use of mercury. There can be no doubt, but it is one of the best Medicines now in use, particularly when it is mixed with the Extract of Tomatoes.

It is often said that all Medicine put up in this form is recommended to cure all complaints which flesh is heir to; but it is not so with this;—but I can recommend with the utmost confidence, and the experience of three or four years, the use of the Sarsaparilla and Tomato Bitters, and I do know that they are a most certain remedy for all complaints arising from Impurities of the Blood, Disarrangement of the Digestive Organs, and Irregularities of the Bowels, and all Bilious affections.

TESTIMONY OF THE DOCTORS IN FAVOR OF WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY.

This certifies that I have recommended the use of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry for diseases of the Lungs, for two years past, and many bottles to my knowledge have been used by my patients, all with beneficial results. In two cases, where it was thought confirmed consumption had taken place, the Wild Cherry effected a cure.

E. BOYDEN, Physician at Exeter Corner. Dr. Bradford Knapp, of Crown Point, N. Y., in a letter dated August 3d, 1845, says: "In the course of my practice in this vicinity, I have tested in some good degree the good qualities of Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry in Pulmonary Complaints, and I now wish to procure a supply of the medicine."

Dr. A. H. Macnair, of Tabor, N. Y., writes under date of Feb. 14, 1847, that he has used Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry in his practice the last eighteen months, and considers it the best preparation of the kind he ever saw, and knows of none so deserving the public patronage.

Dr. Wm. A. Shaw, of Washington, N. C., writes, under date of May 1, 1846, as follows: "I have heard of many cases of decided beneficial effects from its use, especially in Asthma and chronic cough of spasmodic character. I have used Wild Cherry a great deal in practice, and with marked good results in those cases of great nervous mobility, and irritability which physical patients are subject. The combination of these principles in Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry is ingenious and judicious. Medical men are justly distrustful of Patent Medicines in general, but candor must discriminate between outrageous humbugs and nostrums and those medicines which have proved salutary, and in many well attested cases curative."

Dr. Hoffman, Huntington, Pa., cured a child of Asthma with it, after he declared he could do no more with his medicine, and the child must die. Dr. Freiloch, of Southington, N. Y., says he cured Liver Complaint of four years standing, that would not yield to the usual remedies.

Abraham Skillman, M. D. of Boundbrook, N. J., says it is the best medicine for consumption, in every stage, that he has ever known. We must refer you to hundreds of cases, had we room, that would convince all of its great virtue.

WINNING A COQUETTE.

Where is the heart that has not bowed
A slave, eternal love, to thee;
Look on the cold, the gay, the proud,
And is there one among them free?

'What! still at your books? Why, it is time you were on your way to the party,' said a classmate of mine as he abruptly entered my room one day soon after I had become a member of — College.

'Perhaps it is, but I do not intend going.'
'Not going! Why the whole class will be there.'

'In that case there will be enough without me, besides, you know, I am an entire stranger and don't care much about going into society while I remain here.'

'Nonsense! that is just the reason for your joining us to night. All the pretty girls in the village will be there, and —'

'Not much of an inducement that, as I've no great idea of falling in love, just yet.'

'Nor have any of us; but a little flirtation now and then is an excellent remedy for the blues. We have just the subject for that—one of the greatest coquettes in the world. She has jilted half the class already. I saw her eye on you last Sunday in church. She has marked you for her next victim, no doubt.'

'Indeed! I'm highly honored to be selected as a victim for a coquette before I have been here a week. I think I must join you to-night, just to see this "Conqueror in Cupid's wars." Call for me in half an hour and I'll be ready.'

Punctual to the moment, my friend joined me, and we sallied forth, arm-in-arm, on our way to the pleasant mansion of the Mathews.

'Pray, who is the beauty, Pennell, for coquettes are always beauties, I believe?' enquired I, as we sauntered slowly along.

'Her name is Mary Redington. She is a niece of our hostess for the evening, with whom she has resided for some time past. Her mother is dead, and her father is a member of the American embassy to the Court of St. James. But here we are, and you must learn the rest from her own lips, as I warrant you will have a goodly share of her attentions to-night.' Before there was time for further words we found ourselves in the reception room of our entertainers. After paying our compliments to our hostess we passed on to the drawing-room, where were assembled the beauty and fashion of the town.

'Who is that beautiful girl from whom Colcord and Hawes have been trying to win smiles?' enquired I, as we sauntered slowly through the splendidly lighted rooms.

'None other than Mary Redington. Come she has recognized us—I must introduce you.'

Before I had time to reply, the introduction was over, and I was presented with the belle of the evening. Imperceptibly we glided into conversation, and I found that, though a coquette she might be, she was a girl of no ordinary powers. There was an airiness in her words and manner too, that tended to weaken the impression I had received from my friend, and rendered me desirous of continuing an acquaintance began almost against my will.

'How liked you the party and Mary Redington?' enquired my friend, as we took our way to our rooms after the entertainment broke up.

'The party was very brilliant, and speaks well for the tone of society in your village,' replied I.

'But what of Mary?'
'Why she is quite a passable girl,' replied I, carelessly.

'A passable girl, ha! ha! ha! and yet Charles Hamilton has been worshipping at her shrine all the evening. Why man, you are the most devoted admirer she has had for this many a month. Your classmates and all the village beaux will be at sword's points with you, if you take our belles by storm in this manner.'

'I was not aware that my attention had been overpointed this evening. However, I will be more guarded in future, so let us change the subject.'

The unenviable reputation which Mary had gained of being a heartless coquette, prevented my seeking her society as often as I otherwise might have done. The village gossips would recount her almost numberless conquests, especially among the students of the College. Many a fascinated sophomore had thought more of her than of his studies, and received for his trouble, a coquette's smile and his tutor's frown.

Mary was indeed beautiful and full of that graceful light heartedness, which more than beauty bewitches one, but which is often, alas! found united with heartless coquetry. For a time I was inclined to believe that what seemed the general opinion was true. But as I met her in society, and had opportunities of judging of her character, I could not but believe, that a form so lovely enshrined a heart, too susceptible of the purest and holiest passion that mortals know.

Gradually our slight acquaintance became intimacy, yet of the same general character with others of my friends who ever found a welcome at her uncle's hospitable mansion. We rode, walked, and read together, yet she did the same with others. One week, my attentions seemed to claim the preference, the next, another was more fortunate. But amid all her apparent fickleness, there was that in her manner, and in her general tone of character, which convinced me that she had yet to love, and that when she did, it would be with a fervor of which few are capable.

Thus passed the last year of my college life. The evening previous to my departure from H —, I visited Mary. We strolled out upon the banks of the river, where we had spent many an hour in idle wanderings during the past year. For once her usual vivacity had deserted her, and our walk, on this eve, was unlike the many which had preceded it, almost a silent one.

'See how smooth the surface of the river is. Here is a boat, come let us cross over to yonder grove, where we have spent so many pleasant hours.'

'But it may be dark before we can return—and then —' she paused.

'Then we will return by the bridge,' replied I. 'It is a delightful evening, and the last, too, that I shall spend in your pleasant village for the present.'

'Then you will return,' she enquired, with an earnestness that startled even herself.

'That is uncertain; perhaps I may at some distant day—let us enjoy the present.'

She made no reply—but placing her hand in mine, permitted me to seat her in the boat. A few strokes of the oar and we gained the opposite shore. Leaving the boat, we strolled through the beautiful grove that borders on the eastern bank of the K —, till the last rays of the setting sun had disappeared behind the western hills, and twilight was slowly gathering over the scene. The bright stars shone out one by one in the clear blue vault of heaven. The pale moon shed its dim light upon the earth, yet still we lingered in that beautiful retreat, conversing of the past or dwelling upon the beauties of some one of the favorite authors we had read together. At length, aroused by the deepening twilight, we turned our steps homeward.

'We return by the bridge, do we not?' she enquired as we approached the boat.

'If you prefer; the distance is considerable, however—perhaps the walk will be too fatiguing.'

'Oh, no,' she replied—I like a long walk sometimes.'

A few vain attempts at conversation, and we again walked on in silence. We had nearly reached her home, when she hesitatingly inquired—

'May I ask you a question?'
'Yes, two if you wish,' I replied somewhat piqued at her previous reserve.

'Who is Ellen C —?'

'A cousin of mine, and a pretty one, too.'

'You correspond with her?'
'Yes, and hope to see her soon.'

'She is a lovely creature; such an one. As poets love to dream of, artists paint.'

We had now reached the grounds enclosing her father's residence. Instead of taking the path direct to the house, we had, unobserved by me, taken one leading to a small arbor, where we had frequently spent an hour in idle converse, or in reading some favorite author.

'I am fatigued; let us rest awhile,' said Mary, as we reached it. We entered. I observed on the seat a volume of Tasso's Jerusalem which I had given her. I took it up. Her glove was lying between the leaves, opening to a particular passage—a favorite of mine. Apparently without noticing, I referred to the pages which I had been reading during the day, and then spoke of some new publications which I had just received, offering to send them to her perusal.

'But you will call again before you leave?'
'I think not. My uncle's carriage will arrive in the morning, and we shall leave as soon as the commencement is over.'

'But you can call for a moment, at least.'

'Do you wish it?'
She looked up reproachfully. A tear stood trembling in her eye. My arm encircled her waist, and gently drew her to me. Our lips met—the first long kiss of love was given, and her head sunk upon my bosom. We breathed no vow—but that moment has been to me the holiest one in memory.

A laughing, fair-haired little Mary, the very image of her coquettish mother, is standing by my side, wistfully looking into my face as I write, then playfully resting her head on my knee, coaxing me from finishing this sketch to a game of romps with her. The footsteps of her mother, too, more staid and matronly than when we rambled together on the banks of the K —, is approaching the library, so I must now draw to a close, wishing you, gentle reader, as happy a lot as that of your friend,
CHARLES HAMILTON.

HOW HE BLOWED HIMSELF.

Bill Pipkin hadn't been married very long, and hadn't quite got out of the habit of taking a little punch at drinking frolics with his old friends on particular occasions. He was first rate at making excuses for staying out at night now and then; he was terribly pressed with business, and as he took very good care never to come home cross-legged, his wife never suspected anything, and all went on very well. One night, however, Bill got rather more than he could carry straight, but he didn't find it out till he was on his way home. He wouldn't have Susan know he was in such a situation for all the world, and he began thinking, as well as he could with his head spinning round so, what was best to be done to keep her from finding him out.

'Hic—I've got it, "zactly," said he—('hic) Susan knows I'm ('hic) terribly (f-fond of m-milk, and ('hic) that'll fix all right—so ('hic) sh-she'll never sus-suspect nothin', poor gal.'

Home he went practising straight walking all the way, and studying in his mind how he should talk straight, so that Susan would not find him out.

When he found the latch, which was on the wrong side of the door, which opened the wrong way too, he felt round in the dark for more doors than were ever in the house before, and into ever so many shaped rooms till he found the pantry, where he expected to find some milk. He had no very clear idea as to where it ought to be; so after feeling about in every place but the right one, he came to the conclusion to go up to his room, and ask his wife where it was. The stairs seemed to be turned up side down, and the bed-room had changed places with the kitchen, and he made out at last to find the door.

After clearing his throat, and saying over his speech, so that he would not make any mistake, he opened the door, and leaning against the door-post, listened to hear if his wife was awake. She was sound asleep.

'All the better for that,' thought he. 'Susan! Susan!' said he, very low and plain.

'Eh?' said Susan, just waking out of a doze. 'Is that you come home, my dear, so late?'—

'Susan! Susan!' said Bill, not paying any attention to what she said—his head being full of milk; 'Susan!'

'What, my dear?'

'Is there any milk in the house?'

'Yes, dear—but what in the world—'

'Susan! Susan!'

'What, dear?'

'What is the milk?'

'In the pantry, in the dining room, dear. But you'd better come to bed now, it's so late.'

Bill didn't say a word, but took some terrible long steps in the dark. He found the dining room again, and the pantry, but he couldn't find the milk any where. After trying for about five minutes, he went up stairs again, and leaning against the door to steady himself asked his wife again—

'Susan! Susan!' said he very emphatically. 'Eh—what?' said she waking up again.

'Is there any milk in the house?'

'I told you there was some milk in the pantry, dear—'

Down went Bill again. This time he felt every where, and upset every thing, making a terrible racket among the crockery; but not a drop of milk could he find.

'Cuss the milk!' said he; 'what could they put it?'

In a minute he was at the bed-room door again.

'Susan! Susan!' said he.

Susan snuffed the snore short off in the middle. 'What?' said he, rather cross this time.

'Is there any milk in the house?'

'Yes, I told you!'

'Well, what is it?' said he.

'I told you, on the shelf—in the pantry—in the dining room,' said Susan, breaking it off into short mouthfuls of pretty loud Italian.

That rather scared Bill, and put him off his guard.

'Well, Susan,' said he, 'is it tied up in any thin' or is it layin' about loose?'

That was enough—the sack was out of the bag, and no help for it. Mrs. Pipkin was bright awake in a minute, and the way Bill got a 'Cuddle' that night was enough to sober the drunkenest husband in creation. He never got corned again—and it was more than a year afterwards before he could drink milk in his coffee, when Susan was at the table.

The etiquette of the day is to keep your countenance, but not your word.

ADVICE TO HUSBANDS.

A woman ought to have her own purse great or small, whichever it may be. Ten, fifty, a hundred or a thousand dollars, according to circumstances, but her own, for which she accounts to herself. Would you know why, you gentlemen who make your wives account for pins and farthing? Why, most especially and particularly for your own sublime peace, and prosperity. You do not think so! Well, then—a maid servant knocks down a tea cup, a servant breaks a glass, or suddenly tea-pot, cup and glass, all at once fall in pieces and nobody has broken them; and so on. The wife who has not her own purse, but who must replace the cup and glass, goes to her husband, relates the misfortune, and begs for a little to make good the damage. He scolds the servants—his wife, who ought to look after the servants. 'Money, indeed?—a little money—money does not grow out of the ground, nor yet is it rained down from heaven—many small brooks make a great river.' And such like. At last he gives a little money, and remains often in a very ill humor. Again, if a wife have her own little purse, then such vexations never come near him. Children, servants, misfortune remain the same; but no disorder is remarked; all is made right as at first; all is order; and the head of the house, who, perhaps, with the greatest ease could lay down a thousand dollars at once, need not for a few pence, squeezed out at different times, lose the equipoise of his temper, which is as invaluable to the whole house as it is to himself. And dost thou reckon as nothing, thou unfeeling nabob, those little surprises, those little birthday and namesday pleasures, with which thy wife can give herself the delight of surprising thee—those thousand small pleasures which unexpected as falling stars, gleam like them on the heaven of home, and which must all come to thee from the affections of thy wife, through a little money, which thou must give to her in the gross, in order to receive again in the small, with rich interest of comfort and happiness? Now, is it clear yet? To every true woman's heart it is indescribably delightful to give—to feel itself alive in the satisfaction and happiness of others; it is the sunshine of the heart, and it is more needed here in the cold north, perhaps, than elsewhere. Besides, this little freedom is so refreshing.

'THE FIRST FAMILIES.'

An Illinois sucker took a great dislike to a foolish young Virginian who, a few weeks since, was fellow passenger with him on one of our steam boats. The Virginian was continually combing his hair, brushing his clothes, or dusting his boots—to all of which movements the sucker took exceptions, as being what he termed, 'a little too darned nice, by half.' He finally drew up his chair beside the Virginian, and began—

'What might you be, stranger?'

'I am from Virginia, sir,' politely answered the gent.

'From old Varginny, I s'pose?' says the sucker.

'Yes, sir, old Virginia,' was the reply.

'You air pretty high up in the pictures thar, I suppose,' continued the first.

'I don't know what you mean by that remark, sir,' says the Virginian.

'Oh, nuthin', says the sucker, 'but that you are des'p'rate rich, and hev ben brought up right nice.'

'If the information will gratify you, in any way,' says the gent, patronizingly, smoothing down his hair, 'I belong to one of the first families.'

'Oh! in course,' answered the Sucker. 'Well, stranger, bein' as you belong to the first, I'll just give you two of the fattest shoats in all Illinois if you'll only find me a feller that belongs to one of the second Virginny families.'

'You want to quarrel with me, sir,' says the Virginian.

'No, stranger, not an atom,' answered the Sucker, 'but I never seed one of the second family, and I'd gin suthin to get a sight of one of 'em. I know you are one of the first, 'cause you look just like John Randolph.'

This mollified the Virginian—the hint of a resemblance to the statesman was flattering to his feelings, and he accordingly acknowledged relationship to the orator.

'He, you know, was a descendant of the Ing'nal gals Pocahontas.'

'You are right, sir,' answered the other.

'Well, stranger,' said the Sucker, 'do you know that is another queer thing allys puzzles me, and it's this—I never seed a Virginnyin that didn't claim to be either descended from an Ing'nal, John Randolph, or a nigger.'

'We need not add that the Sucker rolled off his chair—suddenly! They were separated and kept apart until the Sucker got off at a landing near his home. As he stepped ashore he caught sight of the Virginian on the upper deck, and hailed him at once with—

'I say, old Varginny, remember—two fat shoats for the first feller you find that belongs to the second Virginny family.'

THE WIFE. A pleasant, cheerful wife is as a rainbow set in the sky, when her husband's mind is tossed with storms and tempests; but a dissatisfied and fretful wife, in the hour of trouble, is like one of those fiends who delight to torture lost spirits.

GOOD AND BAD LUCK. I may here, as well as anywhere, impart the secret of what is called good and bad luck. There are men who, supposing Providence to have an implacable spite against them bemoan in the poverty of a wretched old age, the misfortunes of their lives. Luck for ever ran against them, and for others. One, with a good profession, lost his luck in the river, when he idled away his time a-fishing, when he should have been in the office. Another with a good trade, perpetually burnt up his luck by his hot temper, which provoked all his employers to leave him. Another, with a lucrative business, lost his luck by avarice, diligence to everything but his business. Another, who steadily followed his trade, as steadily followed his bottle. Another, who was honest and constant in his work, erred by perpetual misjudgments—he lacked discretion. Hundreds lose their luck by endorsing, by sanguine speculations, by trusting fraudulent men, and by dishonest gains. A man never has good luck who has a bad wife. I never knew an early-rising, hard-working, prudent man, careful of his earnings, and strictly honest, who complained of bad luck. A good character, good habits, and iron industry, are impregnable to the assaults of all the ill luck that fools ever dreamt of. But when I see a tatterdemalion creeping out of the tavern late in the forenoon, with his hands stuck into his pockets, the rim of his hat turned up, and the crown knocked in, I know he has had bad luck—for the worst of all luck is to be a sluggard, a knave, or a tippler.

A HINT TO AMUSEMENT DENOUNCERS. There are people who would say, 'Labor is not all, we do not object to the cessation of labor—a mere provision for bodily ends; but we fear the lightness and vanity of what you call recreation.' Do these people take heed of the swiftness of thought—the impatience of thought? What will the great mass of men be thinking of, if they are 'taught to shun amusements and the thoughts of amusement? If any sensuality is left open to them, they will think of that; if not sensuality, then avarice or ferocity for 'the cause of God,' as they would call it. People who have had nothing else to amuse them, have been very apt to indulge themselves in the excitement of persecuting their fellow-creatures. Our nation, the northern part of it especially, is given to believe in the sovereign efficacy of dullness. To be sure, dullness and solid vice are apt to go hand in hand; but then, according to our notions, dullness is in itself so good a thing—almost a religion. Now, if ever a people required to be amused, it is we sad-hearted Anglo Saxons. Heavy eaters, hard thinkers often given up to a peculiar melancholy of our own, with a climate that for months together would frown away mirth if it could—many of us with very gloomy thoughts about our hereafter—if ever there were a people who should avoid increasing their dullness by all work and no play, we are that people. 'They took their pleasures sadly,' says Froissart, 'after their fashion.' We need not ask of what nation Froissart was speaking.

WEAPONS OF ANIMALS. To avoid death and escape pain, the different animal species have received different material and immaterial instruments. Some, strong and endowed with courage, oppose resistance to their enemies, and are provided with powerful arms, defences, teeth, horns, claws, galvanic piles, poisonous stings, etc. Others, weak and timid, but crafty, escape from their enemies by flight, and are consequently furnished with rapid wings, agile feet, threads to uphold them in the air. Some are dyed with the color of the plants upon which they feed, of the trunks of trees against which they cling, and owing to their absolute immobility during danger, they escape the animal which hunts them. Many are protected by scales, shells, feathers, hair, prickles; others are furnished with reservoirs containing mephitic odors, corrosive liquors, black dyes. These latter diffuse their coloring matter in the water in which they live, render it opaque, and by this means escape the pursuit of their enemy.

WOULD YOU MARRY. The following doubtful advice was given to his readers by a Wisconsin editor: 'If a man feels very much like getting married, yet imagines that he ought not, the best remedy is to help one of his neighbors move a houseful of furniture, or borrow about nine of his children for three days, and heat them cry. If that fails, build a fire of damp wood, and when the smoke in the room is the thickest, hire a woman to fret and scold for about two hours. If he can stand all these things he had better get married the next day, give his wife the pants, and be silent partner in the great firm of matrimony. The remedy is severe, but as every man is liable to these things after he pokes himself up, it would be no great harm to try it before.'

DRESSING WOUNDS. Nine times out of ten, a wound will heal quicker if done up in its own blood, than in any other way. As for a burn, whatever will entirely exclude the air the quickest, is the best. Cotton will do this. So will oiled silk, if stuck down at the edges by any kind of sticking salve. Put nothing on a burn to heal it. Nature will soon do that, when the air is excluded, and the pain will almost immediately cease.

THE Pains of the Heart, and the Pains of the Head, are the most common of all the ailments of the human body. They are the result of a disordered state of the system, and are the most difficult to cure. The following is a list of the most common remedies for these ailments, and the manner of using them.

HOW TO SET OUT CABBAGE PLANTS IN HOT WEATHER.

MR. GREEN—I have recently picked up the following item of information from a gentleman who has, for years, practised upon the plan he recommends. Hoping it may reach some who are willing to try an experiment which costs nothing, and thus relieve themselves of the miserable necessity of burying their plants with huge burdens, and the like, I send you a statement of the new process of transplanting.

Take all the leaves from the plant except the last, which is next to the heart. If the last leaf is larger than a dollar, take off a part of that also. Then set the plant in the usual way; water moderately—and of one hundred plants, ninety nine will stand through any weather, without covering, and of very little consequence what time in the day you transplant, so far as perfect success is concerned.

During the late hot weather, I have set out over one hundred plants in this way, and not one has failed.

If any one cannot readily discover why this process is superior to the common one, let him try it, and he will reason about it afterwards. J. W. G.

THE WHIG CANDIDATE.

MR. EDITOR—I have considered the nomination of Gen. Taylor by the Whig National Convention, with the strong desire to respect that nomination if I could consistently with self respect and a proper regard to party principles and the rights of the Northern section of our Union. But upon a careful review of the principles of the whig party, as promulgated by our leading journals, and myself obliged, by every dictate of reason and common sense, to lift my voice against it. One of the doctrines advocated by the whig party, is that of a protective tariff—a tariff that will enable the American manufacturer to compete successfully with those of foreign lands,—and this I consider to be a leading principle of the party, and one which should never be lost sight of, and yet, not the slightest evidence has ever been exhibited that Gen. Taylor is in favor of a protective tariff; the nearest approach to such evidence being the assertion of Mr. Conrad of Louisiana, who said that he could not speak on particular subjects but he believed Gen. Taylor was in favor of protection. Is it safe to rely on so vague a statement in a matter in which every whig ought to be deeply interested? And what, again, is the opinion of Gen. Taylor in relation to internal improvements, distribution of the public lands, a national bank, the Mexican war, and other subjects which have been so fully discussed by the public press, and on which the whig party have so decided an opinion? Can any one make an answer, or if an answer can be made why is it withheld? Have the whig party become so broken up that they have no distinct principles and for that reason lay down no platform on which all may find a strong and solid foothold? Has it come to that point, that such men as Clay, Webster, Crittenden, McLean, Berrien, Cloat, and other distinguished gentlemen, whose names are everywhere inscribed upon whig banners, shall be thrust aside, and a man, hitherto and honest though he may be, taken up, who may be elected, so far as we know, sustain measures and entertain doctrines which have been considered by the whig party not only as radically wrong but fatal to the welfare and interest of this great republic? If the whig party have any principles to maintain, and that they have high and honorable principles not even their opponents will deny, ought they not to have selected a man who is an advocate of those principles, and one who openly and avowedly sustains them? I know not by what course of reasoning the nomination can be sustained, except it be on the ground of its availability—and on that ground the nomination of Lewis Cass might equally well be supported by the whig party, for who of us knows that the opinions of Gen. Taylor do not coincide with those of Gen. Cass? In 1840, availability was tried, and what was the result? A vice-president was selected for the purpose of electing Virginia in behalf of the whigs—a gentleman whose opinions were known to be in opposition to some of the whig doctrines—yet for availability he was selected, and when by the act of God he became the President of these United States, and those principles, which, like the North Star to the mariner, had been as a guide in darkness were disregarded, it should teach a lesson not to be forgotten—a lesson written on the hearts of all to avoid an error fraught with such fatal results. I pass over the fact that Gen. Taylor gave his advice to the War Department to order his troops to Corpus Christi, which order was, as argued by Mr. Webster, the cause of the Mexican war—I pass over the fact that Gen. Taylor is a citizen of a slave State and a slaveholder. I allude not, as an argument, to the insult which Massachusetts received from the Southern States by their withholding their votes in the Convention from her distinguished son—for Mr. Webster received not a solitary vote south of Mason's and Dixon's line, which fact shows the prejudice of the whigs of the South against the whigs of the North, and an abiding determination on their part to prevent even the chance of a distinguished officer from being occupied by a citizen of New England. These circumstances, though galling to the feelings, might be disregarded were the candidate of the whig party a whig in principle and one that would sustain the measures and doctrines which the whig party have ever sustained, but will he do it? I doubt it, and from a careful examination into the reasons why Gen. Taylor received the nomination, I can see no other than that he was a slaveholder and slaveholder. Both of which reasons I repudiate with contempt. TRUE BLUE.

The planet Mercury, rarely to be seen with the naked eye, on account of its proximity to the sun, is now visible, about an hour after sunset, in the W. N. W. It is of a reddish hue, and appears like a star of the first magnitude. The planet Mars is also visible in the Southwest. Jupiter shines at this season with unwonted brilliancy.

The Princess Sophia, daughter of George III, recently died in London. By her death the treasury is relieved of a yearly tax of $75,000.

Our females are so fond of hugging and squeezing, that before they have become united to a man, they get a machine stuck full of whelons and laced with a cord, with which they squeeze themselves so violently, as to be nearly cut in the middle.

Every man who bets, even so much as a dime, on the Election of President, or on the result in any State or locality where he is to vote, is deprived of his vote by a law of New York.

An awful murder was committed in Moyamensing Philadelphia prison, by an insane mute by the name of Bew. A man who was placed in the cell to prevent Bew from doing himself harm, was literally cut to pieces.

SINGULAR ACCIDENT. Last Wednesday afternoon, as the wife of Mr. Isaac Bass, of this town, was in the act of adjusting a clothes-line around a tree, she was struck just above the ankle joint by a stone weighing twenty-three pounds which was thrown in blasting from one of the granite ledges more than half a mile distant. Her ankle joint was dislocated—one of the bones broken, and the flesh badly mutilated. She is as comfortable as can be expected from the severity of the wound and the extreme heat.

The stone in its circuitous route must have traversed more than a mile, and struck with such force as to be completely buried in the ground. Mr. Bass' residence is at such a distance from the quarry that no one dreamed of an accident of this kind, and the like again may never occur.

ACCIDENT. Last Thursday afternoon, the gravel train from Neponset Village, met with an accident by the breaking of an axle-tree, and several cars were much broken. The laborers on the train fortunately escaped without material injury.

WASHINGTONIAN JUBILEE. The Norfolk County Washingtonian Total Abstinence Society will hold a grand Mass Meeting and Convention on the ensuing anniversary of our National Independence, at Foxboro'. Fay, of Roxbury, Daniel Allen, Jr., of Walpole, James Dorr, of Dorchester, R. K. Potter, of Boston, and by other active friends of the cause. Tickets to the Collation fifty cents.

RAILROAD FARE. Hunt's Merchant's Magazine gives a list of sixty-five railroad companies in the United States, with their respective length, fare through, and cents per mile, showing "that the railroad companies adopting the lowest rates of fare, pay the largest dividend. An unanswerable argument in favor of low fares.

HEAVY DAMAGES. A trial for "breach of promise" came on lately in Mississippi, and resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff, and $10,000 damages! Proof was elicited that the defendant not only refused to comply with his promise, but accompanied his refusal with disrespectful language of the most aggravated description, which was calculated to blast the lady's reputation for life.

DYSENTERY OR BOWEL COMPLAINT. Those having this complaint, says the New York Sun, will find an almost unfailing remedy, by procuring a small piece of the root of genuine Turkey Rhubarb, and chewing a piece about the size of a cherry pit, once or twice through the day. If a genuine article is procured, the remedy is almost sure, in whatsoever stage the disease may be.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE AT LAWRENCE. A fire broke out on Friday night of last week, in a stable in Lawrence, which was entirely consumed, together with seventeen valuable horses, ten tons of hay, thirty bushels grain, and a number of carriages and harnesses. Loss about $6,000. Insured for $2,000. Two small tenements adjoining, occupied by Irish families, were also consumed. Three men were asleep in the stable at the time and barely escaped with their lives.

AID TO YUCATAN. New Orleans papers state that a volunteer expedition for Yucatan is fitting out from Vera Cruz, and that J. H. Peoples, Esq., late editor of the American Star, in the City of Mexico, seems to be at the head of the movement. Large numbers of our soldiers are volunteering. Another account also state that the Government of Mexico intend sending troops to Yucatan, and that our soldiers are volunteering. The Americans and Mexicans will be enlisted under the same banner.

In the House, the Clerk announced the illness of Mr. Winthrop, and Mr. Burt of South Carolina, was appointed temporary chairman for the week. A joint resolution was reported for erecting a granite monument to the memory of John Quincy Adams, in the congressional burying grounds. The civil and diplomatic appropriation bill was discussed.

On the 21st, the Senate passed the Indian appropriation bill. An uniform Postage bill,—letters three cents, papers one cent, prepaid,—was introduced. The House passed the bill for the extension of the pension law.

On the 22d, in the Senate, a resolution to adjourn on the 17th of July, was debated without any question being taken. The House passed the bill amending the naturalization law, the appropriation bill, and the adulterated drug bill.

BRINGING HOME TROOPS. Ten or twelve vessels have been chartered in New York, and nearly as many in Boston, to bring home troops. It is estimated that it will require about one hundred, the withdrawal of which from the general business will probably cause a rise in freight.

LATEST FROM MEXICO. Late advices state that the troops are moving towards the coast. Gen. Patterson's division, including the Massachusetts Regiment, left the city on the 30th. Gen. Butler has put a stop to the Yucatan expedition. Herrera has been elected President of Mexico. Mr. Sevier announced to the Mexican Government that Mr. Clifford would be the resident Minister in Mexico from the United States.

MARTINIQUE. There has been a revolt among the blacks of this Island. They were ravaging the whole Island and murdering the inhabitants, at the last accounts. Martinique and Guadaloupe belong to the French, and the abolition of slavery took place there on the 24th of May, by decree of the provisional government. Precautionary measures were taken by the Governor of Guadaloupe to protect life and property.

MORE DEATHS FROM EATING CLAMS. A Gloucester paper states that a family of six persons residing near that place, partook of a clam chowder, on Tuesday, and in twenty minutes the whole began to feel the effects of poison. The youngest, a lad of six years, died before medical aid could be obtained. The rest are likely to recover, although severely affected.

LOUIS PHILIPPE. It is said to be the present intention of this personage to settle in Spain, on account of his wife's health, which is very feeble, and the climate of England does not agree with her. He says he is so disgusted with human nature, that he would follow the example of Charles IX, and go to a nunnery at once, if it was not for his family.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS &amp; IMITATIONS.

The unparalleled and astonishing efficacy of Dr. WISTAR'S BALM OF WILD CHERRY, in all the diseases for which it is recommended, curing many cases after the skill of the best physicians was unavailing, has effected a large and increasing demand for it. This fact has caused many unprincipled counterfeiters and imitators to palm off spurious mixtures, of similar name and appearance, with the genuine Balm. Some are called Syrup of Wild Cherry, "Balm of Spikenard," "Wild Cherry Compound," &c. Another, "Wester's Balm of Wild Cherry," misspelling the name, and forging certificates to resemble those of the true Balm. "Dr. Wistar's Balm of Wild Cherry," is the only genuine. The rest merely imitate the name of the original, while they possess none of its virtues.

LOOK WELL TO THE MARKS OF THE GENUINE.

The genuine Balm is put up in bottles, with the words "Dr. Wistar's Balm of Wild Cherry, Philadelphia" blown in the glass; each bottle bearing a label on the front, with the signature of H. WISTAR, M. D. This will be enveloped hereafter with a new wrapper; copyright secured, 1844; on which will always appear the written signature of "H. WISTAR." Be careful and get the genuine—DR. WISTAR'S BALM OF WILD CHERRY. None genuine unless signed by H. WISTAR. Address all orders to SETH W. FOWLE, Boston, Mass.

DRS. WOOD AND BACHE.

Publishers of the United States Dispensary, in Philadelphia, and Professors of Materia Medica and Pharmacy in the University of Pennsylvania, say, experience among regular practitioners would seem to have placed the efficacy of the Sarsaparilla beyond a reasonable doubt. Its most extensive and useful application is to the treatment of secondary diseases, and shattered state of the system which sometimes follows the imprudent use of mercury. There can be no doubt but it is one of the best Medicines now in use, particularly when it is mixed with the Extract of Tomatoes.

It is often said that all Medicine put up in this form is recommended to cure all complaints which flesh is heir to; but it is not so with this;—but I can recommend with the utmost confidence, and the experience of three or four years, the use of the Sarsaparilla and Tomato Bitters, and I do know that they are a most certain remedy for all complaints arising from Impurities of the Blood, Disarrangement of the Digestive Organs, and Irregularities of the Bowels, and all Bilious affections.

FOURTH OF JULY.

The approaching anniversary of Independence will be celebrated by the Managers of the Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society, in special connection with the friends in Plymouth County, at an Anti-Slavery gathering at ABINGTON. The well known beautiful Grove, near the Town Hall, has been engaged for this purpose. Every arrangement will be made to contribute to the value of the occasion, and the pleasure of those who attend. Distinguished friends of the cause will be present, and a portion of the time will be given to addresses. The plan of refreshments will be adopted as at once the most convenient and least laborious. Refreshments, however, will be for sale at the Grove by one or more individuals.

We have the pleasure of saying that the Old Colony Railroad Company have engaged to transport passengers to and from the Abington Grove on that day, at a reduction of one half from the regular fare. Seats for this purpose will be for sale at the Anti-Slavery Office, 21 Cornhill, Boston, and by Bourne Spooner, Plymouth.

The Old Colony Anti-Slavery Society will hold a general meeting at the same time and place, for the choice of officers, etc.

The Committee of Arrangements for the Fourth of July meeting consists of Francis Jackson and Samuel May, Jr., of Boston; Bourne Spooner, of Plymouth; Henry H. Brigham, Lewis Ford, Edwidge Sprague, Briggs Arnold, and Samuel Dyer, of Abington. We hope to see thousands present. For the Committee, SAMUEL MAY, Jr.

Beware of Counterfeits and Imitations.

The unparalleled and astonishing efficacy of Dr. WISTAR'S BALM OF WILD CHERRY, in all the diseases for which it is recommended, curing many cases after the skill of the best physicians was unavailing, has effected a large and increasing demand for it. This fact has caused many unprincipled counterfeiters and imitators to palm off spurious mixtures, of similar name and appearance, for the genuine Balm. Some are called "Syrup of Wild Cherry," "Balm of Spikenard," "Wild Cherry Compound," &c. Another, "Wester's Balm of Wild Cherry," misapplying the name, and forging certificates to resemble those of the true Balm. "Dr. Wistar's Balm of Wild Cherry" is the only genuine. The rest merely imitate the name of the original, while they possess none of its virtues.

LOOK WELL TO THE MARKS OF THE GENUINE. The genuine Balm is put up in bottles, with the words "Dr. Wistar's Balm of Wild Cherry, Philadelphia, Pa." blown in the glass, each bottle bearing a label on the front, with the signature of H. WISTAR, M. D. This will be developed hereafter with a new wrapper; copyright secured, 1844; on which will always appear the written signature of "H. BUTTS."

Be careful and get the genuine DR. WISTAR'S BALM OF WILD CHERRY. None genuine unless signed by H. BUTTS. Address all orders to NETH W. FOWLE, Boston, Mass.

DRS. WOOD AND BACHE.

Publishers of the United States Dispensary, in Philadelphia, and Professors of Materia Medica and Pharmacy in the University of Pennsylvania, say, experience among the regular practitioners would seem to have placed the efficacy of the Sarsaparilla beyond a reasonable doubt. Its most extensive and successful application is to the treatment of secondary diseases, and shattered state of the system which sometimes follows the imprudent use of mercury. There can be no doubt, but it is one of the best Medicines now in use, particularly when it is mixed with the Extract of Tomatoes.

It is often said that all Medicine put up in this form is recommended to cure all complaints which flesh is heir to; but it is not so with this;—but I can recommend of three or four years, the use of the Sarsaparilla and Tomato Bitters, and I do know that they are a most certain remedy for all complaints arising from Impurities of the Blood, Disarrangement of the Digestive Organs, and Irregularities of the Bowels, and all Bilious affections.

POETRY.

THE MOSQUITO HUNT.

Not a sound was heard but a horrible hum
As around our chamber we hurried,
In search of the insect whose trumpet and drum
Our delectable slumbers had worried.

We sought for it darkly at dead of night,
Our coverd carefully turning
By the struggling moonbeam's misty light,
And our candle dimly burning.

No useless garment confined our breast,
But in simple night dress and slippers,
We wandered about like spirits distressed,
Or the sails of piratical skippers.

Short and few were the words we let fall,
Lest the noise should disturb the mosquito,
But we steadfastly gazed on the whitewashed wall
And thought how we had been bit, O!

We thought as we rose from our restless bed,
And relinquished our restless pillow,
That we'd not retire till the critter was dead,
And we were secure from his bill, O.

But half an hour seemed to elapse,
Ere we met with the wretch that had bit us,
And raising our boot gave some terrible slap,
That made the mosquito's quiver.

Quickly and gladly we turned from the dead,
And left him all smothered and gory,
We blew out the candle and jumped into bed,
Determined to tell you a story.

FAR, FAR AT SEA.

Star of peace, to wanderers weary,
Bright the beams that smile on me,
Cheer the sailor's vision dreary,
Far, far at sea.

Star of hope, gleam on the billow,
Bless the soul that sighs for thee;
Bless the sailor's lonely pillow,
Far, far at sea.

Star of faith, when winds are mocking
All his toil, he flies to thee;
Save him on the billows rocking,
Far, far at sea.

Star Divine, O safely guide him,
Bring the wanderer home to thee;
Sore temptations long have tried him,
Far, far at sea.

THE ROSE AND THE LILY.

A lovely Rose and Lily growing
In a garden side by side,
The Rose, with love's own radiance glowing,
Turned and said in boastful pride:
"Wherefore raise thy head so high,
Since not half so fair as I?"

Sure all the magic charms that hover
O'er the lips of maiden fair,
In my bosom's depths the lover
Fondly seeking, findeth there;
On her dewy lips repose
All the glories of the Rose."

The Lily turned to speak, soft smiling,
With a proud yet gentle grace,
For well she knew the charm beguiling
Of her pure and virgin face;
"The whiteness of the maiden's breast,
Of beauty is the strictest test."

That moment through the garden bounding,
Comes the treasure of my life,
As light they hear his footfall sounding,
Ceased each angry word of strife.
The lovely flowers she stands before—
And they are sisters evermore!

Her fair, young cheek, where lilies, roses,
In fast friendship ever bloom,
To the rival flowers disclose,
In beauty's garden both have room;
Each declares from envy free,
None so beautiful as she.

ANECDOTES.

Pa, has the world got a tail? asked an urchin of its father. "No, child," replied the old "un impatiently; "how could it have one when it is round?" "Well," persisted the heir, "why does the papers say 'so many the world,' if it ain't got a tail to wag about?" "Your ma wants you," replied the non-plussed daddy.

Mr. Curran cross examined a tailor. "Upon your oath, sir, where did this conversation happen?" "In the back parlor of my shop, my cutting room." "And what were you then about yourself?" "Walking about." "Aye, just taking a stroll in your cabbage garden."

The ghost of Joe Kelley appeared to his wife. "Molly, says he, 'I'm in purgatory at this present,' says he. 'And what sort of a place is it?' says she. 'Faith,' says he, 'it's a sort of half-way house between you and heaven,' says Joe, 'and I stand it mighty easy after leaving you,' says he.

In one of the courts recently in another state, an individual attired in a quakerish looking garb, was called to the witness stand. The Judge taking him for a member of the Society of Friends, thus addressed him: "Will you swear or affirm?" "Don't care a d—n which, sir!"

In a churchyard in the north of England is this epitaph—
"Here lies (alas!) and more's the pity,
All that remains of John Newcity."
To which is attached the following—
N. B.—The man's name was Newton, but it would not rhyme.

A Quaker, who was examined before a court, not using any other language than "thee," "thou," and "friend," was asked by the presiding judge, "Pray, Mr. —, do you know what we sit here for?" "Yes, verily, do I," said the Quaker—"three of you for two dollars each a day, and the fat one on the right, for one thousand dollars a year."

THE Perseverence and Energy, requisite to enable an invalid to OBTAIN THE MEANS OF cure, are pallied and destroyed by the myriad of those fallacious signals of hope displayed before his glowing eyes. Science has scarce done aught but ENCUMBER the medicinal art; and if we wish to seek simply and surely a cure of any complaint we must resort to NATIVE PRODUCTIONS, evidently designed by PROVIDENCE for our use and relief. We discountenance, utterly, all pretensions to
